According to national surveys, inhalant abuse is on the rise, and poses a tremendous threat to all those who engage in the practice. By the time a student reaches the 8th grade, one in five will have abused inhalants and more than 2 million kids aged 12-17 will have used some form of inhalant to get high.

A recent case that illustrates the grave dangers associated with inhalant abuse is that of Police Officer Jeff Williams of Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Williams repeatedly warned his children about the dangers of drug and alcohol abuse, and despite owning a retired police K-9 trained and certified in drug detection, he was uninformed on the issue and wasn't aware of the warning signs. His 14-year-old son Kyle had a bright future and was about as normal and healthy as any parent would want their son to be, until he died suddenly after deliberately inhaling a computer keyboard cleaner to get high. What Kyle didn't know is that inhalant abuse can be more than a cheap high, it can kill-whether the first time you try it, the second or the tenth.

"March 2nd was the one-year anniversary of my son Kyle's death," said Officer Williams. "I'm a cop-I knew what to watch for when it came to drugs and alcohol, but with this, I didn't recognize the signs, and that's the problem. Parents have to know what to look for-if you don't know, you can't stop it."

The death of Kyle and the similar deaths of many other children across the country are the reasons that the National Inhalant Prevention Coalition developed National Inhalants & Poisons Awareness Week (NIPAW). An annual community-level program that takes place in the third week in March, NIPAW is designed to increase understanding about the use and risks of inhalant abuse. Program partners have included sponsors from state government agencies and associations, medical groups, the Partnership for a Drug-Free America, police departments, DARE officers, the National Guard, PTO/PTA chapters, Poison Control Centers, local medical communities and the media.

This year, Jeff Williams is honoring his son's memory by helping to educate people about the dangers and warning signs associated with inhalant abuse. His goal is to help prevent other families from experiencing what he and his family have endured.

"Nothing I can do can bring Kyle back, but what I can do is help other families avoid suffering the same pain and loss that my family did. Parents need to understand that education is the key in helping prevent inhalant abuse in their household and communicating the dangers to their loved ones," concluded Officer Williams.

The NIPAW campaign can be conducted anywhere there is a need for inhalant awareness education. For more information, please visit www.inhalants.com.

Healthier Alternative To High Saturated Fat

Something as simple as switching oils can make a difference in how healthy a meal is and how it tastes. For instance, Mazola Pure(tm) Cooking Spray is made from 100 percent pure oil and is a healthier alternative to high-saturated-fat products such as butter or margarine. It's alcohol and silicone free and comes in canola oil, extra virgin olive oil and natural butter flavors. It's also cholesterol free and has zero grams trans fats per serving.

Loaded with calcium and protein, the "real thing" makes so many dishes more appealing, and mellow, nutty, smooth-melting Norwegian Jarlsberg-America's most popular specialty cheese-is particularly versatile, a family favorite. 2006 marks the 50th anniversary of Jarlsberg cheese-and the 125th of its source, Tine B.A. Norwegian Dairies, a farmers cooperative.

Bariatric Weight Loss Surgery Helps St. Rita President

Little Company of Mary's Bariatric Surgery Center recently hosted its Third Annual "Living Well Celebration" on March 15 at Chateau Bu-Sehe in Alsip. More than 80 former patients who received remembers his first "belly" at age nine, but now has slimmed down thanks to the Bariatric Surgery Center at Little Company of Mary Hospital and Health Care Centers and the advice of a close friend.

It was at a St. Rita football game in November 2006 that Fr. Tom was told by a friend that he was going to undergo bariatric weight loss surgery. Then in January 2006, Fr. Tom ran into the same friend at a Father's Club Meeting and was awed to see his "new" friend.

"I didn't even recognize him," Fr. Tom said.

Two weeks later, Fr. Tom had his first appointment with Gerald Cahill, M.D., a highly experienced surgeon who has performed more than 800 bariatric surgeries at Little Company of Mary. Bariatric surgery is a procedure that makes the stomach smaller, requiring less food for one to feel full. It was only after meeting Dr. Cahill that Fr. Tom felt that his life could change. "As a patient of Dr. Cahill, I changed my life," says Fr. Tom, who is now slimmer and trimmer.

"Our goal is to address one of the most serious health problems in the United States - obesity," says Dr. Cahill.

Fr. Tom said that the first time he saw his before and after pictures side by side, he was "absolutely shocked."

"I usually see one picture or the other. I can't believe how big I was," Fr. Tom said.

Fr. Tom said he is grateful that he was able to undergo bariatric surgery. "I was given an opportunity to make a choice and now I have a whole new way of looking at life," Fr. Tom said.

The Little Company of Mary Bariatric Surgery Center is dedicated to providing thorough consultation and follow-up support, as well as new and laparoscopic surgical solutions for the morbidly obese. Laparoscopic surgery is a minimally invasive procedure accomplished through small keyhole incisions with less potential for complications than traditional surgery. Patients report less pain and a quicker recovery time.

Severe obesity is a chronic disease that affects millions of Americans. Anyone who is 20 percent heavier than his/her ideal weight may be considered obese.

The American Society for Bariatric Surgery estimates that last year, there were 177,600 obesity surgeries, up from 20,500, a decade ago and 103,200 in 2003.

surgery at Little Company of Mary, along with their families and friends, attended the celebration. The night included a family style dinner, a presentation by Dr. Cahill and testimonials from bariatric weight loss surgery patients, including Fr. Thomas McCarthy (pictured), O.S.A., President and Principal of St. Rita of Caseia High School in Chicago.

Fr. Tom has struggled with weight his entire life. He

"We've had terrific success in safely helping people who have tried other supervised weight loss methods and failed," said Dr. Cahill.

In addition to Dr. Cahill, Fr. Tom also credits other bariatric surgery patients and Dr. Cahill's staff for their support. "Those good people were with me the whole way," Fr. Tom said.

Baby Boomers Checklist For Healthy Vision

In a year where an estimated 2.8 million baby boomers will celebrate their 60th birthday, age-related eye disease has become an important health issue.

The American Optometric Association (AOA) reminds Americans 60 and older that early detection through a comprehensive eye exam can prevent or slow vision loss due to cataracts and other age-related eye diseases, such as macular degeneration, glaucoma and diabetic retinopathy.

"Today's 60-year-olds are more health conscious than 60-year-olds 20 years ago," said Richard C. Edlow, O.D., AOA information and data committee chairman. "Being better informed about health risks, improved technology and treatment options has not necessarily translated into including regular eye examinations into their health care routine."

The National Eye Institute estimates that over the next 30 years, the number of blind or visually impaired Americans will double. Some eye diseases have no symptoms in the early stages, when it is most critical to help slow the progression of vision loss.

The AOA developed the Baby Boomer's Checklist for Healthy Vision. Are you:

- Someone with diabetes, hypertension or any other systemic or chronic disease?
- At risk for certain systemic or eye diseases because of family history or other factors?
- Having more difficulty reading smaller type, such as books and newspapers?
- Experiencing frequent head-aches after working on a computer?
- Doing a great deal of reading and other close work?
- Rubbing your eyes frequently or having tired or burning eyes?
- Losing track of a person or objects in your peripheral (side) vision?
- Avoiding close work?
- Having difficulty driving at night?
- Experiencing frequent near misses, accidents or difficulty parking?
- Handling or using chemicals, power tools or lawn and garden equipment?
- Playing eye-hazardous sports such as racquetball, softball or tennis?
- Experiencing difficulty with eye-hand-body coordination?
- Playing sports and having trouble judging distances between you, the ball or other objects?

If you answered yes to any question on the checklist, be sure to make an appointment for a comprehensive eye examination. Even if you didn't answer yes, don't forget that symptoms of vision problems aren't always apparent.

Catch And Treat Breast Cancer In Early Stages

There's encouraging news for women. Not only is it becoming easier to catch and treat breast cancer in its earliest stages, but new technologies are making the process of diagnosing the disease more comfortable for the patient and more accurate as well.

The National Cancer Institute recommends mammography screenings every one to two years for women over 40 and annually for women over 50. In addition, women at high risk of developing breast cancer (for example, women with a strong family history of breast cancer or who test positive for the BRCA breast cancer gene) are encouraged to begin annual mammography screenings even earlier—sometimes as young as 25—and should consult a physician.

Benefits and risks

- Early detection of small breast cancers greatly improves a woman's chances for successful treatment. If breast cancer is caught and treated while it is still confined to the breast ducts, the cure rate is close to 100 percent.
- Clinical studies in the U.S., Sweden and the Netherlands have suggested that deaths from breast cancer could be cut by between 36 and 44 percent if screening mammography were performed annually on all women in their 40s.

Digital mammography

One of the most recent advances in breast cancer screening is digital mammography. Digital mammography uses essentially the same system as conventional mammography, but is equipped with a digital receptor and a computer instead of a film cassette.

Digital mammography systems such as Siemens Medical Solutions' Mammomat(r) NovationDR enable faster and more accurate viewing of the dense tissue of the breast. Images are acquired digitally and displayed immediately on the system monitor.

According to a recent study published in the New England Journal of Medicine, digital mammography was significantly better than conventional mammography at screening women in any of the following categories:

- under age 50;
- any age with very dense or extremely dense breasts; or
- pre- or perimenopausal women of any age.

To learn more about breast cancer detection and digital mammography, you can visit at www.imaginis.com.

Test Measures New Heart Disease And Stroke Risk Factor

Doctors have an important new test in the battle against heart attack and stroke. The PLAC test is a simple blood test that measures Lp-PLA2, a marker of inflammation in blood vessels that can lead to these cardiovascular diseases. The clinically proven test helps doctors identify high-risk patients and prescribe preventive therapies that include diet, exercise and medication.

America's Top Killers

Heart disease and stroke are two of the leading killers in America. Heart disease is the single-leading cause of death in the United States, killing almost 500,000 Americans each year. Stroke is the third-leading cause of death.

About 700,000 Americans have a stroke each year.

Identifying at-risk patients earlier is the best way to prevent a cardiovascular event. Unfortunately for many patients, however, their first indication of heart disease or stroke also may be their last. An estimated 50 percent of men and 64 percent of women who die suddenly of heart disease have no previous warning signs, such as elevated cholesterol. Furthermore, there previously was no simple blood test for stroke risk. As a result, researchers have looked for other factors that might reveal the risk for future heart attack or stroke.

Aid in Predicting Risk

This research has included Lp-PLA2 (lipoprotein-associated phospholipase A2), an enzyme associated with the formation of plaque, or fatty deposits in the artery wall. Lp-PLA2 is carried to artery walls by low-density lipoprotein, where the enzyme can activate an inflammatory response, making the plaque prone to rupture. Scientists now understand that clot formation caused by plaque rupture is the leading cause of heart attack and stroke. Elevated Lp-PLA2 doubles a person's risk of heart attack or stroke, independent of other risk factors.

The good news for doctors and patients is that an inexpensive blood test now is available to measure Lp-PLA2. The PLAC test from diaDexus has been cleared by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration as an aid in predicting risk for heart disease, and is the first test approved by the FDA to identify stroke risk. Once a person is identified as being at high risk, there are a number of lifestyle and therapeutic interventions a doctor can prescribe to reduce that risk. To learn more, visit www.plactest.com.

This Is Your Brain On Nicotine: How Your Brain Reacts To Cigarettes

Public smoking bans. Smoke-free workplaces. Cigarette taxes and price hikes. Warnings about cancer and heart disease.

There are a lot of reasons to quit smoking. Approximately 70 percent of smokers want to quit. And, the average smoker has tried to quit six to nine times. Still, there are 45 million smokers in the U.S. There are 388 billion cigarettes smoked each year. What is it about cigarettes that keeps smokers hooked?

Health experts say that nicotine, one of the main chemicals in cigarettes and tobacco, causes addiction. It affects the brain in a unique way. It makes people want to smoke.

"When you smoke, nicotine binds to certain parts of your brain. This causes a good feeling," says Dr. Robert Anthenelli, associate professor of Psychiatry at the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine. "When you stop smoking, your brain no longer gets nicotine. Then you have craving and withdrawal symptoms."

Many smokers who try to quit find the craving for cigarettes too hard to control. The withdrawal symptoms are hard to live with. Smokers may feel moody or have trouble sleeping. They seek relief by going back to cigarettes.

"Craving or withdrawal symptoms make you want cigarettes. You smoke, you feel better. The cycle of nicotine addiction starts again," says Dr. Anthenelli. "We need to treat smoking as a medical condition. It's important to use medication and lifestyle changes to stay on track."

If you want to quit smoking, talk to your doctor about the best way for you to quit.

Children's Reading Club

First Lady Patricia Blagojevich recently announced April selections for her Children's Reading Club - It's Spring! by Pamela Chanko and Samantha Berger, and Philippa Pearce's Tom's Midnight Garden. Mrs. Blagojevich began the Children's Reading Club to encourage parents to read with their children. It is a recommended reading list made up of books the First Lady and her daughters enjoy at home. The Children's Reading Club applies to all children, but specifically targets children between the ages of seven and twelve.

The April selection of Children's Reading Club, It's Spring! by Samantha Berger and Pamela Chanko provides a breezy rhyming text and charming watercolor illustrations. In a simple and yet catchy way, readers are carried from page to page in this beautifully illustrated little book, as one by one the animals spread the word of a new season.

Philippa Pearce is the author of many books, several of which are considered classics both in the United States and in her native England. Her award winning title

Tom's Midnight Garden, which received the Carnegie Medal and an ALA Notable Book, has been adapted for radio, television, and was released as a full-length movie. In Tom's Midnight Garden, a boy named Tom whose brother Peter has measles is being shipped off to stay with Aunt Gwen and Uncle Alan in their boring old apartment. Tom just counts the days till he can return home to Peter. Then one night the landlady's antique grandfather clock strikes thirteen times leading Tom to a wonderful, magical discovery and marking the beginning of a secret that's almost too amazing to be true.

The First Lady launched the Children's Reading Club literacy initiative in March of 2005, and has selected books such as Charlotte's Web, Harriet the Spy, The Growing-up Feet, Henry Huggins and Number the Stars for the recommended list. Each month's book selection is featured on the First Lady's web site, <http://www.illinois.gov/firstlady>. The First Lady hopes the recommended list will enable parents to find books the whole family can enjoy.

The Oak Lawn Village Board Approves Zoning For

Ronald McDonald House

The Oak Lawn Village Board approved the necessary zoning requirements for the construction of the new Ronald McDonald House that will be built across from Hopc Children's Hospital on the northeast corner of 93rd and Kostner. The facility is designed to house at least sixteen families whose children are confined to the hospital at little or no cost to the families.

Trustee Marjorie Joy stated that this is one of the best alliances that happened in the village. The land is owned by School District 229 who donated the land to the charity. Business owners and residents as well as village officials supported the project from the beginning, she said. Ronald McDonald House CEO Doug Porter thanked the village for its approval of the project.

The board passed a special use zoning for the property to allow construction of the facility in a Public Lands Zoning District as well as a height variation on the building, which is needed because the facility cannot have a basement due to high water table.

Porter reported that the project is set to begin June 1st with a groundbreaking ceremony scheduled on that day. The project is expected to be completed next spring.

In other business, the board passed an ordinance that allows Automated Traffic Law Enforcement systems at various street intersections in the village. This will allow the village to use cameras at the intersections to take pictures of traffic violation in the intersection. The village entered into an agreement with Redflex Traffic Systems, Inc. for the design and implementation of the systems and for services related to the systems.

It was stated that the fines that would be collected from the system would benefit the village, as the fines would be collected in the village's traffic court. A fine for a violation caught on film is $100, which increases to $200 if unpaid after 14 days.

The Board welcomed a new firefighter to the Fire Department. Firefighter Walter O'Neil was sworn-in at the meeting. It was stated that the new firefighter, a third generation firefighter, is the son of Walter O'Neil who served on the force for 31 year. His grandfather, also Walter O'Neil, was a firefighter for the Chicago Fire Department.

The board was informed by Trustee Robert Streit that work on the Stony Creek and Melvina Ditch is proceeding. The Metropolitan Water Reclamation District has cleaned up Stony Creek, but he had no details on what was done or how much was taken out of the creek. He also said that the MWRD is finalizing an application with the village of Chicago Ridge to reroute the Melvina Ditch.

The board also heard an appeal from Park Lawn School to community businesses to employ the students of the school. It was stated that the people at the school are skilled and work well. They would be a benefit to anyone who hired them. When the students are hired, both the company and the student have the support of Park Lawn when it is needed.

Mayor Heilmann reported that during the Christmas season students were hired by Nordstrom and constructed the boxes that were used in the store. The representatives of Park Lawn asked for the support of the business community to try to provide the necessary jobs.

Heart Of The School

The 2006-2007 school year marks Bro. Richard Grenier's 38th year at Marist, where he's worn many hats during his career. Since 1969 Grenier has served the school in a multitude of roles including teacher, department chair, dean of discipline, coach and athletic director. In the classroom he taught economics, history, religion, finance and accounting. After school he led cross country runners, track jumpers and football and basketball players to individual and team championships. In 2001, Bro. Rich was inducted into the school's athletic Hall of Fame for lifetime achievement.

Today, Bro. Rich continues to serve Marist in a variety of ways. He moderates the Mothers' and Fathers' Clubs, substitute teaches and covers a variety of other supervisions in the school. He's at nearly every game and school event and knows the names of countless students. He is often found in the hallway enforcing the school dress code and congratulating students on their accomplishments.

On being named Heart of the School, Bro. Rich says, "Although I may have been designated the heart of the school, it is our dedicated staff which constitutes the real life-blood of our Marist High School community."

Outside Marist, Bro. Rich pursues several passions, including his support of his alma mater, the University of Notre Dame, and playing congas any chance he has. He's especially devoted to his vocation and the Marist Brothers.

The "Heart of the School" award is given to a faculty member that emulates everything that Marist is about—its mission and values. Faculty members nominate their peers and then vote on the top two or three nominees each year.

America, Unite In Prayer

America is encouraged to pray for the families and friends of the 32 who were killed in a senseless slaying in Virginia Tech this week. Is it a question of gun control - or humanity out of control?

On April 20, 1999, two students opened fire on their high school colleagues in Columbine, Colorado. It was not a matter of gun control, but rather heart control that led the two young men to massacre, and ultimately to their own deaths that terrible day. No one could have predicted the scenario that resulted at Columbine just as no one could have imagined the events at Virginia Tech on April 16th.

The shooting that took place April 17th at Virginia Tech was another senseless killing. Families, friends and co-workers are grieving and asking for answers. The answers do not lie in tighter control of guns no more than restricting knives that can be used to prepare and eat food, or perform surgery are the reason they are used to commit crimes. It's a matter of heart control.

Although it is not politically correct to say our nation needs God - it is true. We have negated the importance of a life led by the forgiveness and change produced by repentance and prayer to avoid offending those who do not share our views. People are hurting not from their freedom to make decisions, but from a nation growing more intolerant of the faith of our fathers and the recognition that we need the Savior.

Millions will answer the call to prayer on May 3rd in observance of the 56th annual National Day of Prayer (NDP). Organized events will be held in thousands of public venues where intercession will be made for our nation, government leaders, media, schools, churches and families.

Taxpayer Groups Urge President To Veto War Spending Bill

Six leading fiscally conservative groups recently urged Congress to deliver a pork-free emergency supplemental appropriations bill to President George W. Bush. The U.S. Readiness, Veterans' Health and Iraq Accountability Act of 2007 currently costs $123 billion, or $20 billion more than the $103 billion requested by the President for the War on Terror and hurricane relief. House and Senate negotiators plan to deliver a bill to the President by the end of this week.

Americans for Prosperity, American Shareholders Assn., Americans for Tax Reform, the Council for Citizens Against Government Waste, Freedom Works, and the National Taxpayers Union issued the following joint statement:

Taxpayers should be aware that the House and Senate have approved an emergency supplemental spending bill with more than $20 billion in wasteful spending. A bill to fund the War on Terror should be just that and nothing else. The extraneous expenditures add to the national debt and further corrupt the budget process. If Congress does not remove the pork, President Bush should veto the bill. There is nothing more routine than the presidential conventions that occur every four years, yet the U.S. Senate decided that it must provide $100 million in "emergency" funding for security needs at the Democratic and Republican conventions in 2008. The House included $25 million for spinach growers in California and $74 million for peanut storage in Georgia.

Americans are all too familiar with egregious waste in military spending, and expenditures for the War on Terror are of such an ongoing nature that they would be better provided through the regular appropriations process than emergency requests. Nonetheless, passing this particular supplemental in its current state will set an ominous precedent for the 110th Congress. The new congressional leadership shamelessly used earmarks in return for votes on the supplemental. That will help ensure that pork-barrel politics reign supreme in every major legislative matter for the next two years. Members of Congress must be held accountable for voting on a bill's purpose and not its extraneous provisions.

For these reasons, House and Senate conferees should strip the pork out of the bill and send the President legislation that he can sign or veto based solely on the issue of funding the troops.

Replanting The Prairie State Initiative

In honor of Earth Day, Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich on April 22nd announced a new Replanting the Prairie State initiative to further reduce greenhouse gas emissions in the state. The effort, which will plant more than two million trees throughout the state in the next year and engage young people in conservation efforts, builds on steps the governor has already taken to address the threat of global climate change.

Under the plan, the Illinois Dept. of Natural Resources (IDNR) will plant the trees mainly on state-owned lands and launch a Youth Conservation Corps, a summer work program focused on enlisting young people in stewardship projects to protect and enhance natural areas. In addition, the Illinois Dept. of Transportation (IDOT) will provide grants to assist local communities in planting native trees and grasses along roadways. By trapping carbon dioxide in plants and soil, all three components of the governor's Replanting the Prairie State initiative will help meet his goal to reduce greenhouse gas emissions to 1990 levels by the year 2020.

Planting two million additional native trees annually, such as burr oak, sugar maple, American elm and cottonwood, will absorb approximately 200,000 metric tons of carbon dioxide from the atmosphere annually by 2020, equivalent to taking 36,000 cars off the road. The program administered by the IDNR Nursery Reforestation Program will help restore and preserve forests and grasslands while also limiting further incursion of non-native trees and other plants that threaten indigenous species.

Additional native trees and prairie grasses will be planted statewide through IDOT's new Illinois Green Streets initiative. Beginning in summer 2007, IDOT will direct $5 million in federal transportation funds to provide matching grants to municipalities and local governments for planting trees and prairie grasses along highways and major streets to beautify their communities and further reduce greenhouse gasses. IDOT will administer funds through the Illinois Transportation Enhancement Program.

To help further protect and enhance Illinois' natural areas, IDNR will create the Illinois Conservation Training Corps, a 12-week summer employment program for up to 120 young people ages 16-19. Corp members will work alongside IDNR professional staff to control plant trees, exotic species, restore prairies, collect seeds and assist IDNR staff on projects such as species inventory and surveys, vegetation mapping and research. These activities will help preserve and improve natural areas, including habitats for endangered and threatened species, high quality natural communities, wetlands and other properties exhibiting unique or unusual natural heritage qualities. In addition to the environmental and climate change benefits, the Conservation Corps will help prepare students for future work in conservation and natural resource related fields.

The state is also expanding tree planting by the private sector through the Illinois Conservation and Climate Initiative (ICCI), a partnership developed by the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency. Through the ICCI, companies pay farmers and other landowners to plant trees and grasses in order to offset greenhouse gas emissions these companies emit. Illinois is the only state government to offer farmers and other landowners the opportunity to earn and sell greenhouse gas emissions credits by adopting conservation practices.

The first annual payments, totaling nearly $300,000, will be made this year to 190 Illinois landowners who have planted more than 2 million trees on 8,500 acres. The payments help cover the costs for planting and maintaining trees and grasses that also benefit the environment by creating wildlife habitat and limiting soil and nutrient run-off to streams and lakes. Carbon credits are sold on the Chicago Climate Exchange (CCX), North America's only, and the world's first, GHG emissions registry, reduction and trading system. As part of the State's global warming initiative, Illinois joined New Mexico to become only the second state in the nation to join the CCX. As a CCX member, the state makes a voluntary, but legally binding, commitment to reduce GHG emissions from state buildings and vehicle fleets.

Mayor's Office Of Workforce Development Takes Aim At Wage Gap

In America, women earn an average of 81 cents for every dollar men make, even though they account for nearly 50 percent of the America's labor force, according to the U.S. Department of Labor. The Chicago Mayor's Office of Development (MOWD), which responds to local workforce needs in creating training and career opportunities for Chicago residents through the citywide service network of Mayor Daley's WorkNet Chicago, is striving to change that statistic on the local level.

Women comprised 58 percent of MOWD's adult customers trained and placed with Workforce Investment Act (WIA) funds, and for them the wage gap was significantly less severe than the national average. Women exiting WIA programs began earning approximately 96 cents for every dollar earned by their male peers. The average annual pay increase for the women was $4,252.

"These gains represent the City of Chicago's commitment to career advancement for women," said Mayor Richard M. Daley. "The collective increase in wages for this group represents a potential contribution to the local economy in the coming year of almost $4 million. When the women of Chicago do better economically, we all stand to benefit."

"Much of the gain in income relates to WorkNet

Chicago's job placement successes and WIA-funded training that qualified the women for better-paying jobs, including positions in formerly male-dominated fields," said MOWD Commissioner David Hanson. "We're seeing women, after acquiring new skills, start careers as commercial truck drivers. Others are being hired by security firms that train them."

"Commercial drivers can earn from $30,000 to $100,000 a year. With MOWD's push to fill more highly skilled positions with high-road, high-wage manufacturers, more women will eventually be trained and employed as Computer Numeric Control operators, a key position in skilled manufacturing operations that earn in the $50,000s," Hanson said.

Through Mayor Daley's WorkNet Chicago, the Mayor's Office of Workforce Development (MOWD) meets the evolving workforce needs of Chicago businesses and creates training and career opportunities for Chicago residents by building strategic public and private partnerships. For more information on MOWD, or for a referral to the WorkNet Chicago location nearest to you, call (312) 746-7777 (TTY: 312-746-7769) or visit www.cityofchicago.org/mowd.

Bill To Establish Amniotic And Placental Stem Cell Bank

Congressman Dan Lipinski introduced the National Amniotic and Placental Stem Cell Bank Act to help advance the use of stem cells in treating serious medical conditions. Studies have recently demonstrated that the stem cells derived from amniotic fluid and placenta can transform into many of the specialized cell types found in the human body, thus providing great potential for lifesaving treatments.

The legislation would authorize and fund the establishment of a national bank to collect and store samples of stem cells that are routinely removed from the amniotic fluid and placenta that surround a baby in the womb. The bank would provide sufficient genetic diversity of cells so that all Americans could enjoy any treatments that are developed with the research.

"I am pleased that we are working to help advance the scientific possibilities these cells provide," Lipinski said. "Scientists in this field have noted that a national amniotic and placental stem cell bank is critical in facilitating expanded research. By providing this needed resource, they can focus their efforts in the hope of finding cures for diseases such as juvenile diabetes - a disease that I have lived with every day for more than 17 years."

New scientific research has demonstrated the significant medical potential of amniotic stem cells. These cells can grow into brain, muscle, and other tissues that can be used to treat a variety of serious diseases, and they can be easily collected without risk to the donor or embryo. However, research has been slowed by the lack of national coordination. Scientists must use their own time, money, and resources to collect and store amniotic stem cells. This diverts valuable resources from finding treatments and cures.

"By setting up a national bank, we can have a readily available source of stem cells that have the pluripotent properties of embryonic cells but don't raise ethical concerns," said Lipinski.

Lipinski's legislation would set up a National Amniotic and Placental Stem Cell Bank which will collect and store 100,000 amniotic stem cell samples to be made available for research and treatment purposes. These samples would provide the genetic diversity necessary to cover the needs of the U.S. population while simultaneously providing for the research needs of the scientific community.

"The establishment of an amniotic fluid and placenta stem cell bank would further research into these areas," said Dr. Anthony Atala. "It would add to our armamentarium of stem cell therapies that could benefit patients in the future."

Dr. Atala is the Director of the Wake Forest University Institute for Regenerative Medicine. He is also a Professor and the Chair of the Department of Urology at Wake Forest University School of Medicine. Dr. Atala's research published in Nature Biotechnology on Jan. 7th underscored the significant medical potential of amniotic fluid and placenta stem cells.

Orr Notes Speedy Results, Fewer Problems In Consolidated Elections

Last Tuesday night's consolidated elections in suburban Cook County went well, according to Cook County Clerk David Orr, in his assessment of the greatest test of the county's new election equipment test so far.

"The April 17th elections are incredibly complex," said Orr. "With 739 races and 2400 candidates on the ballot, ranging from fire district trustees to suburban school board seats, the combined touch screen and optical scan system satisfied voters and candidates alike."

Transmission of unofficial results was speedier on Tuesday than in November. "Clearly, our hard work paid off," said Orr, referring to a decline in complaints and quick transmission. Over 81% of precincts had fully reported (both touch screen and optical scan) and 93% of all results had been transmitted by 9 p.m. More than 93% of precincts had fully reported and 98% of all results had been transmitted by 10 p.m. Over 99% of all results were in by early Wednesday morning.

Last Tuesday's election went off with relatively few hitches. A number of precincts had judge shortages. County clerk staff also logged calls about intermittent equipment questions, but most were resolved over the phone and some were as simple as directing a judge to the location of a power cord.

In their fourth deployment since March 2006 the Sequoia optical scanners and electronic touch screens performed more efficiently, Orr noted. Alterations to the equipment and software based on an expert panel's recommendations, coupled with expanded judge training, made for fewer breakdowns during the day and more efficient transmissions at night.

After the November 2006 election, when some results were delayed, Orr appointed a review panel chaired by former Judge Abner Mikva. Their recommendations for hardware, software and procedural changes were implemented over the last several months.

Cook County's voting equipment array has three components: a touch screen, an optical scanner for tabulating paper ballots, and a card activator that totals and transmits results after the polls close. Plus, the touch screens have a voter verifiable paper audit trail, so voters can visually confirm their selections, and the election can be audited if questions arise.

While transmission went faster last Tuesday, Orr cautions the public that elections are not certified until May 8th. New legislation sponsored by his office allows clerks to add late-arriving absentee ballots and provisional ballots to vote totals and these may determine the outcome of a few close races. Since turnout for Tuesday's contests were low - roughly 17% overall - a handful of votes can make the difference.

For election results and more information, visit www.voterinfonet.com. Other information about the clerk's office and services can be found at www.cookclerk.com.

Durbin Lobbies For Awarding FutureGen To Illinois

U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL) met recently with Energy Secretary Samuel Bodman urging him to locate the FutureGen project in Illinois, pointing to cost savings and geographical advantages of an Illinois site.

"FutureGen is the number one federal energy project for downstate Illinois, an area that has the coal and the commitment needed to make it a reality," said Durbin. "Finding cleaner, cost-effective ways to generate power using coal will help ensure our country's energy security and address global warming. Illinois has unmatched geographic advantages that, combined with efforts to remove barriers at the state level, make it a desirable location for the project."

The FutureGen Initiative, initially announced by President Bush in February 2003, is a $1 billion government-industry project, which will produce the first emissions-free coal generation plant of its kind. The Dept. of Energy has selected two Illinois sites - Mattoon and Tuscola - and two Texas sites - Odessa and Heart of Brazos - as finalists. A draft environmental impact statement is expected in April and a final decision is expected in September 2007.

In their meeting, Durbin discussed a recent study that noted the annual cost to transport coal to the Texas locations could be between $8.2 and $11 million more than transporting coal to Illinois. Durbin stressed that this could put Illinois at an advantage when it comes to annual costs. The FutureGen Alliance has determined that the base operating costs will be approximately $56.9 million each year.

In arguing the case for Illinois, Durbin also stressed the geographical advantages of the state. Secretary Bodman assured Durbin that the selection of the FutureGen site location would be based firmly in science. Illinois has almost one-eighth of the coal reserves in the United States and one-quarter of the nation's bituminous coal reserves. The Illinois coal industry produces approximately 35 million tons of coal and generates more than $1 billion in gross revenue. Currently, recoverable coal reserves in the state of Illinois amount to more than 30 billion tons. Durbin noted that Illinois geology is also well suited for the carbon capture and storage technology that the FutureGen project will help develop.

Now that the April 17th, Consolidated Election Results are history, we have a variety of municipalities to recap. Before we do however, we want to thank those dedicated voters who made the time and effort to express their interest in electing candidates to represent them for the next two or four years. Regrettably, Cook County Clerk David Orr has reported that last Tuesday's turnout was quite low...approximately 17 percent overall participation by voters countywide. Apparently, Cook County voters are either quite satisfied with their governance, or they are quite disinterested in the entire process. Granted a number of communities had uncontested races, but overall the voter turnout was disappointing to say the least.

In Burbank, Crestwood, Evergreen Park, Merrionette Park, Midlothian, Orland Hills, Palos Heights, Palos Park, and Tinley Park each candidate on the ballot was uncontested and elected.

In Alsip, three trustees were elected. They are Daniel Godfrey Jr., Sheila McGreal and Kevin Michaels. Bridgeview Village President Steven Landek and his running mates were likewise elected. In Chicago Ridge Juanita Babcock and Daniel Badon will welcome longtime Worth Township Trustee Michael Davies to the Trustee Board. Hickory Hills Mayor Michael Howley and Clerk Joann Jackson were uncontested as were Aldermen Michael McHugh (Ward 1), Deborah Ferrero (Ward 2), John Szeszycki (Ward 2), Tom McAvoy (Ward 3), and Scott Zimmerman (Ward 4). Dan Schramm was elected Treasurer. In Hometown Donna Grachowski, Spencer Touchie, Kevin Casey and Michael Walker were elected Aldermen. In Justice Krzysztof Wasowicz was elected President, while Jeffrey Kranig, Mary McGee, and Michael Murray were elected Trustees. In Oak Forest, Anthony Chinino (1st) and Nancy Hullinger (5th) were uncontested Trustees. Diane Wolf (3rd), Charles Toland (4th) and Paul Wechet (7th) were also elected. In Oak Lawn, incumbent Trustees Robert Streit (3rd) and Jerry Hurekes (1st) return to the Village Board along with newcomer Carol Quinlan (5th). Orland Park trustee winners were Bernard Murphy, Patricia Gira and Edward Schussler. In Palos Hills Aldermen Martin Kleefisch (1st), Pauline Stratton (2nd), William Hanson (3rd) and Frank Williams (5th) were joined by Mark Braehman (2nd) and Joseph Marrotta III (4th). Posen saw Charles Spindler, Jeffrey Casillas and Richard Klappowski elected Trustees. Robbins voters selected Tyrone Ward, Shantiel Simon and Tyrone Haymore as Trustees. And in Worth, Randy Keller, Mary Rhein and Pete Kats captured the Trustee seats.

Secretary of State Jesse White is appealing to all Illinois residents to join the state's new organ and tissue donor registry. His message...almost everyone can sign up to give the gift of life. White made his proposal to coincide with organizations across the state and country which recognize April as National Donate Life Month. A new ad campaign, which includes television and radio ads, feature nine Illinoisans who are recipients or from donor families, will be aired across the state encouraging people to help by becoming an organ/tissue donor. The television spot features the song, Join Together by the WHO. According to White almost two million people have signed up for the new registry. Approximately 4,500 people in Illinois are on waiting lists for an organ transplant. To join the new registry, register by going to www.LifeGoesOn.com, visit any Illinois state driver's license facility, or call the Illinois Secretary of State Organ/Tissue Donor Program at 1-800-210-2106.

Phony Oprah Show Prize Winnings

Illinois Attorney General Lisa Madigan is warning consumers about unsolicited mail they may receive announcing that they are among a group of third category winners of a recent sweepstakes sponsored by "The Oprah Show" and Walgreen's.

According to Harpo Productions, Inc., which produces The Oprah Winfrey Show, several legitimate sweepstakes were held in the summer of 2006 through Oprah.com but all winners were previously notified. Harpo Productions, Inc. has not sent any letters in 2007 announcing additional winners for this sweepstakes. The sweepstakes letters being mailed to consumers have a check enclosed that is made payable to the letter recipient. The checks look real but are actually counterfeit. Consumers should disregard these letters and should not attempt to cash the checks.

The letters and checks are props in an especially devastating form of consumer fraud - conning check recipients into believing the checks are real, convincing recipients to deposit the checks into their banks, and even persuading the recipients to wire their own money to the con artists.

Madigan said that Harpo Productions, Inc. has recently become aware of the check cashing scam through phone calls and e-mails from consumers who have received these letters. In this case, letter recipients are asked to deposit the enclosed third party checks which total $2,850. The checks appear to be authentic and even clear the bank. The letter states that the check covers a clearance fee that will allow them to collect a lump sum award of $81,561. Recipients are asked to contact a telephone number and directed to wire $2,600 via Western Union to a third party. The third party is, in fact, part of the scam and the consumer will never receive a sweepstakes prize.

"With the large number of Oprah's fans worldwide, we are concerned that their excitement at the opportunity of receiving a financial prize from Oprah may result in fans responding to this unauthorized offer," Madigan said. "Consumers should be alarmed whenever they receive a request to send money to anyone they do not know."

In check cashing scams, victims receive a realistic-looking phony check and do not discover it is fake until after depositing it and wiring money back to the thief. As a result, victims can be left legally liable to their banks for thousands of dollars. The scammers use high quality printers and watermarks. These counterfeit checks are printed with the names and addresses of legitimate financial institutions. Even if the bank account and routing numbers listed on a counterfeit check are real, the check still may be fake.

If the consumers do as instructed, they can be liable to the bank for all of the money they wired in addition to any of the proceeds they have already spent.

Madigan said that many fake check scam victims mistakenly believe that a check must be good if their bank accepts the check for deposit and makes the funds available to them. Banks are required by federal law to make funds from a check available to consumers within a relatively short period of time. However, Madigan noted, "making the funds available to you is not the same as confirming that the check is authentic. It takes days, even a week or more, for a bank to determine that a check is a forgery."

Madigan said Illinois consumers who have sent money can contact her office's Consumer Fraud Hotline at 1-800-386-5438 (TTY: 1-800-964-3013). The Spanish-language Hotline number is 1-866-310-8398. Consumers outside of Illinois can file a consumer complaint by downloading the complaint form at www.illinoisattorneygeneral.gov/consumers/concomp.pdf. In addition, Madigan said out-of-state consumers should report the occurrence to local authorities, their state Attorney General's Office and monitor their financial accounts for any suspicious activity.

Announce State Fair Grandstand Lineup

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently announced Illinois native and country music superstar Gretchen Wilson, four-time Country Music Assn. Female Vocalist of the Year Martina McBride, and rock newcomer Chris Daughtry will perform during the 2007 Illinois State Fair. The star-studded Grandstand lineup also features Grammy Award-winning band Sugarland and a teen-pop show featuring Corbin Bleu, co-star of the hit Disney Channel Original Movie "High School Musical," and Drake Bell of Nickelodeon's "Drake & Josh."

Wilson, who was born and raised in Pocahontas, Ill., a small town in rural Bond County, will perform on opening day of the Fair on Friday, Aug. 10th. Her meteoric rise to country music super-stardom began in 2004 when the first of her two chart-topping albums, "Here for the Party," was released. The album sold two million copies in just nine weeks, the fastest double platinum certification ever for a debut country artist, and produced her first number one hit, "Redneck Woman," a song that billboard.com voted "Anthem of the Summer of 2004." Her third album, "One of the Boys," will be in stores on May 15th. Blaine Larsen will open the show.

The double bill of Corbin Bleu and Drake Bell will take the stage on Saturday, Aug. 11th to be followed on Sunday, Aug. 12th by Daughtry, an acclaimed rock band fronted by its lead singer and namesake Chris Daughtry. The group's self-titled debut album spent nine weeks atop

History Of Musical Theatre

ArtCraft Theatre Projects is preparing for its upcoming concert, MUSICAL STAGES: From Classical To Cameiot, to be presented the beautiful Sanctuary at historic Bethany Union Community Church, in Beverly. The concert takes place Saturday, April 28, at 7:30 p.m.

"Musical Stages" is a concert of highlights from opera, operetta and Broadway through the years and is a joint effort between two musical groups. . the Bethany Union Singers, under the leadership of Henry Hunt, and the Evergreen Park Community High School Concert Choir, under the direction of Melanie Michaiak.

This is not the first time the two groups have come together for ArtCraft; last year, they presented "A Night In the Renaissance," a concert of era solos and ensembles. And the high school's jazz ensemble, led by Ken Kazin, was featured in February's Old Time Radio Band Concert for the company.

ArtCraft producer Glenn Pniewski is happy with the ongoing relationship with the Evergreen Park High School music programs. "It is wonderful to work with Melanie Michaiak and Ken Kazin," Pniewski said. "They are good people, they are great with the kids in their respective programs. . .and we are all committed to providing a stage for these talented students, so that they can continue to refine their excellent performance skills."

Musical Stages closes out the 2006-2007 performance season for ArtCraft, though their 2007-2008 season will be announced at this concert.

Advance reservations for the concert are $12. These specially priced tickets ($3 off the door price of $15) can be obtained by calling the ArtCraft Theatre Box office at (708) 841-7396. Bethany Union Community Church is located at 1750 West 103rd Street.

Schedule For Many Of Illinois' Historic Sites During Tourist Season

On behalf of Governor Rod R. Blagojevich, Illinois Historic Preservation Agency Director Robert Coomer stood at the entrance to the log village where Abraham Lincoln lived for six years and announced that many of the state's historic sites will be open seven days a week. This successful move began last year and is included in the Governor's proposed Fiscal Year 2008 budget. Expanding site operations during the busy tourism season attracts more visitors to Illinois and generates additional dollars for many communities.

The following state-operated historic sites operated by the IHPA have resumed daily operations through Labor Day, Sept. 3rd: Apple River Fort, Elizabeth; Black Hawk, Rock Island; Cahokia Mounds, Collinsville; Lewis and Clark, Hartford; Lincoln Log Cabin near Charleston; Lincoln-Herndon Law Offices, Springfield; Old State Capitol, Springfield; and Lincoln's New Salem, Petersburg.

Lincoln Tomb State Historic Site and the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Museum, both in Springfield, have always been open seven days per week and will retain that schedule.

Historic sites that will resume daily operations from May 29th through Sept. 3rd include: Bishop Hill; Bryant Cottage, Bement; Cahokia Courthouse, Cahokia; Carl Sandburg, Galesburg; Stephen A. Douglas Tomb, Chicago; Fort de Chartres, Prairie du Rocher; Fort Kaskaskia, Ellis Grove; Pierre Menard Home, Ellis Grove; Jubilee College, Brimfield; Vandalia Statehouse, Vandalia; and the Ulysses S. Grant Home, Galena.

■ANTIQUE ARMS SHOW: Interested in seeing more than 2000 collectible and sporting guns for sale, all in one place? That's what you can expect at this spring's Midwest Antique Arms Show at the DuPage Expo Center across the road from the Pheasant Run Resort at 4050 East Main Street, St. Charles, Illinois.

The show is open to the public on Saturday, May 5th from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, May 6th from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Admission is $10 per day. More than 100 dealers are expected to make this the largest quality firearms show, anywhere.

■ILLINOIS MUSKIE STOCKING: According to Ray Thompson, Chairman of the Illini Muskies Alliance, the Illinois muskie stocking program was beset with a number of feed or predator-related setbacks in 2006. Luckily, excess fry were stocked in netted rearing ponds. These fish supplement the traditionally in-house intensively reared (pellet-fed) fish, which finished rearing in netted ponds along with excess fish, which were received from Iowa.

Donations from the Mississippi Valley chapter of Muskies, Inc., added to the stocking total. Because of the excess fish provided by the state of Iowa, enough fingerlings were available to contribute to the Green Gene study, stock all lakes where muskies had been requested, including excess numbers of fish into those lakes and stock two new muskie lakes in Illinois.

■TIPS FOR VIDEOTAPING YOUR TURKEY HUNT: With turkey season just around the corner, Hunter's Specialties Pro Staff member and professional videographer Phillip Vanderpool offers these tips for taping your hunt:

- "Practice using the manual focus on your camera and learn how to use it. If you use the auto-focus feature, the camera will be focusing on things close to you and not the approaching turkey. I like to manually focus on an object like a tree at the distance where I think the turkey will come in. When I see the bird, I can get him in focus quickly. If you can use a tripod, the shots will be more stable and you can zoom in and out smoother. If you are taping for another hunter, set up close enough so that you can communicate with each other."
- "Be sure and carry extra batteries and tapes. Shoot plenty of scenery and 'set up' shots of the hunt. I like to record the whole experience, not just the kill. Get a good lens cleaning cloth and make sure there is nothing on the lens when you are filming. I always throw a trash bag in my pack to cover the camera in case it rains."
- "The only way to get good at filming is to get out and do plenty of it. Learn from your mistakes and don't be afraid to ask questions. Eventually you will get comfortable running a camera and get some great footage that you will be able to enjoy for years to come. Another thing I always encourage hunters to do is take plenty of photos with a still camera as well. Take along some Scent-A-Way towels or wipes to clean up your animal after the hunt and then shoot plenty of photos. Use a flash to get rid of shadows. With today's digital cameras, it doesn't cost anything if you have to delete photos, so take plenty. For other questions, I can be contacted at www.hunterspec.com."

■WORRY OVER SALMON PCB LEVELS: People may worry about PCBs in salmon, but most Americans actually get their yearly PCB load through beef, chicken, pork and milk, says a University of Idaho professor in a recently published article in an issue of Aquaculture Magazine.

Ronald W. Hardy, director of Hagerman Fish Culture Experiment Station, University of Idaho, says concerns about contaminants in salmon have been overstated, particularly within the context of the American diet. Americans eat vastly more meat and dairy than they do salmon, he says, and both meat and dairy contain PCB levels as high, or higher than salmon. "Levels in salmon are equivalent to levels in English muffins," Hardy said. Salmon also has health benefits that most meat lacks. (Great Lakes Basin Report)

Four Tourney Wins Over Weekend

Behind big weekend performances from freshman second baseman Rebekah Ruettiger and senior shortstop Samantha Lovato, the St. Xavier University softball team went a perfect 4-0 at the University of Illinois-Springfield (UIS) Invitational this weekend in Springfield. The Cougars (22-10 overall) picked up a pair of 5-4 victories against Lindenwood University (Mo.) and host UIS, respectively, on Saturday and then posted a pair of shutouts on Sunday, 4-0, against St. Mary of the Woods (Ind.) and 8-0 versus Hannibal-LaGrange (Mo.).

In Saturday's first game, five errors in the field nearly cost SXU a victory, but the team was able to recover and got a two-out, RBI single from senior centerfielder Marie Barker in the bottom of the seventh inning to earn a 5-4 win over Lindenwood. Freshman righthander Jalyne Shearer got the win on the mound (8-3) throwing all seven innings and allowing five hits, four runs (none earned) and a walk with four strikeouts. Ruettiger finished the game 2-for-3 with a home run and three RBI, while Barker went 2-for-2 with a triple, two runs scored, and the game-winning RBI.

Trailing 4-2 heading into the bottom of the sixth in Saturday's game against UIS, St. Xavier scored two runs in the bottom of the seventh to force extra innings. A RBI single from sophomore third baseman Gianna Pavone brought home the game-winning run in the bottom of the eighth inning. Senior right fielder Nicole Barker was the only Cougar to record multiple hits in game two going 2-for-4 with a run scored. Junior rightie Ashley Shearer got the start and threw the first five innings giving up just six hits, one run (earned) and a walk with seven strikeouts. Junior righthander Nicolle Bartels got the win (6-4) in relief throwing the final three innings and allowing four hits, three runs (two earned) and two walks.

The Cougars seemed to have little trouble in Sunday's games. Lovato went 1-for-3 with a run scored and two RBI to help lead SXU to a 4-0 win over St. Mary of the Woods. Ashley Shearer was solid on the mound pitching all seven innings and allowing just three hits and three walks with five strikeouts for her shutout win (5-2). The Cougars scored all four of their runs in the first inning led by a two-RBI single by Lovato. Sunday's second game was more of the same as SXU picked up an 8-0 win over Hannibal-LaGrange in five innings. Lovato went 2-for-3 with a double and three RBI, while Ruettiger was 1-for-3 with two runs scored and a RBI. Bartels notched the win (7-4) going all five innings and allowing just two hits with three strikeouts.

SXU Athletics Well Represented At Annual Service Day

On Saturday, April 14th, a host of St. Xavier University's 263 student-athletes took time out of their schedules to give back to the local community by volunteering to participate in the seventh annual Service day sponsored by the SXU Student Activities Board. Participants were broken up into small "teams" of 8-12 individuals and sent to different sites, including a retirement home, an animal shelter, and park beautification. Each team worked at its respective site around the Chicago area until 2 p.m. and then returned to the SXU campus for a celebration and refreshments.

"Having a good representation of student-athletes volunteering at an event like Service Day embodies the ideals that the NAIA and their Champions of Character program are promoting," said SXU Athletics Director Bob Hallberg. "Our student-athletes realize the importance of giving back to a community that has supported many of them over the years. I am extremely proud of all of the representatives of the St. Xavier Athletics Dept. who sacrificed a Saturday to aid a worthwhile cause."

The Cougars football team was extremely well represented at Saturday's Service Day activities with 46 of its 65 active players (71 percent) in attendance. In addition, many members of the other SXU varsity teams volunteered their time to this worthwhile endeavor.

SXU was recently one of approximately 100 colleges and universities named to the 2006 list of Champions of Character institutions by the NAIA. Winners promote and implement activities related to the association's five core values: respect, responsibility, integrity, servant leadership and sportsmanship.

Prom Night Safety

Prom night is probably the most anticipated night of the year for teens and can be the most dreaded by their parents. Although most teens think they know everything about how to stay safe, parents know otherwise. And according to safety experts, it will take more than just talk to ensure a safe evening for all.

"No matter how strong the family relationship, many parents are still unaware of the choices teens face every day," said Ray Palermo, director of public information for Teachers' Insurance Plan. "For parents to successfully reach their kids, they'll have to approach safety issues in new, often more direct ways." He offered several tips that go beyond "don't drink and drive."

Parents:

- Get involved in planning prom night.
- Talk specifically about what they should say or do in certain high-risk situations.
- Consider having a mutually agreed on "contract" for the night. Set out rules regarding post-prom parties or other activities - with whom they will be, where, for how long and what they will be doing.
- Get the names of other prom-goers and phone numbers of their parents.
- Set a curfew based on past behavior, but be reasonable. This is a special night. Have your teen call if there is a delay.
- Send your teen a text message during prom night telling them to have fun, but reminding them not to do anything that could ruin a great time.
- Limit the number of passengers in a car.
- Be on call for a ride home or other emergency.
- Have a "no question asked" policy on getting home safely.
- Join with other parents and rent a limo for them.
- Be the chauffeur for the night, but don't meddle. Rent a vintage car to make it more special.

Teens:

- Make an agreement with parents to not drink and drive, and not to ride with anyone else who is drinking.
- Resist high-risk activities of all types.
- To avoid tampering, do not leave your beverage unattended.
- Check in with your parents during the night. It will go a long way toward reassuring them about how you are doing.
- Always buckle up.
- In short, follow your parents' rules.

Illinois Lottery E-Mail Scam Alert

Illinois Attorney General Lisa Madigan is warning consumers about an unsolicited e-mail currently circulating claiming that the recipient has won the Illinois Lottery. The e-mail is part of a scam designed to defraud money and gain personal information from consumers. It is not authorized by the Illinois Lottery, which never notifies winners by e-mail.

In this Illinois Lottery scam, e-mail recipients are asked to respond by sending an e-mail to an agent in which they quote a reference, batch and winning number found in the original e-mail and provide their full name, address and telephone number. After sending the response e-mail containing this personal information, the winners are directed to a bank in Nigeria where their winnings are allegedly located, claiming that the Lottery is expanding globally. Contrary to these assertions, the Illinois Lottery does not conduct any business in Nigeria or any other foreign country.

This scam involves a common form of check cashing fraud that requires the recipient to wire money based on the false premise that the money is needed to cover the courier costs allegedly incurred for sending a prize-winning certified check to the recipient's doorstep. The people conducting the scam ask the recipients to keep the information confidential until their claim is processed, alleging that the security measures are important to avoid fraud. However, the Illinois Lottery does not ask their players to pay for courier costs or any other costs when claiming their winnings.

Madigan is urging consumers not to respond to these fake Illinois Lottery e-mails.

Illinois consumers who have sent money or divulged personal information in response to this fraud should contact the Attorney General Office's Consumer Fraud Hotline at 1(800) 386-5438, TTY 1(800) 964-3013.

HATS AND SKIN CANCER

Now that it's spring in the North, we are starting to feel the rays of the sun beat down on our skin. For most the sensation is wonderful, but it is not without its hazards if we go unprotected! Skin cancers are on the rise, and it is those of us without year-round sunshine that suffer the most, by spending the most time we can outdoors and squeezing in every bit of good weather possible all summer. Statistics show that almost all skin cancers are caused by sun exposure, yet less than a third of all Americans wear protective sun screen or gear. Even fewer wear hats.

When I practiced as a dermatology nurse in South Florida, it was the "snowbirds" (people from the North like us) who came to our clinic most often for skin cancer treatment. You could always tell where someone was from, by their skin damage! It was unusual for a Floridian to have parched or worn skin, unless he was a rancher! Even the ranchers however, wore hats—mostly broad-rimmed and light-weight, and light-colored to deflect the sun.

HATS AS IMPORTANT SHIELD

Wearing a hat can not only be trendy and stylish, but also can provide an excellent means for protective sun protection. And with people traveling to sunny climates year-round now, protection from the sun must just about always be considered.

Because of this, the Headwear Association, in partnership with The Skin Cancer Foundation, has in the past few years, created a special Hat Hangtag program, which ensures you are purchasing a hat that protects your face, ears, and neck from the risk of sun damage and skin cancer. "Wearing protective clothing, including a broad-brimmed hat, is an essential part of a complete sun protection regimen," said Perry Robbins, MD, former President of the Skin Cancer Foundation. (Of course, it goes without saying that sunscreen is a "must" as well.)

"There are several million Skin Cancer Foundation hat hangtags in circulation in the US," said Art Gardner, past President of The Headwear Association. To be certain you are purchasing a sun-protective hat, look for this hang tag, and follow these tips:

Size—a hat with a minimum of 2-inch brim can provide adequate sun protection for the neck, face and ears.

Shape—hat shapes that protect better against ultraviolet radiation (UV) are the ones that curve down to follow the contours of the head and neck.

Color—hats should have a dark color under brims. The dark color absorbs more of the reflected UV light and adds better protection.

Material—the material of a hat should be durable and cool. Fabrics should be tightly woven or lined with a fabric that has been sun-protection tested.

Although hats block almost all direct UV radiation, they cannot provide full protection against indirect or reflected UV rays. So it is important to shield the rest of your skin from sun exposure. The Skin Cancer Foundation recommends the following:

Seek the shade between 10 AM and 4 PM when the sun is strongest.

Apply at least a broad-spectrum SPF 15 sunscreen lotion daily.

Apply 2 tablespoons of sunscreen to your entire body 30 minutes before going outside and reapply every 2 hours.

Cover up with clothing and UV-blocking sunglasses.

For more information on the hazards of the sun, visit www.skincancer.org, or call 1-800-SKIN-490. And don't forget to have annual check-ups with a board-certified dermatologist in your area.

Urgent Call For Attention To Oral Health

As lawmakers grapple with the challenge of transforming the nation's healthcare system, Delta Dental is urging them to consider oral health in the discussion. The organization released today a set of principles that articulate its perspective and outline specific policy implications.

"Dental benefits should not be neglected in the debate over fixing the healthcare system," said Kim Volk, president and CEO of Delta Dental Plans Association. "These principles reflect our commitment to making certain that all Americans enjoy the oral health they deserve."

Without offering specific recommendations, the principles inform policymakers and public health officials about dental benefits and the market conditions required to preserve and advance their role in creating access to affordable dental care.

The document first sets forth a series of fundamental observations that frame the issue, which are as follows:

Dental is an inseparable part of health and overall wellness. Dental benefits promote not just dental health but systemic health. According to the Academy of General Dentistry, more than 90 percent of systemic disease including diabetes, cancer and stroke has oral manifestations that are detectable during oral exams. A growing body of evidence also suggests control of caries and periodontitis can improve health outcomes.

Dental is different; third party dental carriers add value. While dental health is integral to overall health, the dental delivery system remains vastly different than medical. A quality dental carrier can deliver more appropriate dental services, more cost effectively, with more protection for consumers than is generally available to those who finance their own care.

Dental coverage creates affordable access for millions of Americans. 164 million Americans currently enjoy the benefits of cost-efficient, consumer-oriented and effectively administered dental benefits with stable and predictable premiums.

Everyone deserves dental coverage. Not everyone has it. Despite the success of dental benefits in promoting oral health and overall health, nearly half of all Americans still lack dental coverage. Soaring medical costs threaten to exacerbate the problem.

The policy implications that follow these observations include:

Policy Implication I: Any legislative and/or regulatory approach that adds to the cost of administering or obtaining dental benefits and/or hinders the development of lower cost alternative plan designs will have the unintended effect of reducing the number of Americans with access to affordable dental coverage.

Policy Implication II: Dental carriers should be encouraged in their efforts to develop and enforce competitive fee arrangements, equitable reimbursement and dental policies, and innovative plan design to ensure necessary and appropriate care.

Policy Implication III: Dental coverage should not be neglected in the debate over how to fix healthcare.

Policy Implication IV: Dental benefits should be included as part of any reform proposal that: strives to increase access to affordable care for those not already covered; expands or builds upon existing programs that successfully provide dental benefits; relies on qualified, experienced dental administration (including stand-alone dental carriers) to deliver appropriate, necessary services; does not undermine healthy competition in the dental benefits marketplace; does not reduce employers' and/or individuals' capacity to continue sponsorship of existing dental benefits; does not jeopardize the tax-advantaged status for those who sponsor and/or pay the cost of their own dental coverage; and preserves at least the current portion of healthcare expenditures committed to dental treatment and coverage.

Policy Implication V: Reform proposals should not: erode existing, comprehensive dental benefit programs currently prevalent in the group benefits marketplace; be administered by a single-payer, government-sponsored agency that eliminates the important role of third party administration; exclude stand-alone dental carriers from competing with full service health for government and/or publicly sponsored contracts; erect higher, more costly barriers to the development and offering of cost-effective program administration; or reduce the current portion of healthcare expenditures committed to dental treatment and coverage.

"Policymakers have a tremendous opportunity to change our healthcare system for the better," said Volk. "These oral health principles can guide them toward good public policy that considers the full equation."

Delta Dental Plans Association is a national network of independent not-for-profit dental service corporations specializing in providing dental benefits programs to 47 million Americans in more than 81,000 employee groups nationwide.

Cancer Resource Center Open House

Little Company of Mary Hospital and Health Care Centers has partnered with the American Cancer Society to add additional services to the existing Cancer Resource Center. An open house in the Cancer Resource Center will be held on May 1st from 7:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. This partnership will make American Cancer Society cancer education and complimentary services readily available to patients, families and area residents.

Through the Center, area residents will have access to cancer information, education, support services, transportation and other resources. A Web-based and telephone-based Patient Navigation Services system also is available to assist cancer patients and their families in addressing a wide range of needs.

Among the complimentary services: Road to Recovery, a program that provides cancer patients with transportation to and from treatments; Look Good...Feel Better, which focuses on the inner and outer beauty of women going through chemotherapy and radiation treatments; and Reach to Recovery, matching breast cancer survivors with newly diagnosed patients to provide constant encouragement and support.

In addition to offering access to these patient services, the new Center also will enable patients to sit down with a patient advocate and discuss diagnoses, treatment options and financial services. There is no charge to patients.

The Cancer Resource Center is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. It is staffed by a hospital patient advocate and volunteers trained by the American Cancer Society. For more information, call (708) 229-4142.

Nutrition Expert To Speak At Cancer Support Center

"Beat Cancer with a Fork" may sound silly, but to Kim Dalzell, PhD, RD, LD, an expert in holistic and oncology nutrition, what you eat has a direct effect on your health.

Meet Dalzell and hear her 90-minute presentation at the Jennifer S. Fallick Cancer Support Center, 2028 Elm Road in Homewood, at 7 p.m. on Monday, April 30th. Learn what foods pack a powerful, cancer-fighting punch, and how to make small dietary changes today that add up to a big difference in the journey ahead. Healthy refreshments will be provided during this high-energy talk she describes as "one part fact, one part fun and one part motivation."

Dalzell has over 11 years of extensive oncology experience and holds advanced degrees in clinical and holistic nutrition. She currently serves as Director, Holistic Nutrition Services at Cancer Resource Center for Cancer Treatment Centers of America and is a nutrition consultant for Cancer Nutrition Centers of America and Asahi Elles in Japan. She also serves on the advisory board for a number of nonprofit cancer organizations and has taught whole foods nutrition to medical residents.

On her web site, ChallengeCancer.com, Dalzell outlines eating hints, facts and recipes to get the most nutrition out of each meal. She offers tips for curbing "carbohydrate cravings" and what to eat for particular types of cancers...information her patients credit with extending their quality of life. One of her favorite pieces of advice is: "Go ahead and indulge every once in a while. Just remember that the foods you eat most often will shape your overall health."

Like all programs at the Jennifer S. Fallick Cancer Support Center, this program is FREE and designed to benefit anyone affected by cancer — patients, caregivers, loved ones, family, friends or the bereaved. For more information or to register for this program, call (708) 798-9171.

New Report Finds That "Illinois Covered" Would Cut Consumers' Healthcare Costs

Governor Rod R. Blagojevich recently announced that his Illinois Covered plan will mean $1.1 billion in new funding for Chicagoland healthcare providers. The Governor's plan, which will provide access to health insurance to the 1.4 million uninsured adults in Illinois and more affordable coverage for those who are currently insured, and will mean millions of new dollars for doctors and hospitals who currently receive little compensation for treating the uninsured. In addition, Illinois Covered includes rate increases for doctors, specialty practitioners, and hospitals around the state. The Governor's plan has been endorsed by the Illinois Hospital Association and numerous other medical provider organizations.

Medical providers around Illinois will receive a boost of nearly $1.7 billion from the Governor's Illinois Covered plan through new coverage for the uninsured and increased rates for providers.

Under Gov. Blagojevich, Illinois has expanded access to healthcare to over 560,000 more people, and became the first state in the nation to provide access to comprehensive health insurance to every uninsured child in the state through "All Kids." As a result, the Kaiser Family Foundation ranked Illinois #1 in the nation for adding working parents to healthcare for three years in a row, and credited Illinois for sparking a national movement to provide healthcare to all children.

While the Governor's "All Kids" plan, which took effect last year, extended coverage to all children in the state, approximately 1.4 million adults in Illinois are currently uninsured. A majority, roughly 75 percent, are from families with moderate incomes. The Governor's "Illinois Covered" plan will provide affordable coverage to the uninsured and will also help many middle-income families and small businesses that are currently enrolled in health insurance plans save thousands a year on healthcare costs. The plan will also reform the existing healthcare system to improve quality and require more accountability.

A new report authored by a nationally renowned health economist Dr. Kenneth Thorpe suggests that without Governor Blagojevich's healthcare reforms, healthcare spending in Illinois will almost double within 10 years, growing one and a half times faster than the economy and more than twice as fast as wages. In the absence of the Illinois Covered reforms, employers will spend $26 billion on healthcare in 2011, or about 10.2% of payroll, and households will spend nearly $32 billion in out of pocket costs and health insurance premiums. Dr. Thorpe's analysis suggests that the Illinois Covered legislation can save over $15 billion in healthcare costs by 2011, making the return on investment for the state over 2:1.

Hospitals in Chicagoland will see increased revenue from expanded healthcare coverage and increased reimbursement rates. In addition, physicians, clinics, and other non-hospital medical providers in Chicagoland will receive an estimated $757 million in new funding.

Merrillville Child In Need Of Life-Saving Transplant

With the cost of a transplant often exceeding $500,000, many transplant patients are unable to shoulder the financial burden of such a procedure. The Children's Organ Transplant Association (COTA) is a national charity dedicated to organizing and guiding communities in raising funds for transplant-needy patients. In Merrillville, volunteers are raising funds for transplant patients like local child Amber Jefferson.

Born on Dec. 12, 1996, Amber was diagnosed with Pulmonary Fibrosis and Pulmonary Hypertension, and doctors at Children's Hospital of Wisconsin in Milwaukee recommended a life-saving double lung transplant. An estimated $80,000 is being raised by Merrillville volunteers.

Amber is the daughter of Alan and Charonda Jordon and the sister of Alan, Aaron and Alanna Jordon. Her grandparents are Stephanie Duncan and Elsie Fields.

Volunteers are needed to assist with fundraising activities. Individuals and groups interested in more information can contact Campaign Coordinator Ronda Payne at (219) 736-7403 or rtpchildcare@hotmail.com.

Donations may be made in person at any Chase Brand/Bank One System branch location using account number 2730782766 or mailed to the Children's Organ Transplant Association, 2501 COTA Drive, Bloomington, Indiana, 47403. Checks or money orders should be made payable to COTA, with "In Honor of Amber Jefferson" written on the memo line of the check. Secure credit card donations are also accepted online at www.cota.org.

Amber's family has asked for assistance from the Children's Organ Transplant Association. The organization's priority is to assure that no child is denied a transplant or excluded from a transplant waiting list due to lack of funds. One hundred percent of all funds raised are used for patients' transplant-related expenses.

Physician And Brother Rice Alum, Shaves Head For St. Balderick's Event

Little Company of Mary Professional Staff President Brian Farrell, M.D., recently shaved his head at the St. Balderick's Foundation event held at Brother Rice High School. Dr. Farrell, a Brother Rice High School alum, jumped at the chance to raise funds and awareness for this great cause.

At Brother Rice, 373 adults and students shaved their heads for St. Balderick's collecting more than $37,000 on-line and much more in cash and check donations.

With his new appearance, Dr. Farrell now encourages others to raise funds for St. Balderick's challenging his fellow physicians at Little Company of Mary and other area physicians to donate to St. Balderick's. Dr. Farrell is grateful of the generous $1,000 donation from the Little Company of Mary Medical Staff and that he met his personal goal of raising $5,000, but he hopes that more will be raised.

"I'm very proud to be able to shave my ugly head for such a great cause. In my 20 years as a practicing ear, nose and throat physician, I have treated a number of children with cancer. These children and their families have truly inspired me," Dr. Farrell said.

St. Balderick's Day began about eight years ago by a few insurance executives of Irish descent in New York City. They wanted to celebrate their heritage in a positive way. Thus, they came up with the idea of supporting kids who have cancer. St. Balderick's is now the world's biggest volunteer-driven fundraising program for childhood cancer. Events had taken place in 10 counties and 42 U.S. states raising over $20 million and shaving more than 26,000 heads. Those who would like to join Dr. Farrell's St. Balderick's crusade can give on-line at www.St.Baldericks.org.

Ask A Lawyer

Anyone in Illinois with a question about a legal matter can call and talk to a lawyer — at no cost — on Ask a Lawyer Day, Saturday, April 28th.

Lawyer volunteers will answer phones at 7 locations around the state from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Any Illinois resident can call 1(800) 252-8908 toll-free, or a local number in some areas, for a free phone consultation with a lawyer.

The 26th Ask A Lawyer Day, part of Law Day activities in Illinois, is a public service sponsored by the Illinois State Bar Assn. (ISBA) in cooperation with bar associations in Chicago and DuPage, Kane, Lake & Will Counties.

Lawyer volunteers will be able to answer questions about consumer problems, family law, estate planning, personal injury, or any other legal situations affecting individuals.

Callers will be advised of steps they can take to resolve their legal problems and if they need additional legal services, they will be advised to see their lawyer. If they don't have a lawyer, they will receive a referral through a referral service in their area.

"We find that many people are hesitant to see a lawyer, even when they know they have a legal problem," said Irene Bahr of Wheaton, president of the Illinois State Bar Assn. "Ask A Lawyer Day is a chance to obtain important information about a legal situation or learn how best to address a legal problem."

Phone numbers to talk to a lawyer on April 28th are: the Chicago Bar Assn. - (312) 554-2001 or in Illinois - ISBA - (800) 252-8908 (toll-free) or (217) 525-1760.

Each of the bar associations operates a lawyer referral service for people who need legal services but do not have a lawyer. Participating lawyers provide an initial consultation at a nominal cost to determine the client's legal needs. Also, lawyers can be found online at one of these bar association sites: www.IllinoisLawyerFinder.com (statewide), www.chicagobar.org/public/referral/referral.asp (Chicago), www.dcba.org/public/locate.htm (DuPage County), www.kanebar.org (Kane County), www.willcountybar.com/referral.html (Will County) & www.lakebar.org/html/referralSearch.asp (Lake County).

Scholarship Awards

Ten local women have been awarded scholarships by Saint Xavier University's School of Education.

Beverly Gulley, dean of Saint Xavier University's School of Education, recently announced the winners of the 2007 Binder, Davis, Gallagher, Leake and Malin Scholarships. These five scholarships were funded by donors who wanted to recognize the qualities exemplified by the people for whom the scholarships are named: Dr. Dorothy Binder, Dorothy Davis, Elaine Gallagher, Dr. Lloyd Leake, and Julius and Catherine Malin.

"I am very impressed with the caliber of the students who apply for our scholarships. Thanks to the generosity of our donors, we can assist students who embody the themes of our School of Education conceptual framework - scholars, leaders, lifelong learners and reflective professionals. We hope to expand the scholarship program to benefit even more students in the future," Gulley said.

Jennifer Anderson, of Hazel Crest, was awarded the Dr. Dorothy Binder Endowed Graduate Scholarship, which provides tuition for one course at Saint Xavier University. Anderson, a graduate student in the counseling program, was recognized by the scholarship committee for her commitment to excellence, hospitality, compassion and service to others.

Ghada Ali and Jennifer Volpe were recognized as Binder Scholars for the 2007 award. Ali, of Palos Hills, is a graduate student in the secondary education mathematics program and was recognized for her service and willingness to share experiences of multiculturalism. Volpe, of Monee, is a graduate student in the reading program and was described by the scholarship committee as exhibiting integrity, compassion and hospitality.

Shorewood resident Sara Koncel was awarded the Dorothy Ritter Davis Scholarship, a $6,600 tuition grant funded by the estate of alumna Dorothy Davis. Koncel is an early childhood education major and active in the University Concert Band and Flute Choir. Her work in a preschool demonstrates her appreciation for diversity and the uniqueness of every child.

Reem Sayes, a resident of Oak Lawn, was awarded the Elaine Gallagher Scholarship, a $2,700 tuition grant funded by the estate of alumna Elaine Gallagher and donations made in her memory. Sayes is a secondary education and biology major and volunteers in the community packaging and distributing food and school bags to needy families. The scholarship committee recognized her enthusiasm for teaching science, love of learning and demonstration of service.

Tiffany Durham, of Chicago's West Pullman neighborhood, was awarded the Dr. Lloyd Leake Scholarship, a $4,000 tuition grant funded by the family and friends of the late Dr. Leake for an African-American undergraduate student. This is the second year that Durham, an elementary education major, has received the Leake Scholarship. She volunteers in her community, including establishing a youth book club in her church community and working on breast cancer and adopt-a-child fundraising activities. The scholarship committee recognized her commitment to excellence, hospitality, determination and compassion.

Jamea Elzy and Rachelle M. Ashford were recognized as Leake Scholars. Elzy, of Hazel Crest, a secondary education and English major, developed an informal after-school tutoring program. Ashford, of Chicago's Beverly neighborhood, an elementary education major, was described as enthusiastic, energetic and compassionate.

Kelly Briscoe, of Chicago's Mount Greenwood neighborhood, was awarded the Julius and Catherine Heerey Malin Scholarship, a $2,600 tuition grant funded by the estate of Helen Heerey. A graduate student in the counseling program, Briscoe works as a high school teacher, counselor and mentor to freshman students, and as a graduate assistant in the SXU STAR Learning Academy and School of Education office. Her volunteer service to the Avon Foundation for breast cancer research, Make-A-Wish Foundation and the Hugh O'Brien Youth Leadership Seminars exemplify the qualities of excellence, service and integrity.

Joy Martin, of Midlothian, was recognized as a Malin Scholar. Martin, a student in the individualized graduate education program, was described as exhibiting a high standard of character and integrity.

Students are encouraged to submit entries for next year's scholarships. Applications will be available in October 2007. For more information about Saint Xavier's School of Education or the scholarships, please call (773) 298-3177 or visit the School of Education Web site at www.sxu.edu/soe/.

New Program Encourages Safe Environment For Kids

Illinois Dept. of Transportation (IDOT) Acting Secretary Milton R. Sees announced $23 million is available to fund projects that encourage and enable students to safely walk and bike to school. The new Safe Routes to School Program (SRTS) is a federally funded initiative that will fund projects in Illinois schools and communities over the next three years.

This international movement works to increase student physical activity and safety, reduce traffic congestion around schools and enhance air quality. The National Centers for Safe Routes to School says the most successful programs are accomplished by implementing the five "E's."

- Education
- Enforcement
- Evaluation
- Engineering
- Encouragement

Safe Routes to School is a program of the U.S. Dept. of Transportation Federal Highway Administration, administered by the State Dept. of Transportation. The program is designed to help communities develop and implement projects and programs to:

- Enable and encourage children, including those with disabilities, to walk and bicycle to school.
- Make bicycling and walking to school a safer and more appealing transportation alternative, thereby encouraging a healthy and active lifestyle from an early age.
- Facilitate the planning, development & implementation of projects and activities that will improve safety and reduce traffic, fuel consumption and air pollution in the vicinity or primary and middle schools (grades K-8).

Schools serving grades K through eight are eligible for funding. Program funds may be used for infrastructure or non-infrastructure projects and are 100% funded, requiring no local match. Infrastructure projects must be within two miles of the school, while non-infrastructure projects have no boundary limitations.

On Saturday, May 5th, the Lansing Chamber of Commerce will be holding its 40th annual Lansing Good Neighbor Day Parade. This is a major annual event and should attract over 125 entries.

The parade will stage at 176th and Wentworth Ave. Wentworth will be closed to non-parade traffic from 176th St. to Ridge Rd. from 11:30 a.m. until approximately 3:30 p.m.

The parade will start at 2 p.m. and is expected to last until 4 p.m. During the parade the entire parade route will be closed to all traffic. Motorists are encouraged to seek alternate routes west of Torrence Ave. or east of Wentworth Ave.

I remember back when I was 16th District VFW Auxiliary President, and all of the years prior while I was president of Midlothian VFW Auxiliary 2580 and through the chairs of the district, we marched in this parade as our Loyalty Day Parade. It was a very long but exciting day for us. We also marched in about 9 parades each year that took place in our 16th VFW District. Those were the days of fond memories, before arthritis took over. Now we're lucky to walk around town or through the grocery store unaided.

Wear Red on Fridays! As part of an intercontinental movement to support troops, Manhattanville My Soldier, a program that puts politics aside and lets U.S. soldiers know that someone back home cares, announced it will join thousands of Americans and Canadians in celebrating Wear Red on Fridays by offering participants a free, red 'My Soldier' awareness bracelet.

Red Fridays Foundation of Canada created Wear Red Fridays as a nonpartisan program to show deployed troops that they are cared for and honored. The My Soldier bracelet initiative is reminiscent of the POW/MIA bracelet program that was launched on Veterans Day in 1970. The campaign was the brainchild of two college students in Los Angeles, who were looking for ways young people could support soldiers overseas without becoming involved in the controversy surrounding the war.

"For some young people, the POW bracelets represented a political awakening," said Richard Berman, Manhattanville College President who was a student at the University of Michigan during the Vietnam War. "Wearing the My Soldier bracelet will be a reminder that servicemen are making sacrifices for democracy right now."

To receive a free "My Soldier" bracelet send a self-addressed, stamped envelope with two stamps (required for thickness) to: My Soldier Bracelet Office, Manhattanville College, 2900 Purchase St., Purchase, NY 10577.

For more information about Manhattanville My Soldier visit the web site at www.mysoldier.com.

Catholic Charities Celebrates 9th Annual Benefit Dinner

Great people. Outstanding auction items. Noble tradition. At the ninth annual "Helping Hands" dinner benefit, sponsored by Catholic Charities Southwest Suburban Services, more than 350 guests enjoyed a full evening of camaraderie, music and fellowship.

Held at the Double Tree Hotel in Alsip, the evening's theme was "Sweet Home Chicago," and the master of ceremonies, was Chicago Tribune writer, Rick Kogan.

"I am surprised and heartened by this great turnout," Kogan said. "When you think about charitable organizations such as Catholic Charities, (and what their staff does) it comes down to a grassroots effort."

With good humor and a quick wit, Kogan entertained the crowd with stories about his young daughter as well as inner city children that touched his life.

Father Michael Boland, administrator, president and chief executive officer for Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of Chicago, then took the podium and began the awards portion of the evening.

"Through the work of Catholic Charities, I have the privilege every day of seeing children that have been helped by our various programs," Boland said. "We are blessed tonight."

Boland thanked Bill Carroll, Advisory Board Chairman and members of the Southwest Suburban Regional Advisory Board for the dedicated efforts and work to help the organization and those it serves.

Boland thanked all the volunteers who support programs that benefit senior citizens, children and struggling families.

"Volunteers are important to our organization," he said, noting that without them many more families would be dealing with homelessness and lack of food.

Boland also thanked Matt Brejcha, regional services representative for the southwest suburban region of Catholic Charities for assisting people each day at the new offices in Worth.

"These funds we raise will help find apartments for the homeless," he said. "People want to be self sufficient, but when they don't have enough to provide for their families, we have committees who help support them in times of need," Boland said. "We are grateful for the help and support of our staff and volunteers who treat each client with respect and dignity."

As part of the gala celebration, two awards were bestowed on deserving employees of Catholic Charities.

Roberta "Bobbi" Magurany, administrator of the Holy Family Villa Nursing Home in Palos Park, received the "Helping Hands" award for her leadership and dedication to the elderly and the ill.

An emotional Magurany accepted the award and said many others are equally deserving of the honor.

A second honor, the "Vincentian Award" was given to Paul Asselin, an intake specialist at the Worth office.

The award, named for St. Vincent de Paul, was given to Asselin who fields approximately 100 phone calls each week for a variety of requests. Boland commended Asselin for his thoughtful and patient demeanor with all his clients.

"I'm thankful for this award -- I see it as a blend of my work for Catholic Charities and the St. Vincent de Paul Society," Asselin said.

Now in its 90th year, Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of Chicago is the largest private, not-for-profit social service agency in the Midwest, annually assisting more than 895,000 families and individuals in Cook and Lake counties without regard to religious, ethnic or economic background. Catholic Charities fulfills the Church's role in the mission of charity by providing compassionate, competent, professional services that strengthen and support individuals, families and communities.

Legislation To Charge People Falsely Claiming Military Service

Illinois Secretary of State Jesse White's legislation making it a crime to falsify one's military service in order to receive special license plates was approved by the House of Representatives.

Under White's proposal (HB-362) people who falsely claim to be military service personnel or falsely claim to have received military honors in order to receive a military license plate will face a Class A misdemeanor - punishable by up to one year in jail and up to $2,500 in fines - the minimum fine being $1,000.

The funds collected from the fines will be deposited into the Illinois Military Family Relief Fund.

Currently the license plates that are available to service personnel include Disabled Veterans, POW, National Guard, Armed Forces Reserves, Purple Heart, Retired Armed Forces, Pearl Harbor and Gold Star. There is no extra charge for a vanity or personalized plate in these categories.

In addition, people who provide false information on their vehicle title or registration in order to obtain a license plate will also face a Class A misdemeanor with a minimum $500 fine.

The measure will now move to the full Illinois Senate for its consideration.

2007 Annual Meeting & MuseumExpo™

America's museums are trusted sources of knowledge and inspiration, safe places for the exploration of ideas and experiences, and vital economic and civic community partners. In short, museums matter very much to the communities they serve.

But what will the museum of tomorrow look like? What changes must museums make to engage visitors, donors and public policy makers? How do museums remain relevant in an era of rapid technological evolution? These and other questions will be discussed and debated at AAM's 101st Annual Meeting & MuseumExpo™, May 12-17, 2007, at McCormick Place Convention Center in Chicago.

"Chicago is recognized as the geographic heart and soul of America – the perfect setting to examine the essential questions about how museums matter to the heart and soul of people and communities across the country," said Kim Igoe, AAM's interim President and CEO. "Over 50 museums and cultural organizations have welcomed AAM to the city. We greatly appreciate the enthusiasm of the local host committee in sharing this moment with their museum colleagues around the world."

The AAM Annual Meeting explores the latest trends in museum management, collections stewardship, museum education, marketing, public relations, technology, and development. Program sessions, workshops, and keynote speakers designed around this year's theme, "HYPERLINK Why Museums Matter", will explore museums—as catalysts for social change, vital community partners, stewards of heritage, and much more—and the most effective ways museums can communicate their value.

Attendees also learn about the latest products and services from the hundreds of companies exhibiting at the meeting's exhibit hall, museumexpo MuseumExpo™. Over 300 suppliers representing many of the museum industry's leading national and regional companies will fill the exhibit floor, bringing together the largest showcase of museum products and services at the largest gathering of museum professionals in the world.

Two internationally-recognized overview/k keynote speakers will address attendees at the 2007 meeting during the General Sessions.

Salman Rushdie A writer like no other, Rushdie has composed 14 novels—including the Booker Prize-winning Midnight's Children and the controversial Satanic Verses—that illuminate the essential place of storytelling in our world. His latest novel, Shalimar the Clown, explores the roots of terrorism and the turmoil generated by different faiths and cultures attempting to co-exist. Rushdie is an honorary professor in the humanities at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Fellow of the Royal Society of Literature. He has been awarded the Austrian State Prize for European Literature (1993), the Aristeion Literary Prize (1996) and has received eight honorary doctorates.

Doris Kearns Goodwin A world-renowned historian and winner of the Pulitzer Prize, Goodwin also is an authoritative speaker on leadership. Her bestselling books include Wait Till Next Year: A Memoir, Lyndon Johnson and the American Dream and Team of Rivals: The Political Genius of Abraham Lincoln, which reached the top of the New York Times bestseller list and is the basis of an upcoming film by Steven Spielberg. Goodwin is a commentator for NBC and was a consultant and on-air speaker for PBS documentaries on Lyndon Johnson, the Kennedy family and Franklin Roosevelt, as well as Ken Burns's History of Baseball. She received her doctorate in government from Harvard University.

All registration for the AAM Annual Meeting, including tickets for evening events, must be arranged on-site at McCormick Place, May 13-17. Detailed information about the 2007 AAM Annual Meeting is available online at www.aam-us.org/am07/.

State Employees Donate More Than $3 Million To Meet Social Service Needs

The generosity of State employees was recognized at a luncheon at the Executive Mansion on April 19th as SECA Chair Maureen O'Donnell announced that the State and University Employees Combined Appeal (SECA) campaign raised more than $3 million in 2006 for the second year in a row. The funds will be disbursed through member charities to provide health and human services to hundreds of thousands of people around the world.

"As public servants, State employees can take pride in knowing that their work makes a profound difference in people's lives," said O'Donnell, Acting Director of the Dept. of Central Management Services. "Participation in SECA provides an even more tangible way to help others. State and university employees can feel good knowing that their SECA contributions go to efforts that help our neighbors in need – in Illinois and around the globe."

Since its inception in 1983, the statewide charity campaign has raised more than $53 million.

Tammy Duckworth, Director of the Dept. of Veterans' Affairs, has agreed to be the Honorary Chairperson for the 2007 SECA Campaign. In 2006, the department's staff donated $18,000 and received an award for outstanding achievement at the event.

At the luncheon, 40 state agencies were recognized for exceptional participation, including the Dept. of Corrections (IDOC), which was awarded the Capitol Cup for the highest percentage of employee participants of a large agency – for the sixth year in a row.

The University of Illinois at Springfield was awarded the Chancellor's Cup for highest percentage of participation for a university, for the second year in a row. Also, the Civil Service Commission was awarded the Governor's Cup for the highest percentage of participation for smaller agencies (those with less than 1,000 employees).

And SECA Advisory Board member Barb Rice of Northern Illinois University was awarded the Lee Frost-Kumpf Award – an honor named for a former SECA board member to recognize outstanding dedication, leadership and enthusiasm for volunteerism.

The SECA campaign is a once-a-year fundraising drive that allows state and university employees and retirees to contribute to participating charities through either payroll deductions or a one-time donation.

Warning On Home Improvement Scams

With the spring season finally here, the Better Business Bureau of Chicago is warning homeowners to be on the lookout for home-improvement scams.

This is the time of year when less-than-reputable or unqualified contractors offer promising services at extremely low prices. They usually show up at your door or deliver fliers to your home.

Contractor complaints to the BBB concern many problems, including high-pressure sales tactics, confusion over contract terms, poor workmanship, incomplete job performance, and overcharging the agreed upon price. These complaints against home-improvement and home repair contractors are among the most common consumer complaints received by the Better Business Bureau.

"The salesperson may claim he has materials left over from a recent job at nearby location. This is a common ploy of shady contractors who are just out to make a quick buck and disappear," said Steve J. Bernas, president & CEO of the Better Business Bureau of Chicago and Northern Illinois.

There are thousands of reputable contractors who will deliver quality work on time and within budget. Consumers can avoid costly mistakes and scams by doing some research before opening their wallets.

The BBB offers the following consumer tips:

Deal only with licensed and insured contractors. Investigate the track record of any builder or contractor you may hire. Get a list of recent satisfied customers in your area and for similar types of work from all prospective contractors.

Ask friends, relatives, neighbors, co-workers for recommendations, then check with your Better Business Bureau, www.chicago.bbb.org to see if complaints have been lodged against any contractor you're considering hiring.

A list of all BBB members is available online at www.chicago.bbb.org along with eQuote, a useful tool that allows consumers to get multiple bids from approved BBB companies.

Don't let anyone rush you into signing a contract. Get written estimates from at least three firms. Ask contractors if there's any charge for an estimate before allowing them in your home. Ask for explanations of price variations. Don't automatically choose the lowest bidder and get a copy of the final, signed contract.

Beware of contractors who ask you to pay for the entire job up-front. Never give a deposit until you've researched the contractor you're considering. When you make a down payment, it should not be more than one-third of the total price. Pay only by check or credit card -- and pay the final amount only after the work is completed to your satisfaction. Don't ever pay cash.

Do not permit work to start without a signed written contract that includes all verbal promises that were made by the contractor. Be sure that the written contract includes a start and completion date, a breakdown of the cost and information about the contractor, including proof of insurance, necessary permits from your city, competency license number, street address, city and phone number.

It is also important to look into the contractor's standard of work and his professional affiliations; verify his insurance; check to see if he needs to be licensed. Check with the BBB for a report on the contractor.

To check out a company, contact the Better Business Bureau at (312) 832-0500 or log on to www.chicago.bbb.org

Volunteers Of The Year

The Illinois Departments of Corrections (IDOC) and Juvenile Justice (IDJJ) announced the recipients of the 2007 Volunteer of the Year awards at a recognition ceremony held recently in Springfield. Phillip L. McLaurin was named IDOC 2007 Volunteer of the Year and Tim Tomlinson at Illinois Youth Center – Pere Marquette was named as the 2007 Volunteer of the Year for IDJJ. McLaurin and Tomlinson were among volunteers of the state's 28 adult correctional centers, eight adult transition centers and eight youth facilities who were being honored for their outstanding leadership and their efforts in providing positive change in the lives of inmates and youths.

Phillip L. McLaurin, a college counselor for SIU-Edwardsville, has provided volunteer services at Southwestern Illinois Correctional Center in East St. Louis since 2004. He assists offenders to achieve educational goals and develop self-esteem and vocational skills through various programs. During this past year, he has given offenders the opportunity to become a positive asset to the communities they return to and has also increased their awareness of continued substance rehabilitation. His professionalism and motivating attitude brings an enhancement to the programs established to help offenders become productive citizens upon their return to the community.

Tim Tomlinson is an Ivy League Emeritus Associate Director of the Morris Arboretum of the University of Pennsylvania. He began dedicating his time to IYC-Pere Marquette in March 2005 as an educational tutor. Since then, a number of youths have graduated from eighth grade, high school or obtained their GED. During graduation ceremonies, Tomlinson served as the center's guest speaker and encouraged youth to strive to be the best they can.

If you are interested in the Volunteer Services Program at IDOC, contact Marcy Nolan, volunteer services manager, at (217) 522-2666, ext. 6101.

Utility Lines Pose Dangers After Storms

Spring storm season is upon us again, and that spells danger to our urban forest. High winds, sometimes with ice mixed in, put tremendous pressures on trees growing near houses or power lines. In their wake, property owners face the task of clearing trees and downed limbs.

"Storm cleanup is often when many property owners crank up their first chain saw," notes Tchukki Andersen, staff arborist for the Tree Care Industry Association. "And, not surprisingly, they injure themselves. It is also the time when 'ambulance chasing' tree care operators arrive in town looking for work. Some of these people charge exorbitant amounts for their work," Andersen warns.

The Tree Care Industry Association, the trade organization for owners and operators of tree care businesses, offers these safety tips to help avoid personal injury or damage to property during storm clean-up, and to assure that you hire an ethical tree service professional. Trees or large limbs that have fallen into power lines can be deadly.

If a utility line is down:

- Call the utility company immediately.
- Assume any downed line is energized.
- Don't touch the tree or anything touching the downed line.

• If a tree falls onto the lines and pulls them down on a cyclone or metal fence, it is possible that the entire fence is energized and therefore dangerous.

- Keep pedestrians, children and pets away from the area.
- Contact with energized lines can result in electrocution.

Do not use a chain saw for tree removal unless you have years of experience in handling one. Even professional tree care personnel face risk of injury using chain saws. Tree removals are very unpredictable - don't take unnecessary chances!

Homeowners who would like a professional arborist to assess their trees should contact the Tree Care Industry Association (TCIA), a 69-year-old public and professional resource on trees and arboriculture. It has more than 2,000 member companies who recognize stringent safety and performance standards and who are required to carry liability insurance. TCIA has the nation's only Accreditation program that helps consumers find tree care companies that have been inspected and accredited based on: adherence to industry standards for quality and safety; maintenance of trained, professional staff; and dedication to ethics and quality in business practices. An easy way to find a tree care service provider in your area is to use the "Locate Your Local TCIA Member Companies" program. You can use this service by calling 1-800-733-2622 or by doing a ZIP code search at www.tcia.org.

105th Annual Illinois PTA Convention

The Illinois PTA will hold their 105th Annual PTA Convention from April 26th to 29th at the Hilton Garden Inn in Champaign, Illinois. Hundreds of PTA delegates are expected to focus on priority issues that include keeping kids safe on the roads as well as the electronic highway and the recent health issues facing our children. More than 30 workshops are scheduled to cover leadership development; federal legislation; children's health; parent involvement, bullying, school readiness, a music masters class, and much more.

Hometown Astronaut Joe Tanner will be sharing his experiences from his recent shuttle mission and share information about the upcoming mission in June. In addition to the speakers and workshops, there will be an exhibition of nonprofit organizations and commercial businesses.

Children's original artwork, photography, literature and music will be displayed throughout the convention. The participants in the National PTA Reflections program will be honored at a Student Awards Luncheon and Ceremony on Sunday, April 29th. College scholarships will be awarded to those students throughout the state that have excelled and chosen to continue in the education or education-related fields of study.

New this year will be a Healthy Kids Walk sponsored by the Health Alliance. Delegates will walk to raise awareness of childhood obesity and children's overall health. The delegates will have the opportunity to determine the legislative priorities for the organization. A grassroots organization, the Illinois PTA delegates and members meet annually to adopt resolutions, implement the legislative platform and adopt the annual budget, and learn how to be advocates for all children. For further information, contact the Illinois PTA at (217) 528-9617 or visit www.illinoispta.org.

Beverly Area Planning Association's 37th Annual Home Tour

The Beverly Area Planning Association's 37th annual Beverly Hills/Morgan Park Home Tour showcases five private residences -- including a rare Frank Lloyd Wright American System Built home -- and a church that are among the Village in the City's best in variety, design and style on Sunday, May 20. Marquette Bank is the Presenting Sponsor.

Tours leave from the Beverly Arts Center, 2407 W. 111th St. (111th and south Western Ave.), Chicago, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Participants can choose to self-guide in their own vehicles or, for a small additional cost, take the guided tour of the historic districts by trolley. The church is open from 12:30 to 5 p.m. Homes are open from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

A rare example of Frank Lloyd Wright's American System Built homes is celebrating its 90th birthday on the 37th Annual Beverly Hills/Morgan Park Home Tour. Designated a Chicago Landmark in 1994, this home was Wright's concept for affordable and beautiful "pre fabricated" housing. American System Built houses were designed, according to the marketing materials, as a resource for "city dwellers seeking to follow the American Dream." The idea was to reduce the cost of building a quality house by standardizing construction elements and precutting lumber.

This example, built in 1917 as a model house, was one of just a few completed before limited construction resources during World War I forced building to stop. After the War, America's taste in architecture reverted to more traditional styles and the project was not resumed.

Current and past owners of the house have done extensive work in returning the it to almost the original state. Outside, the cypress trim has been stripped, restained and repaired, and the stucco has been reapplied to match the original style and color. A planter box was installed over the front doorway, and the one-car garage was restored to meet Wright's plan.

Inside, birch trim has been replaced and repaired -- much of it custom-milled; and the home has been furnished with high quality reproductions of Wright-designed furniture, light fixtures and accessories, as well as period antiques.

Also on the Home Tour is an outstanding Tudor Revival style home designed by noted local architect John Todd Hetherington and built in 1926. Hetherington, who designed many Chicago buildings including the Driscoll House (headquarters for the Ridge Historical Society) and the Ridge Park Fieldhouse, both in Beverly/Morgan Park, was the first of three generations of Hetheringtons whose architectural designs helped form the character of the historical Beverly Hills/Morgan Park neighborhood.

Throughout house leaded glass windows, hardwood floors, handsome trim and ornate plaster moldings call back to a time when craftsmanship was king. The house is beautifully appointed with faux painting in natural colors, and original details such as the outstanding crystal chandelier and matching wall sconces in the dining room, and stone mantle fireplace with the original screen and andirons.

Also on the Home Tour are:

A modified Colonial Revival style home that has been transformed into a beautiful model of contemporary family living. Rehab and addition construction took nearly 10 months. The once a cramped house, built in the 1930s with small, tired rooms, has been doubled in size and reconfigured into spacious open living areas with high ceilings and all the amenities, including wood burning fireplace, beautiful oak trim, and a spectacular kitchen.

A Dutch Colonial style home, built in the late 1920s that has been decorated in an eclectic mix of vintage and contemporary furnishing, with many original and new details to enjoy. Preserved throughout the house are window-cornices that enhance decorating-and-add dimension to the lovely but simple window treatments designed to let in plenty of natural light. The recently remodeled kitchen features an oven so high tech, it practically thinks for itself!

A luxury four bedroom/three bath condo that was used as the developer's model to market the building to its first tenants in 1929. The formidable three-building complex was designed using classic Tudor style elements such as half-timbering, stone towers, wooden doors with stone surrounds and a crenelated roofline. Originally built as deluxe apartments, building units range from one to four bedrooms. During the conversion to condos, vintage detailing was carefully preserved while amenities were added.

The Gothic style church featured on the tour has a fascinating history in the Beverly/Morgan Park community that began in 1893 when a group of people representing a variety of denominations began worshipping together in the Rock Island train station on 95th Street. In 1894, they built a modest frame church which was moved to another location and is still used as a private residence. In 1902, the congregation built a handsome gothic style church which was destroyed by fire in 1942. Undaunted, efforts began almost immediately to rebuild. Because of World War II, certain building materials were in short demand, inspiring the creative use of plaster, stucco and similar materials for architecture details in the sanctuary that were more commonly constructed in wood or built from stone. The results are impressive!

Joining Marquette Bank as 2007 Home Tour Sponsors are: Transportation Sponsors -- Sherwin Williams Paint and The Maids Home Services; Community Builders -- Prudential Biros Real Estate, PRS Realtors, and The Care of Trees; Community Support Sponsors -- Molloy & Associates, Belhaven Nursing & Rehabilitation Center, Touches of Illusion, Fitzgerald Real Estate, Standard Bank & Trust, Scott Broderick Insurance Services, MidAmerica Bank, Maxim Mortgage Corp., Pacor Mortgage Corp., Beverly's Pantry, BancFirst Mortgage Co., and The Beverly Review.

Tickets for the 37th annual Beverly Hills/Morgan Park Home Tour are $25 in advance or $30 at the door, and are available by calling the Beverly Area Planning Association at (773) 233-3100 or online at www.bapa.org. F.O.P. Chicago Lodge #7 Distinguished Service Awards

Mark Donahue, President of the Fraternal Order of Police, Chicago Lodge #7, recently presented the Distinguished Service Award to Chicago Police Officers Thomas Dornig, Frederick Hasenfang, Joel Mills, Robert Hauser, Marco Campos and Michael Jakob.

The Officers were conducting an investigation on a narcotics shipment in the 008th District. When Officers Hasenfang and Dornig observed a suspicious U Haul truck parked between two semi-trucks in the extreme rear of a parking lot they decided to investigate. Numerous plastic wrapped bundles of cannabls and cocaine were discovered. The estimated total value of the seizure was $23 million. This is the largest amount of narcotics ever recovered by members of the 008th.

President Donahue stated "It is with great appreciation that the Fraternal Order of Police, Chicago Lodge #7, award these Officers with the Distinguished Service Award."

Toxic Exposure from High-VOC Cleaning Products

Editor:

The U.S. EPA estimates that businesses spend $75 million a year on health costs for employees directly attributable to toxic exposure from high-VOC (volatile organic compounds) cleaning products.

High-VOC products not only pose a threat to the health of workers but to everyone who suffers from breathing and heart problems triggered by air pollution. Volatile organic compounds are primary ingredients in air pollution. The lower the VOC emissions, the better the air we breathe. We can all play a part in making our air cleaner to breathe.

Merchandise Mart Properties, Inc. took action to reduce the VOCs they contribute to the environment. In the last year, the Merchandise Mart has reduced air pollution by over 200,000 pounds, just by switching from "high-VOC" to "low-VOC" cleaning products, a strategy recommended by Clean Air Counts, a voluntary, pollution reduction program of the Metropolitan Mayors Caucus.

This spring, the Merchandise Mart and Clean Air Counts urges consumers and businesses to 'Clean Green this Spring.' Homeowners can protect their families and reduce pollution by switching from high-VOC over-the-counter household cleaners to environmentally safe low-VOC products or safer alternatives, such as vinegar, baking soda and lemons.

For businesses, the switch can be as easy as asking your cleaning supplier to recommend the low-VOC alternative to your current cleaning supplies. Most commercial and industrial cleaning supply companies have an environmentally friendly, low-VOC product line.

From glass cleaner to floor stripper, companies use vast quantities of cleaning supplies. Replace your high-VOC product with a low-VOC or no-VOC product that can reduce indoor pollution in a building by thousands of pounds. Find information on implementing a low-VOC cleaning program complete with a list of low-VOC product suppliers in the Low-VOC Cleaning Fact Sheet at www.CleanAirCounts.org

In the six-county Chicago region, we are fortunate that consumers and businesses have a great resource to reduce pollution, Clean Air Counts, a free, voluntary program of the Metropolitan Mayors Caucus. I urge you to do your part. Visit www.CleanAirCounts.org today for everything you need to know. And remember, "Clean Green this Spring."

Technology Demonstration

Hazelgreen Elementary School is among nearly 100 schools statewide that will participate in the 16th annual TECH 2007 Students for the Information Age event on Tuesday, May 8th at the Illinois State Capitol Building in Springfield.

Students will show the public, and elected members of the Illinois State Senate and the House of Representatives, how technology is being used in the classroom to improve achievement. Computer workstations will be set up in the Capitol Building Rotunda so students can show how technology has helped them with their schoolwork.

Taking part in the demonstrations are two of Mrs. Strale's third grade students. Students researched different ethnic holiday traditions and incorporated the information learned into a technological presentation.

The purpose of TECH 2007 is to show how Illinois is preparing students to succeed in the Information Age. Students will demonstrate for lawmakers and the public creative ways technology is being used to enhance and accelerate student achievement in Illinois schools today. The importance of this event lies in making the public aware of the central role technology has come to play in our schools and generating support for its adequate funding.

TECH 2007 is a not-for-profit initiative presented by Illinois Computing Educators. Hazelgreen is pleased to support and be a part of TECH 2007.

Safety On College Campuses

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently announced three initiatives to enhance safety for students, faculty, staff and visitors at Illinois institutions of higher education. The governor's initiatives, which build upon his K-12 school security initiatives instituted in 2005, include creation of a task force charged with developing training to help colleges prepare for, respond to and recover from emergencies; over $300,000 in grants to improve interoperable communications capabilities on campuses; and the addition of college officials and campus security representatives to the multi-agency Illinois Terrorism Task Force (ITTF), which develops and implements the state's homeland security strategy.

The governor's college security initiatives announced on April 29th expand upon his earlier school security initiatives for grades K-12 contained in the School Safety Drill Act. Signed into law in August 2005, the Act includes:

- Creation of a School Security Training Project to enhance school safety and emergency operations planning.
- Creation of an "All-Hazards" school emergency drill statute to replace existing fire, bus and tornado drill statutes with streamlined rules.
- Creation of a comprehensive new state model emergency planning guide for schools, which included merging and updating two existing guides.

In addition to his other requests, the governor has directed the Illinois Campus Security Task Force to re-examine the state's School Safety Drill Act to determine if some provisions should be amended to include colleges.

Box Lunch Day

The Oak Lawn Senior Center has started a new event called "Box Lunch Day." It is a day which includes a hot lunch with refreshments, bingo, an informational program and social time. In order to make this affordable to village seniors local businesses help by sponsoring the day.

May's sponsor will be Thompson & Kuenster Funeral Home, 5570 W. 95th St. As a sponsor they will be given an opportunity to explain what they have to offer the seniors. Mr. Kuenster will be discussing funeral preplanning on Thursday, May 31st. The subject of funerals is never easy to discuss but by doing so in advance it can be a worthwhile experience in light of the impact one's own death will have on loved ones. A well planned service warms the soul and illuminates the memory. With a well planned funeral, the options for a more meaningful tribute are limited only by the imagination.

The presentation begins at 10:30 a.m. and attendance at the presentation is necessary to receive a lunch. The cost to the senior is $3 and tickets may be purchased at the Center, 5330 W. 95th St. Seating is limited.

New Police Station Tours

The Village of Orland Park Police Department's new 63,000 square foot, state-of-the-art police headquarters is close to completion. Tours of the new facility at 15100 S. Ravinia Ave. will open to the public on Thursday, May 3rd and Tuesday, May 8th from 6 to 8 p.m.

"We wanted to conduct public tours before the department moves in to avoid interfering with police operations," said Chief Tim McCarthy. "This way the public will be able to see the entire facility."

The completely redesigned building, which formerly housed a tile and carpet warehouse, includes an alternative lighting system and an energy-saving heating system, as well as a cistern that is underground in front of the station to collect rainwater for irrigating lawns and landscaping. The new headquarters will provide enough space to meet the department's needs for the next 40 years.

The department is scheduled to move into the new headquarters in May.

For more information, contact the Orland Park Police Department at (708) 349-4111.

House Passes Two Key Election Reforms

Cook County Clerk David Orr lauded the Illinois House for overwhelmingly passing HB 1685 to allow high school juniors to serve as election judges. This bill is part of Orr's legislative package for 2007.

The measure must now go to the Senate.

Other legislative measures passed the House. HB 1752 would increase pay for election judges throughout Illinois. The other, HB 1753, would create a commission to study voter registration on Election Day in Illinois. Rep. Lou Lang is the chief sponsor of both.

Other parts of Orr's legislative package are advancing through the legislative process. Illinois' current Motor Voter rules do not allow people who register by mail to vote absentee their first time. This caveat has disenfranchised college students as well as other voters who have been out of town on Election Day. A measure sponsored by Rep. Julie Hamos would rectify this problem.

For election results from the April 17th Consolidated Election, visit www.voterinfo.net. For other information and services from the clerk's office, go to www.cookclerk.com.

Father Joseph Auer Celebrates Golden Jubilee

Father Joseph Auer, pastor emeritus of St. Linus Parish in Oak Lawn, celebrates his 50th anniversary as a priest Saturday, May 5th. The festivities begin at 4 p.m. with a Jubilee Mass of Thanksgiving at the church, 103rd and Lawler. Father's extended family and friends will celebrate at a reception in the parish center immediately following.

Father Auer served parishes throughout the Archdiocese of Chicago and worked for several years in southern Cook County. After his ordination by the late Samuel Cardinal Stritch, Father Auer was assigned to St. Thomas More, later Most Holy Redeemer in Evergreen Park. He also served at St. Bridget, St. Ferdinand, Queen of the Universe, St. Catherine LaBoure, and St. Theresa.

In addition to his parish work, Father Auer taught at Quigley Preparatory Seminary early in his priesthood.

In 1990, the late Joseph Cardinal Bernardin appointed Father Auer pastor of St. Linus Parish which he led until his retirement in 2001. Under his leadership, active lay ministries continued to thrive and the parish's "Jesus, Light of the World Chapel," (a 24 hour adoration center) was established. Known for his mild, cheerful manner, Father Auer related well to children and adults of all ages. A good steward, Father Auer, faithfully led his parish with both great compassion and resolve.

Although "retired" and residing at the Bishop Lyne Residence, Father Auer remains a very active member of St. Linus's clerical team.

Governor Proposes $10.9 Billion Multiyear Highway Improvement Program

Acting Illinois Dept. of Transportation Secretary Milt Sees recently unveiled Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich's $10.9 billion multiyear Highway Improvement Program (MYP) for the fiscal years 2008 through 2013. The multiyear plan focuses on maintenance of the current road system. The MYP compliments $3 billion in capital road projects included in Gov. Blagojevich's Tax Fairness Plan proposed in Senate Bill 1. The MYP and the bonded capital program would result in nearly $13.9 billion of highway investments over the next six years.

In the proposed MYP announced on April 19th, $7.67 billion will be used on the state's highway system, while $3.21 billion will be used on local roads. On the state system, $5.6 billion – or almost three-fourths – will be used for roadway maintenance, safety and bridge repair. Funding for urban area congestion relief totals $1.4 billion, while $640 million is targeted to expand the system with new roads to increase access and promote economic development.

The FY 2008-13 MYP is based upon conservative estimates of federal, state and local funding, including $7.037 billion in federal funds, $3.127 billion in state funds and $711 million in local funds. The federal portion of the MYP is based upon anticipated levels established in the federal transportation legislation known as SAFETEA-LU.

The following major projects in the area are tentatively scheduled during FY 2008-2013.

Northeastern Illinois

Interstate 55 at Arsenal Road in Will County – Interchange reconstruction, bridge replacement, land acquisition, lighting and engineering are programmed at a cost of $59.5 million. This work is being done in conjunction with the development of the Joliet Arsenal facility which, when completed, will be the largest intermodal facility in the nation.

Interstate 55 at Illinois 59 (Cottage Street) in Will County – Bridge replacement, interchange reconstruction, auxiliary lanes, lighting, retaining wall and construction engineering at a cost of $22.3 million. Of this total, $2.7 million is programmed in FY 2008 for reconstruction of frontage roads and construction engineering.

facing for 14.5 miles, commuter parking, bridge repair, police hire-backs and noise barriers at a cost of $104.1 million. Of this total, $81.9 million is programmed in FY 2008 for additional lanes, widening and resurfacing, bridge repair and commuter parking.

Knee wall construction, fencing, landscaping, bridge replacement, construction engineering and police hire-backs at a cost of $47.7 million. Of this total, $7.5 million is programmed in FY 2008 for bridge replacement at Root Street, police hire-backs and construction engineering.

Interstate 94 (Bishop Ford Expressway) from west of Martin Luther King Drive to US 6 in Cook County – Resurfacing on 9.6 miles and engineering for contract plans at a cost of $20.4 million. Of this total, $625,000 is programmed in FY 2008 for engineering for contract plans.

US 6 (159th St.) from Interstate 294 to Illinois 1 (Halsted St.) – Reconstruction on 2.3 miles, bridge replacement, new structure, railroad relocation, railroad flagger, intersection improvement, construction engineering, utility adjustment and lighting at an estimated cost of $56.4 million.

The entire FY 2008-2013 MYP is available online at the Illinois Dept. of Transportation web site, www.dot.il.gov.

Rita Seeks Answers On I-57/I-294 Interchange

State Rep. Bob Rita, D-Blue Island, (center) held a hearing in Blue Island recently to gather information on the status of the ongoing effort to connect I-57 and I-294 with an interchange and to show the state agencies involved the wide-ranging support for continuing the stalled project.

"With dozens of local mayors in attendance and a total of 72 mayors backing this plan, we spoke with a unified voice that this interchange needs to move forward," Rita said. "I can't remember a local construction project that has enjoyed this much support."

In addition to local mayors' presence, regional transportation planning officials and representatives from the offices of U.S. Reps. Jesse Jackson Jr. (D-Illinois) and Bobby Rush (D-Illinois) offices were on hand to hear a project update from the Illinois State Toll Highway Authority and the Illinois Department of Transportation.

Rita is chairman of the House Committee on Tollway Oversight.

Financial Report Shows Cook County Meeting Budget Targets Overall

Recently, Cook County Board President Todd Stroger released a four-month financial summary that shows all overall expenditures are running at 32.40% - just under the expected rate for the first third of the fiscal year.

The four-month report is part of a larger system of budget accountability that Stroger has put in place, including new monthly reports on targeted and actual spending that are now issued no later than 30 days after the end of the month. The monthly report was issued 18 days after the close of the month. The new reporting initiatives are part of the administration's commitment to provide the Cook County Board and the public with access to timely information about department budget expenditures. More broadly, the measures are designed to help County agencies meet current spending requirements and begin rebuilding the County's fund balance reserves, an approach that is expected to preserve and over the long term enhance the County's strong bond rating.

"For Cook County to fulfill its mission, every department must shoulder the burden of financial discipline - and transparency and accountability play a core role in that process," said Stroger.

The new reporting parameters are designed to foster budget discipline among agencies and the Board, emphasize the importance of the budget as both a management tool and a legal document, and encourage spending control.

Overall, departments in the corporate fund are at 26.58% of spending for the year and departments in the public safety fund are at 28.73% of expenditures for the year - both well under the target expenditure rate of 33.33%.

Expenditures in the health fund are at 38.62% for the year, a figure health officials believe can be reduced considerably by bringing expenditures on pharmaceuticals down via co-pays for prescriptions, and by recapturing funds from insurance companies and other third party payers to which the County is entitled.

"We have also centralized purchasing at the bureau level to take advantage of bulk purchasing," says Tom Glaser, Chief Financial Officer of the Bureau of Health Services. "This has the added benefit of making it easier to monitor inventory on hand throughout the Bureau. We're also moving patient registration under finance, which will significantly reduce the amount of time it takes to generate and distribute an accurate bill for services provided."

"This four-month report, coupled with our new monthly reporting structure, is designed to help departments get their arms around their expenditures more effectively and meet their bottom line," says County Comptroller Joe Fratto. "The point is not to be punitive, but to provide timely information that encourages a climate of fiscal discipline that will help us meet our core mission within our spending imperatives."

House Passage Of Ethics Reform Bill Signals "Beginning Of The End"

"This is the beginning of the end for pay-to-play politics in Illinois," Comptroller Dan Hynes said recently, after the Illinois House of Representatives approved an ethics reform bill that will reduce the corrupting influence of campaign contributions on the awarding of state contracts.

House Bill 1, drafted by Hynes and sponsored by Rep. John Fritchey (D-Chicago), prohibits business owners with more than $25,000 in state contracts from making campaign contributions to officeholders awarding those contracts, requires contractors to disclose previous contributions and prevents individuals with conflicts of interest from receiving fees from state bond sales.

"The House sent a very clear message today that Illinois government is not for sale and business-as-usual will not be tolerated," Hynes said. "These reforms will act as a strong deterrent to backroom deals and quid pro quo governance. It is my hope that they will also help restore public faith in government."

Fritchey said passage of the bill would allow the Legislature to focus on other important issues. "For too long, headlines have been dominated by corruption and pay-to-play politics, rather than key issues such as education funding reform, property taxes, and affordable health care. This legislation will not only put an end to this practice which has no place in state government, but will allow us to focus upon issues that are important to the people of Illinois."

Cindy Canary, Director of the Illinois Campaign for Political Reform, called on the Illinois Senate to follow suit and pass House Bill 1. "The House, by this solid vote, has recognized the concerns of Illinois voters and has stood up and done the right thing. It is now squarely in the hands of the Senate to respond in kind."

Jay Stewart, Executive Director of the Better Government Assn., applauded House passage of the reform bill. "This will help establish a separation between campaign contributions and lucrative state contracts. Given the contracting scandals that have beset the State of Illinois in recent years, the reform is long overdue."

By THOMAS E. GAVIN

Last week Governor Rod Blagojevich marked the fourth anniversary of signing into law of the Equal Pay Act in Illinois. The Governor sighted the state's progress in eliminating gender-based wage discrimination in the workplace and ensuring female workers receive equal pay for equal work. Since the Illinois Equal Pay Act went into effect in January 2004, the Illinois Department of Labor (IDOL) has responded to about 3,500 calls on the Equal Pay Hotline, handling 249 cases, negotiated 10 private settlements between employees and employers, and recovered almost $30,000 in back wages.

The Governor and IDOL launched an aggressive Equal Pay Act awareness campaign in 2004. They established a toll-free hotline: 1-866-EPA-IDOL, sent thousands of posters to the largest employers in the state as a required posting, used bus and train posters in the Chicagoland area, and aired and published public service announcements throughout the state of Illinois.

Illinois' Equal Pay Act prohibits employers with four or more employees from paying unequal wages to men and women doing the same or substantially similar working conditions. There are exceptions such as if the wage difference is based upon a seniority system, merit system, a system measuring earnings by quantity or quality of production or factors other than gender. The law protects both men and women from pay disparity and any individual who files an Equal Pay complaint is protected under the Act from harassment or retaliation. For more information on Illinois Equal Pay Act or to file a complaint, call the Illinois Department of Labor's Equal Pay hotline at 866-EPA-IDOL. Complaint forms can also be downloaded from the Department's website: www.state.il.us/agency/idol.

Last week over 800 teachers rallied in Springfield in support of legislative efforts to provide new state funding for the state's colleges and universities. At the rally, Judy Erwin, Chairman of the board of Higher Education, highlighted the Governor's "Investing in Families" plan that will provide $300 million in new support over the next four years for colleges and universities.

Representatives from the Illinois Education Assn., the Illinois Federation of Teachers, SEIU and AFSCME joined together to request lawmakers provide the much-needed support for Illinois higher education system. These investments would be made possible through the Governor's Tax Fairness Plan that intends to usher in a sweeping transformation of the state's tax system that would shift the tax burden away from individuals, who have been carrying an increasing share of the burden over the past thirty years, to large businesses, which have paid little or no income tax!

We will keep our readers apprised of this critical legislation's journey through Springfield's hallowed chambers.

Good news! Cook County Board President Todd Stroger and Cook County Sheriff Tom Dart held a joint news conference recently to announce the rehiring of 40 janitors who were laid off as a result of $500 million in budget cuts for fiscal year 2007. The rehired employees worked for the Sheriff's Office and will be reassigned to clean the Cook County Building at 118 N. Clark St. and the Juvenile Court Complex.

By state statute, the Sheriff is the custodian of all County courthouses, hence Dart's inclusion. The funds to rehire the workers were made available by not renewing a contract with an outside vendor, saving 1.25 million dollars. The returning employees will be rehired based on seniority, under the terms of the labor contract between their union, SEIU Local 73, and Cook County.

On Saturday, May 12th, the Animal Welfare League, located at 10305 Southwest Highway in Chicago Ridge, will host its annual Spring Open House. The hours will be from 1 until 5 p.m. Animal lovers of all ages are invited to enjoy behind the scenes shelter tours, refreshments, raffles, a bake sale, entertainment and professional pet photography. Additionally a pet blessing will be given at 2 p.m. For those pet owners who have not insured their pets recognition, an Avid Micro-Chipping Special, regularly $37, will be offered for just $15.

The Animal Welfare League is a non-profit humane organization which operates two shelters in the Chicagoland area, caring for over 30,000 homeless and abandoned animals each year. They receive no local, state or federal funding and rely on private donations. For more information, call (708) 636-8586, ext. 227.

The 2007 Greater Chicago Epilepsy Walk will take place on Saturday, May 12th in Danada Forest Preserve in Wheaton and on Saturday, May 19th in Lincoln Park (Chicago). This is the Epilepsy Foundation of Greater Chicago's seventh annual 5k (3.1 mile) walk and fun run.

Both walks begin at 9:30 a.m. Participant check-in begins at 8 a.m. The registration fee is $25 for adults and teens ages 13 and older, and $15 for children ages 7-12. On Friday, May 18th, the Second Annual Golf Outing of the Evergreen Park Community High School Foundation for Education Excellence will be held at Deer Creek Golf Club in University Park. All proceeds from this outing will provide scholarships and classroom enrichment experiences for students at Evergreen Park Community High School.

Sponsorships and raffle prizes will likewise be appreciated. For more information contact the EPCHS Foundation, Attn.: Jim Gustafson, 9901 S. Kedzie Ave., Evergreen Park, IL 60805 or call (708) 424-7400, ext. 232.

"Walk For The Whisper"

The Illinois Chapter of the National Ovarian Cancer Coalition will hold its 10th Annual "Walk for the Whisper" on Saturday, May 5th. After nine years at Naperville's Riverwalk, this year's Walk will take place in the Chicago Park District's Grove 13 in Lincoln Park. Registration for the three-mile walk, held rain or shine, will begin at 9 a.m. followed by opening ceremonies, with the walk beginning at 10 a.m.

Advance registration is $30 for adults and $15 for children 12 and younger. Children in strollers are free. Participants are encouraged to provide additional support through pledges. Participants will receive T-shirts, refreshments and goodie bags.

It is estimated that one in 55 women will develop ovarian cancer in her lifetime. Every woman is at risk.

This year, it is estimated that 22,430 new cases of ovarian cancer will be diagnosed and 15,280 will die from this disease — making ovarian cancer the number one cause of death from all gynecological cancers and the fourth cause of cancer death in women.

The "Walk for the Whisper" takes its name from the nature of ovarian cancer's symptoms ... symptoms so vague, they whisper. "Ovarian cancer symptoms are vague. As a result, early diagnosis is key and can increase a woman's chance for survival," explains Luann Anderson, NOCC-IL Division Coordinator. "Because our event has grown steadily over the years, we outgrew our original site in Naperville. This year we expect more than 3,500 walkers. With such dedicated supporters, and the backing of our sponsors, we hope to raise over $200,000 for ovarian cancer awareness" stated Luann.

NOCC-IL is a state chapter of the National Ovarian Cancer Coalition, a not-for-profit corporation headquartered in Boca Raton, Florida. For more information about the "Walk for the Whisper" call (630) 769-1664 or e-mail il.nocc@ovarian.org. Registration is available at active.com/active (type in walk for the whisper in the search box). For more information on ovarian cancer, visit www.ovarian.org.

Chicago's "Birth Story"

Friends of the Chicago Portage will host a free premier showing of their new video documentary about the Chicago Portage National Historic Site on Saturday, May 5th at 1 p.m. at the Willow Springs Senior Center (the old Village Hall), 8156 Archer Ave. in Willow Springs.

The 30-minute video documentary titled "Connecting Worlds, The Story of the Chicago Portage" was produced by Friends member and experienced local video producer Mark MacLean. MacLean says: "I got involved with this site because it's right in our backyard and very few people know its amazing story. The Chicago Portage National Historic Site is the only place where you can stand on the same ground walked upon by all the explorers, early settlers and creators of Chicago."

The documentary features interviews with local historians, tour guides, site stewards and representatives from the Forest Preserve District (the site's owner) who illuminate the site's history, significance and present a vision for the future. Friends of the Chicago Portage plans to use the documentary to educate school groups and the general public. The DVD will not be for sale but is available to new and renewing members of the organization.

Free refreshments and a brief discussion about upcoming projects in Portage Woods will follow the showing. Author and Portage Historian Phil Vierling will be on hand to distribute free past issues of his "Portage Ledger," which present his methodical explorations and examination of the Portage's history.

Friends of the Chicago Portage promotes the historic interpretation, ecological restoration and appropriate development of the Chicago Portage National Historic Site through volunteer advocacy, public events and other projects that raise public awareness of its history and significance.

WISCONSIN FISHING OPENER: Spring's roller-coaster weather has been sending Wisconsin fish mixed signals, but it's clear that the Saturday, May 5th opening day of the regular inland fishing season should be another great time on the water, the state's top fisheries official says.

"There's a tradition to opening day that you just can't beat, even though you can find great fishing at any time of the year in Wisconsin," says Mike Staggs, Wisconsin's fisheries director. "Opening day is as much about being with friends and families and their traditions as it is about catching fish. This year's a good year to take someone fishing who's never been, or who hasn't been fishing for a long time."

More than 1.4 million people 16 and older are expected to buy fishing licenses in Wisconsin this year. Anglers venturing out on opening day will find lots of fish, based on fish population reports that biologists filed for individual waters in the 2007 Wisconsin fishing report.

Whether those fish bite depends a lot on weather conditions and water temperatures, but now that many game species have finished spawning, anglers are likely to find hungry fish ready to strike. Fish don't feed much when spawning - they're paying attention to the need to reproduce - and after that's done they're ready to strap on the feedbag. (Wisconsin DNR News)

As you read this, I'll be on my way to Cable, Wisconsin for my "traditional" trout fishing trip on the Namekagon and White rivers in Bayfield, Wisconsin. With any luck, we will catch enough 'brookies' for a fine meal, and then concentrate on the walleyes.

ILLINOIS ANNUAL HUNTING AND FISHING LICENSES FOR DISABLED VETERANS: Illinois Department of Veteran's Affairs (IDVA) Director Tammy Duckworth announced that the annual free hunting and fishing licenses for disabled veterans issued by IDVA will now be a one-time permanent issue. The new policy will save disabled veterans throughout the state the inconvenience of a yearly trip to renew their license, which includes transportation costs and time.

"This new policy will make it easier for our veterans to be able to enjoy and experience the natural wonders of our country that they so bravely protected, without the hassle of having to go reissue it every year. I want to encourage our veterans to visit their local veteran office and apply for the free license. And remember, while visiting the veteran service office, veterans can learn about the other state programs and benefits that are available," IDVA Director Tammy Duckworth said.

TENS OF THOUSANDS SAFELY JOIN SPORTS MEN'S RANKS: The Families Afield program led to an astounding jump in the number of new hunters in 2006. The spotless safety record of the freshmen underscores the fact that mentored youth are the safest in the field.

Families Afield is a campaign established by the U.S. Sportsmen's Alliance, National Shooting Sports Foundation, and National Wild Turkey Federation to urge states to eliminate unnecessary hunting age restrictions to ease hunter education mandates for first-time hunters.

On March 20th, the USSA and its partners announced that half of the twelve states that have approved Families Afield legislation and regulations have already measured from Florida, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi and Ohio reveals that apprentice hunting license programs brought nearly 34,000 new hunters to the field without a single hunting-related incident.

GREAT LAKES PLAN FUNDING QUESTIONED: Ashland, Wis. (AP)-Federal officials, anglers and other conservation groups are hailing reauthorization of the Great Lakes Fish and Wildlife Restoration Act as proof of the high priority given to Great Lakes issues. But, while the act provides funding for a wide range of projects and promotes collaboration in restoration efforts, questions remain as to how much funding the federal government will actually put forth. (Great Lakes Basin Report)

NATURE PRESERVE, LAND AND WATER RESERVE ACTIONS: The Illinois Nature Preserves Commission (INPC) has announced the dedication of six nature preserves, as well as the registration of a new land and water reserve, working with landowners to provide long-term protection for more than 670 acres of natural habitat to benefit rare plants and wildlife.

All activities and access at nature preserves and land and water are only allowed with permission of the landowner. Land parcels that are dedicated as nature preserves may be used for hiking, wildlife viewing, nature photography and approved scientific research. Areas registered as land and water reserves may be used for those activities as well as hunting, fishing and other activities that do not harm or change the natural features of the protected area. In some cases, tax incentives and other benefits are available to landowners participating in the program.

Applications For Habitat Restoration And Enhancement Projects

The Illinois Landowner Incentive Program (LIP) will be accepting applications for habitat restoration and enhancement projects in the Lower Sangamon River Watershed through June 1st. Applications will be accepted at 12 Soil and Water Conservation Districts (SWCDs) including Cass, Christian, DeWitt, Logan, Macon, Macoupin, Mason, Menard, McLean, Piatt, Sangamon and Tazewell.

The LIP program is a cooperative effort between the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Illinois Dept. of Natural Resources and local SWCDs to help landowners manage for wildlife on private lands. The program is focused on implementing the Illinois Fish and Wildlife Action Plan and must show benefits to threatened and endangered species or species listed as being in 'greatest need of conservation' in the plan. LIP is currently restoring over 300 acres with 13 projects in the Lower Sangamon River Watershed and has provided technical assistance to improve another 1,000 acres through other private land programs.

LIP provides a number of benefits for landowners including cost share for approved management practices to restore or improve habitat quality on private land, to increase awareness of Illinois' natural resources and the needs of rare species, and to improve hunting and recreational opportunities on their property.

LIP is a management-based program and pays for 75% of the costs associated with implementing a management plan. Landowners can pay the remaining 25% of costs in cash or by working on approved practices from the management plan.

Proposed projects are evaluated by several criteria, including whether or not the site is protected with a permanent easement, the number of listed species present on the site, and whether the proposed project is consistent with the Illinois Fish and Wildlife Action Plan.

Of particular interest are areas currently designated 'Illinois Natural Areas Inventory' sites, Illinois Nature Preserves, Illinois Land and Water Reserves, and land adjacent to sites where rare species or habitats exist. The Landowner Incentive Program does not offer annual payments and it is not a land acquisition program. While the program is not geared towards taking land out of production, cropland that does restore habitat near high quality sites will be considered for funding. Landowners of the Lower Sangamon River Watershed should contact their local Soil and Water Conservation District for more information and to submit an eligibility form for potential projects.

Outdoor Track & Field Championships

More than 2,500 athletes from across the country are expected to converge upon the Village of Lisle-Benedictine University Sports Complex from July 3rd to 8th to compete in the 2007 USA Youth Outdoor Track & Field Championships.

Last year's national outdoor competition was held in Greensboro, North Carolina and attracted more than 2,000 athletes. The event is a national competition with entry based upon qualifying standards. In addition to talented individuals, the USA Youth Outdoor Track & Field Championships also attracts some of the country's top youth track clubs.

Messenger Marsh Closed

Messenger Marsh, located on South Bell Road in Homer Township, will be closed for the remainder of 2007 and into 2008 for major site improvements to the preserve.

The new improvements will include a picnic shelter, vehicle parking lot, horse trailer parking lot, restrooms, a bridge over Spring Creek, and an expanded and resurfaced trail.

For information, call the District at (815) 727-8700

Bird Walk Series

A series of spring bird walks will be held at The Center, 12700 Southwest Highway in Palos Park, on three Saturday mornings beginning May 5th from 7 to 8:30 a.m.

Biologist John Staudinger will lead these leisurely mornings of bird watching at the height of the spring bird migration season. The Center woods serve as a great stopover site for migrating warblers and songbirds on their way north to their summer breeding grounds. In past springs, scarlet tanagers, orioles, grosbeaks, and a multitude of warblers have been spotted near the lodge at The Center. Staudinger is a retired biology professor from Daley College and always provides a wealth of information and direction to bird lovers who join him on these walks. Sturdy hiking shoes for spring mud are recommended.

The program fee is $15 per person. Advance registration is requested. For further information, call (708) 361-3650.

Introduced Legislation To Increase Campus Security

U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) introduced legislation to strengthen the safety and security of college and university campuses. The Campus Law Enforcement Emergency Response Act of 2007 will ensure that all colleges and universities develop emergency response procedures and campus notification systems, and test them on at least an annual basis.

"The terrible tragedy at Virginia Tech has demonstrated the need for colleges and universities to be prepared for the worst type of emergencies," said Durbin. "Schools must develop and test procedures for responding to large-scale threats and dangerous incidents on their campuses. The legislation will help ensure that American colleges and universities have the ability and resources to protect the millions of students, faculty, staff and visitors they serve each year."

"Senator Durbin's bill effectively addresses concerns we have been raising for many years about how colleges are prepared to respond to threats to campus safety," said Catherine Bath, Executive Director of Security on Campus, Inc., a leading non-profit organization working to promote safer campuses. "We hope to see this bill quickly adopted for the sake of our nation's precious children."

The legislation would require colleges and universities to do the following:

Develop and distribute policies for responding to law enforcement emergencies, including procedures for notifying students and employees about such emergencies. The term "law enforcement emergency" would include situations that occur on a college campus, that involve a law enforcement response and that pose a potential threat of continuing danger;

Report on statistics concerning the occurrence of such emergencies;

Test their law enforcement emergency response procedures at least annually; and

Provide notification to the campus community no later than 30 minutes after the discovery of a law enforcement emergency situation.

In addition, this legislation authorizes the Department of Education to administer a competitive grant program for colleges and universities to develop and improve their emergency response procedures. Five million dollars would be provided for the first year of operation. Senator Barack Obama (D-IL) is an original cosponsor of this legislation.

Thoughts On Health & Nutrition

HAVE DIABETES. WILL TRAVEL

Heading out of town this summer? Off on an important business trip? Whenever and wherever you travel, if you are diabetic, your diabetes goes along with you! And while having diabetes shouldn't stop you from traveling "in style" in the warm weather ahead, you need to do some careful planning. To assist in your out-of-town adventures, I have listed some helpful tips from the National Diabetes Education Program, which should keep you enjoying your time away!

Plan ahead.

- Get all immunizations. Find out what is required for where you are traveling, and be certain to get the right injections.
- Control your ABCs: A1C, Blood pressure, and Cholesterol. See your health provider for a check-up to make certain you are within a healthy range.
- Ask your health provider for a prescription and a letter explaining your medications, supplies and any allergies. Carry this with you at all times in case of emergency.
- Wear an ID that explains you have diabetes. The identification should be written in the language of the countries you are visiting.
- Plan for time zone changes. Make certain you will always know when to take your diabetes medicine, no matter where you are. Remember; eastward travel means a shorter day. If you inject insulin, less may be needed. Westward travel means a longer day, so more insulin may be needed.
- Find out how long the flight will be and whether meals will be served. You should always carry enough food to cover the entire flight time in case of delays or unexpected schedule changes.

Pack Properly.

- Take twice the amount of diabetes medication and supplies that you would normally take—better to be safe than sorry.
- Keep your insulin cool. Use a refrigerated gel pack.
- Keep snacks, glucose gel, or tablets with you for low blood sugar.
- If you use insulin, be certain you also pack a glucagons emergency kit.
- Make certain you keep your medical insurance card and emergency phone numbers handy.
- Don't forget to pack first aid kit with all the essentials.

You may not be able to leave your diabetes behind, but you can control it and have an enjoyable time while traveling. To learn more, visit the National Diabetes Education Program at www.ndep.nih.gov.

Healthcare Officials Testify On Urgent Need For Illinois Covered Plan

The Senate Public Health and Human Services Committee on April 18th heard testimony from top healthcare officials from around the state on the urgent need for Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich's historic "Illinois Covered" plan to give every Illinoisan access to affordable and quality health coverage. The governor's plan will provide affordable coverage to the 1.4 million uninsured adults in Illinois and will also help many middle-income families and small businesses that are currently enrolled in health insurance plans save thousands of dollars a year on healthcare costs. It would also mean nearly $1.7 billion in new funding for hospitals and healthcare providers around the state. The governor's plan has been endorsed by the Illinois Hospital Assn. and numerous other medical provider organizations.

The cost of healthcare is rising dramatically nationwide, leaving more and more people uninsured, and forcing businesses to drop or significantly cut back coverage. As a result of faster-than-inflation rate increases, the number of uninsured nationally has increased by 6 million since 2000. The cost of providing health services to uninsured people puts significant pressure on families, the healthcare system and the state's economy:

- Lack of insurance is the sixth leading cause of death in the U.S.
- Medical-related bankruptcies have jumped 2,200% since 1981. The middle-class accounts for 90% of these cases. And in many of these cases, the families who suffered bankruptcies had health insurance. They just couldn't keep up with the rising costs.
- A FamiliesUSA study found that the health insurance premiums for families here in Illinois increased by $1059 due to costs incurred by the uninsured. As health insurance premiums increase and employers cut back on coverage, employers who continue offering benefits pay more.
- The HR Policy Analysis estimates the annual cost of reduced productivity due to uninsured workers in the nation's top 200 largest companies is between $87 billion and $126 billion.

Businesses are significantly impacted by skyrocketing healthcare costs. Over the past five years, health insurance premiums for businesses have increased nearly five times faster than inflation and four times faster than wage growth. While surveys show that employees consider health insurance to be the most important benefit and a leading reason to stay with an employer, the cost of health insurance premiums for employers increased nearly 87% between 2000 and 2006. In one startling example, General Motors now spends more money on a per-car basis on health insurance than it does on steel.

Viral Hepatitis Awareness

Despite the fact that HIV/AIDS gets the headlines, the most common blood-borne infection in Chicago and across the U.S. is hepatitis C. Hepatitis C is four times more common and more contagious than HIV, and if left undetected or untreated, the infection can pose serious and sometimes deadly health risks.

Hepatitis B and hepatitis C are most commonly transmitted through blood exposure and unprotected sex. Currently, there is a safe and effective vaccine for hepatitis B and numbers of acute infections are decreasing in the United States. No vaccine currently exists for hepatitis C, but treatments are available.

In light of these facts, the Chicago Dept. of Health joined together with hepatitis activists on May 2nd, Hepatitis Awareness Day, to increase awareness of hepatitis among residents and to urge State lawmakers to increase funding of hepatitis vaccination, screening and treatment programs for this disease that affects hundreds of thousands of Illinois residents. Funding would be used to increase the availability of vaccinations, screening and treatment of hepatitis at little or no cost to Illinois residents.

May 2nd began Hepatitis Awareness Month, which continues throughout May.

Most people who acquire acute infections of hepatitis B and hepatitis C do not develop symptoms, but some people experience jaundice or more commonly have flu-like symptoms such as fever, nausea, muscle aches, loss of appetite and fatigue. Long-term infections with hepatitis B and C can cause cirrhosis of the liver and can lead to life-threatening liver disease. It is very important for people at risk to find out if they have hepatitis B or C, see a doctor at least once a year, and practice good health behaviors such as eating fruits and vegetables and drinking plenty of water.

"Anyone at risk of hepatitis C should be screened using a simple blood test and should consider vaccination to protect against hepatitis A and B," said Dr. Terry Mason, Commissioner of Chicago's Dept. of Public Health, who emphasized that the vaccinations are safe, effective and virtually pain-free.

Mason urged Chicagoans to go to their personal physician or one of the many clinics that provide free or low-cost services during Hepatitis Awareness Month and throughout the year.

For more information on hepatitis, including screening, vaccination and testing contact your health professional or local health clinic. For more assistance, call 1(800) 243-2437 to get more detailed information.

May Is National Healthy Vision Month

In honor of "Healthy Vision Month," taking place in May, EyeCare America encourages people to call its Glaucoma EyeCare Program. Healthy Vision Month is an annual observance designed to raise awareness of the importance of eye care for those at risk of developing eye and vision problems. This year, NEI is encouraging individuals to get an eye exam and to spread the word about glaucoma. To keep vision in your future, know the facts and see an eye care professional for a dilated eye exam.

In a healthy eye, fluid is constantly being made and drained through a microscopic, drainage canal. When something blocks or prevents this natural drainage, the pressure inside the eye goes up. Glaucoma is often caused by increased pressure that can develop when the fluids in the eye are not draining properly. This condition eventually damages the nerve that connects the eye to the brain (the optic nerve) and leads to loss of vision.

In honor of Healthy Vision Month 2007, EyeCare America, the public service foundation of the American Academy of Ophthalmology, encourages those without insurance to take advantage of its national Glaucoma EyeCare Program. The program offers glaucoma eye exams for those at increased risk of glaucoma. To see if you, a loved one or a friend, is eligible to receive a referral for an eye exam and care, call 1-800-391-EYES (3937), 24 hours a day, every day, year round. All eligible callers receive a referral to one of EyeCare America's 7,200 volunteer ophthalmologists. *Those eligible for a referral through the glaucoma program receive a glaucoma eye exam and the initiation of treatment, if deemed necessary. Uninsured patients receive the above care at no charge.

"A dilated eye examination is essential to protecting the vision of those at higher risk for glaucoma," noted Anne L. Coleman, M.D., Ph.D., Frances and Ray Stark Professor of Ophthalmology at UCLA's Jules Stein Eye Institute and chair of the glaucoma subcommittee for NEI's National Eye Health Education Program. "If glaucoma is detected early, treatments such as medication, conventional surgery, or laser surgery can slow or stop vision loss. High pressure inside the eye, which may be associated with glaucoma, does not by itself mean that you have glaucoma. Only a dilated eye exam and evaluation of the optic nerve can tell you that."

While occasionally, the condition may come on suddenly; most cases progress so slowly there are often no warning signs before damage inside the eye has already occurred. In many cases, a person's side vision (peripheral vision) is affected.

While the causes for glaucoma are not completely known, we do know that risk factors for its development include family history, race and older age. Glaucoma may affect people of any age from newborns to the elderly but is more common in adults as they approach their senior years. African-Americans, Hispanics and people with diabetes are also at higher risk of getting the disease.

Glaucoma can be treated with any of the following: Eye drops that lower eye pressure; Laser therapy that allows for better drainage of fluids inside the eye; and Eye surgery to create a new drainage canal.

If not treated, glaucoma can and does lead to total blindness: Glaucoma is easily detected with a medical eye examination. Ophthalmologists (medical eye doctors) can measure the pressure inside the eye with a quick and painless, office test. Glaucoma doesn't have to interfere with leading a happy, sighted and fulfilling life. Detecting the disease early can save your sight!

The Glaucoma EyeCare Program promotes early detection and treatment of glaucoma. It raises awareness of glaucoma risk factors, provides free glaucoma educational materials and facilitates access to a glaucoma eye examination.

The Glaucoma EyeCare Program is designed for people who: Are US citizens or legal residents; have not had an eye exam in 12 months or more; and are deemed to be at increased risk for glaucoma (as determined by family history, race, age).

People may call the toll-free help line at 1-800-391-EYES (3937) anytime, for themselves and/or family members and friends, to see if they qualify for a glaucoma eye exam or to request free eye care information.

The National Eye Institute (NEI) is part of the National Institutes of Health (NIH) and is the Federal government's lead agency for vision research that leads to sight-saving treatments and plays a key role in reducing visual impairment and blindness. For more information, visit the NEI Website at <http://www.nei.nih.gov/>.

The National Institutes of Health (NIH) - The Nation's Medical Research Agency - includes 27 Institutes and Centers and is a component of the U. S. Department of Health and Human Services. It is the primary Federal agency responsible for conducting and supporting basic, clinical, and translational medical research, and it investigates the causes, treatments, and cures for both common and rare diseases. For more information about NIH and its programs, visit <http://www.nih.gov/>.

Call JULIE First

Spring has arrived, but before starting any outdoor projects which require digging, Nicor Gas urges their customers to call the new JULIE (Joint Utility Locating Information for Excavators) number, 811. Illinois law requires anyone digging, regardless of the depth of the project, to call JULIE.

811 is the new FCC designated national N-11 number created to eliminate confusion of multiple "call before you dig" numbers across the country. Callers can still also reach JULIE at the traditional toll-free number, 1(800) 892-0123; however, the new 811 free service number offers increased speed and convenience.

Whether planting a tree, installing a mailbox, building a fence or preparing a garden, Nicor Gas urges anyone doing the work to call JULIE before digging. Calling protects homeowners and contractors from the potential danger and legal responsibility of damaging underground gas pipes or other utilities.

JULIE serves as a message handling service for underground utilities, taking information about planned digging projects and distributing the information to the proper utility company. It is then the responsibility of each utility (natural gas, electric, water, sewer or communication) to mark the location of their underground pipes and wires at the excavation site. JULIE neither owns nor marks any underground utilities.

Homeowners and contractors are required by law to call JULIE in advance of any dig project. The call is free, and operators are available to receive and process calls 24 hours a day, seven days a week. If customers are unsure about whether to dig, Nicor Gas recommends they call in all cases - just to be sure.

Projects requiring a call to JULIE include, but are not limited to:

- Planting trees, shrubs or flowers.
- Installing a fence, swing set or mailbox post.
- Adding a pool, pond or fountain.
- Building a deck or room addition.

Teachers And Staff Promote A Caring Atmosphere

Oak Lawn Community High School is well under way in establishing a Social and Emotional Learning (SEL) program. Imagine a school where all the teachers, administrators, staff and students know and greet each other by name; where teachers feel valued and are called upon to lead efforts; counselors, social workers, cafeteria workers, secretaries are involved in running the school and participate in community efforts. Parents and community members would always feel welcomed and encouraged to participate in school activities, students and staff trust one another and diversity is celebrated. In the hallways and cafeteria, students are calm and orderly, student artwork is displayed prominently, and referrals to the dean's office are rare.

"We believe that we have many of these wonderful things already in place, but we need to strive to offer our young people the environment in which they can develop positively," Lee Stanley, Division Chair for Pupil Personnel, Special Education, and English as a Second Language said. A caring environment may not cure all students' problems, but it can teach social skills and build resiliency in students. Students are somewhat protected from participating in high risk behaviors when they are surrounded by adults that truly care, according to Search Institute in Minneapolis.

Last spring all OLCHS students took the Search Institutes Behavior Youth Survey. Almost 75% of the student body reported feeling safe while attending school and almost the same percentage reported discussing career interests with their parents, both positive assets. According to Stanley, the survey also revealed that as a staff we had some work to do as far as creating a more positive climate and offering students opportunities to volunteer.

OLCHS offers programs for students, such as mentoring, clubs and sport activities, leadership positions, and counseling and social work groups, but recognized that they need a program that would systematically bring all the efforts together. They formulated an SEL Committee with students, staff, parents, and community members. "The group, along with the OLCHS staff has received training from the Collaborative for Academic, Social and Emotional Learning at UIC," Stanley said. "They have provided a framework for us to formulate our action plan."

Social and emotional learning is the process through which students learn to recognize and manage emotions. It allows them to understand and interact with others, to make good decisions and to behave ethically and responsibly.

The Illinois State Board of Education has blazed a new path in regards to social and emotional learning. Illinois is one of three states that have adopted social and emotional learning standards as part of their state standards. The goals that ISBE has set for the Social and Emotional Learning Standards are three-fold:

- 1) Develop self-awareness and self-management skills to achieve school and life success;
- 2) Use social-awareness and interpersonal skills to establish and maintain positive relationships;
- 3) Demonstrate decision-making skills and responsible behaviors in personal, school, and community contexts.

There is research indicating that large numbers of children are contending with significant social, emotional, and mental health barriers impeding their success in school and in life. Competence in the use of SEL skills is promoted in the context of safe and supportive school, family, and community learning environments in which students feel valued and respected and connected to and engaged in health, ethical development, citizenship, motivation to achieve and academic success too.

OLCHS has established a 24-hour service learning graduation requirement for the incoming Class of 2011. Students will be required to complete that service during their next four years. To kick off this new requirement, the staff will also become involved. On April 23, the entire faculty of OLCHS participated in a partial day SEL activity. The staff not only gave back to the Oak Lawn community, but they checked out future volunteer sites for the students. "We want our students to develop caring and concern for others, establish positive relationships, make responsible decisions, and handle challenging situations effectively," Stanley said. "Many students will take this opportunity of volunteering and use it to explore career options."

Kelly Briscoe, the school's career facilitator, organized the staff effort for April 23, and she will also organize the student effort next year. "At the present time we have over 12 different sites committed. Staff will be volunteering in the village by helping senior citizens with lawn clean-up, set up through the village hall. Others will be working at the animal shelter, Oak Lawn Family Services will be contacting several families they serve to come in and have lunch with staff members. Other staff members will be working at PADS shelters and Sertoma.

Staff members will make contact and take photos of the day's efforts. These photos will be displayed for all OLCHS students to see. "We will also hold a volunteer fair next fall for all agencies and groups to come in and interview our students for potential volunteer sites. We are excited to be able to model the behavior we would want in all our students," Stanley said.

OLCHS also offers a Parent University program for all our parents and feeder school parents. The focus for the 2007-08 school year will be on how families and community members can teach and support SEL in all aspects of students' lives.

"The SEL programming will provide a framework for preventing problems and promoting students' well-being and success way beyond the classroom," Stanley concluded.

Attempting To Charge For Free Emergency Device

Attorney General Lisa Madigan and Director of the Illinois Dept. on Aging Charles D. Johnson warned that some senior citizens have received phone calls asking for payment for an emergency home response device which is provided to qualified individuals free of charge.

Officials from the Illinois Dept. on Aging (IDoA) notified Madigan's Consumer Fraud Bureau of a recent incident in which a client of the Department's Community Care Program in Jacksonville reported that a man identifying himself as "Luke Grant" called from what appeared on Caller ID to be an Arizona phone exchange. He asked the person for a credit card number to charge $399.97 for what he termed was a "hook-up fee" for the emergency home device.

IDoA officials stress that the devices are provided free to clients through the department's Community Care Program.

"Unfortunately, far too many scam artists try to target seniors. The good news here is that this quick-thinking senior did not fall for this scam and was even able to jot down a phone number that may help in locating the perpetrator," Madigan said.

Calls like the one involved in this scam are fraudulent attempts to obtain personal information that could be used to financially exploit senior citizens.

Madigan's Consumer Fraud Bureau and the IDoA noted that the best way for all consumers to avoid fraud is to ignore unsolicited requests and report them to family or other trusted individuals, local and area law enforcement and social service agencies.

Consumers also can visit Madigan's Web site for more consumer protection information and can download a consumer complaint form at www.IllinoisAttorneyGeneral.gov or by calling the Consumer Fraud Hotline, 1(800) 386-5438, TTY 1(800) 964-3013.

More information on qualifications for the Community Care Program can be obtained by calling the Illinois Dept. on Aging Senior HelpLine at 1(800) 252-8966, TTY (888) 206-1327.

24-Hour Health TV Channel

A new, 24-hour health education TV channel is now available to patients and their family members at St. Francis Hospital & Health Center in Blue Island.

On April 2, St. Francis began broadcasting "The Patient Channel" on Channel 17 on TVs in patient rooms and waiting rooms. The Patient Channel, a product of GE Healthcare and NBC, is designed to educate patients about common diseases, conditions and health care topics.

The channel delivers network-quality programming on topics such as: cancer, asthma, diabetes, heart disease, high blood pressure, smoking cessation, parenting, patient safety, taking medications, and nutrition. New programs will be added throughout the year.

The goal of the channel is to increase patient/family awareness of medical issues and encourage informed communication with health care providers.

"The Patient Channel will increase patient/family access to quality, up-to-date education content," said Allison Reid, RN, MS, CNS, clinical nurse specialist at St. Francis Hospital. "It also will improve the patient's ability to make informed decisions, and promotes a sense of empowerment during times when accurate information is most needed."

The educational content on The Patient Channel is reviewed and updated by independent advisory boards, consisting of experts in medicine, patient care, education and ethics, whose objective is to ensure the accuracy and appropriateness of programming.

It was recently announced by the Illinois Department of Veterans' Affairs (IDVA) that the annual free hunting and fishing licenses for disabled veterans issued by IDVA will now be a one-time, permanent issue. The new policy will save disabled veterans throughout the state the inconvenience of a yearly trip to renew their license, which includes transportation costs and time.

Eligibility for the free hunting and fishing license remains the same: the veteran must have a service-connected disability; be in receipt of a total United States Department of Veterans Affairs (USDVA) disability pension; or be in receipt of military disability retirement pay and can present a letter from the USDVA showing the veteran would be entitled to VA compensation at a rate of 10 percent or greater if military pay was waived. Out-of-state disabled veterans are also eligible for the license. Those veterans drawing retirement pay only and have not applied to the USDVA for a service-connected rating will not be issued a license until after the USDVA has made a service-connected rating.

The veteran must provide disability documentation that is no more than one year old to IDVA during the initial request for the license. Only when the veteran provides proof of disability or pension benefits, the license will be issued.

An eligible veteran must visit one of the Veteran Service Offices for initial issuance. A full list of the state's Veteran Service Offices can be found on the IDVA web site at www.state.il.us/agency/dva or by calling 1-800-437-9824.

Letter To The Editor

What's Big Russ Going To Tell His Buddies At The Legion Hall?

Tim Russert's notoriety increased as a result of his books, Big Russ & Me and Wisdom of Our Fathers. Russert told a touching story of how his dad, of the greatest generation, worked hard, won the war, and raised a family with good values and decency. Like a lot of authors whose books reach the top of the New York Times best seller list, he could attribute some of his success to his Imus in The Morning appearances. Russert not only promoted his books on Imus, he did so tearfully at times. Russert was not just another guest on Imus. He was among the most frequent guests and judging from his own admission of sending gifts to Imus' son, he held himself out as a friend to Imus. Some friend.

In Russert's April 15 interview of Gwen Ifill on Meet The Press, after Imus had been fired, he asked her if it was necessary for Imus to be fired. Russert implied that a better solution might be for Imus to stay on the airwaves and to become a champion of the cause overcoming hate-speak as he has successfully championed so many other causes. It's a shame that in the preceding week when Russert could have used his own influence to add a sensible voice to the so-called dialogue to reach a fair solution, that he remained publicly invisible.

During a week when America's leading hypocrites Sharpton and Jackson were out for blood, and people like Ifill and Roker made sensible, heartfelt arguments, Russert could have uniquely made the argument in favor of Imus. An argument he was only willing to make in retrospect as a question to someone else. Russert is much better at asking the tough questions than he is with wrestling with them, let alone trying to answer them.

The shameless parade of limousine liberals who couldn't wait to go on Imus but later said they were only on for the substantive stuff or were unaware of the "darker" side of Imus remind me of people who say they read Playboy for the articles. Even Hillary Clinton wants to go to Rutgers to speak out when a week before Imus went off the air one of her lap dogs was on Imus trying to get him to invite her on the show.

Imus repaired his injury to the Rutgers women by meeting with them privately and apologizing. They accepted his apology in the wake of the tumult done to them not by Imus but by the media and Sharpton. When the incident happened, they dismissed it. Later, they would claim lives were ruined because of it. Imus has repaired his damaged reputation but there are plenty of others with blood on their hands.

Don Imus put pressure on to raise the active military death benefit from $12,000 to $250,000, get the Center for the Intrepid built, and provide needed and neglected care for children with autism and cancer. While his mouth should have been washed out with soap, he should not have been silenced. I believe most of America rolls their eyes and says, "There they go again," when the cowards at NBC and CBS caved to the mob mentality that carried the day. At least Imus can point to good he has actually accomplished and a living he has actually earned. Real threats to the black community continue to be ignored while the wagons circled around Imus, an easy scapegoat.

Tim Russert has often paid homage to his Catholic education and the noble efforts of the nuns who taught the faith: right from wrong, forming one's conscience, and standing up for what you believe. These were the lessons that Big Russ' generation got. It's a shame that when Little Russ had the chance to take a stand, he took a duck. Little Russ has never looked smaller.

Carolyn Adams Ticket For The Cure Grant Fund

In memory of former Illinois lottery superintendent Carolyn Adams who recently lost her battle with breast cancer, Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently announced he will introduce legislation renaming the Ticket for the Cure Fund from which grants are awarded for breast cancer education efforts, research and supportive services for breast cancer victims, the Carolyn Adams Ticket for the Cure Grant Fund.

"Carolyn Adams' work at the Illinois Lottery included the extremely successful launch of Ticket for the Cure, which has raised more than $3 million for breast cancer patients. Those proceeds will help many women in Illinois in their fight against cancer and I want us to remember the person who worked so hard to make Ticket for the Cure a success, even while she was fighting her own battle against breast cancer," said Gov. Blagojevich.

State Sen. Mattie Hunter (D-Chicago), the original sponsor of the legislation that established the Ticket for the Cure Lottery game, said, "It's an honor to be part of this effort. Carolyn Adams was one of the main reasons the Ticket for the Cure was such a successful initiative. She brought creative ideas to the process and was great from the marketing aspect. I cannot think of a better tribute to a woman so devoted to a cause."

"I think Carolyn Adams would be proud and renaming the fund is a deserving tribute," said Adams' best friend Melody Spann-Cooper. "She worked very hard and loved her job. She always said that we have to find a way in our jobs to do good things for other people, which is how she came up with the concept for Ticket for the Cure. While going through her own battle with breast cancer, Carolyn had good health insurance but knew others did not. She decided to use her energy to help those who are underserved and I think this is a great idea."

Animal Welfare Tag Day

The Animal Welfare League will be holding AVID Microchip Tag Day on Saturday, May 12th from 1 to 5 p.m. at its facility, 10305 Southwest Highway in Chicago Ridge. No appointment needed.

For only $15, pet owners can protect their pets by having an identifying microchip administered. This procedure, normally priced $30.75, is quick and harmless to the animal.

A.V.I.D. stands for American Veterinary Identification Devices. The AVID microchip is a tiny computer chip which has an identification number programmed into it. The chip is encased in a smooth, strong biocompatible glass, and is small enough to fit into a hypodermic needle. Once an animal is injected with the chip, he can be identified throughout his life by this one-of-a-kind number. His identification cannot be lost, altered or intentionally removed.

The microchip is generally injected deeply under the skin. It sits safely there, totally inert. A special scanner is used to send a radio signal through the skin of the animal to read the chip. The animal feels nothing as the scanner is passed over him. The microchip sends its number back to the scanner. It appears in the viewing window as, for example, AVID 220*609*321.

The microchip has no power supply, battery or moving parts. It is designed with an operating life of over 25 years and is guaranteed for the life of the animal. Once injected, the microchip is anchored in place as a thin layer of connective tissue forms around it. The chip requires no care. It does not pass through or out of the body.

The program will be led by Ron Miller, Chairman of the Dept. of Religion at Lake Forest College, with the evening's topic "Sketching a Possible Christian Future."

"Despite the strong fundamentalist backlash occurring in America's Christianity today," says Miller, "a very different kind of Christianity is emerging from the writings of Joan Chittester, Bishop John Shelby Spong, Elaine Pagels, Marcus Borg, Philip Gulley, James Mulholland, and numerous other contemporary Christian thinkers."

The lecture/discussion will seek answers to the question: What does such Christianity look like and how does it differ from what we see in most churches today?"

Miller, co-founder of Common Ground, holds a doctorate in History and Literature of Religions from Northwestern University.

Common Ground lectures begin at 7 p.m. and end about 9 p.m. Admission is $10 per person. Free parking is available in the Flossmoor village lot or in the church lot immediately to the east. For further information, call (708) 799-4102.

Urge Women To Focus On Health This Mother's Day

Flowers and breakfast in bed are nice, but if you really want to make a difference in a mother's life this Mother's Day, urge her to focus on her own health.

Women are often their family's caretakers, putting others' health and well-being before their own. But the American Cancer Society urges women to take stock of their health and recommends that all women get cancer-related checkups as part of their general health visits after age 20.

"Screenings can prevent or detect many cancers at their earliest, most treatable stages," said Mary Maryland, Ph.D., R.N., first vice president of the board of directors of the Illinois Division of the American Cancer Society, and chairwoman of the Division's research committee. "Women should find out which cancer screenings are right for them based on their age and family history, and discuss these with their health care providers."

The cancers that are most frequently diagnosed in Illinois women are breast, lung, and colon cancers, with lung cancer as the leading cause of cancer-related death. Cervical and ovarian cancers also remain among the top 15 cancers affecting women in Illinois.

In Illinois, breast cancer is the most frequently diagnosed cancer among women and the second leading cause of cancer-related death. Nearly 8,500 new cases of invasive breast cancer and 2,000 deaths due to breast cancer are expected to occur in Illinois this year.

As with any cancer, the best defense against breast cancer is to find the disease as early as possible when it is easier to treat. The American Cancer Society recommends annual mammograms for women starting at age 40, in addition to clinical breast exams about every three years for women in their 20s and 30s and every year for women 40 and older.

Many people mistakenly think of colon cancer as a "man's disease," but in fact it is the third most common cancer in both women and men. Unfortunately, nearly 7,500 new cases of colorectal cancer and 2,800 deaths are expected to occur in Illinois this year.

Most colon cancers are found in people over age 50. Testing for colon cancer can save lives by finding polyps before they become cancerous. If precancerous polyps are removed colon cancer can be prevented. The American Cancer Society therefore recommends that at age 50, women and men who are at average risk for colon cancer should begin screening. For those at moderate to high risk, with a personal or family history of cancer, screening may need to begin at age 40.

Cervical cancer was once the leading cause of death from cancer in women. Thanks to the Pap test, it is now much less common. In Illinois, approximately 580 women are expected to be diagnosed with cervical cancer this year, and 200 are expected to die from the disease.

The main cause of cervical cancer is human papilloma virus (HPV), a common virus that affects millions of people each year and is spread through sexual contact. Because of the recent availability of a new vaccine to protect against HPV, the American Cancer Society now recommends the HPV vaccine for girls aged 11 to 12 and as a "catch up" vaccine for females aged 9 to 29. The HPV vaccine has the potential to prevent up to 70 percent of cervical cancers. Since the vaccine does not prevent all cervical cancers, American Cancer Society guidelines urge the continued use of Pap tests as an annual screening tool for girls and women.

Ovarian cancer is more likely to occur as women get older. More than 900 new cases of ovarian cancer are expected to be diagnosed this year in Illinois, and approximately 650 women are expected to die from the disease.

While there are no effective and proven tests for finding ovarian cancer early (like mammography for breast cancer), women should consult their doctors if they experience persistent symptoms of abdominal swelling and/or pain or digestive problems including gas, bloating or loss of appetite. A pelvic exam should be part of a woman's regular health exam.

The American Cancer Society has developed a set of screening guidelines that are recommended for people at average risk for cancer and without any specific symptoms. The accompanying chart highlights those recommendations for women; additional details can be found at www.cancer.org. Those who are at increased risk for certain cancers may need to follow a different screening schedule, such as starting at an earlier age or being screened more often. Women with symptoms that could be related to cancer should see their doctor right away.

The American Cancer Society is dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem by saving lives, diminishing suffering and preventing cancer through research, education, advocacy and service. The Illinois Division has more than 120,000 volunteers and staff fighting cancer in the state. For the most up-to-date cancer related information and to join the fight against cancer, call 800-ACS-2345 or visit www.cancer.org.

Girl Scout Volunteers Honored

Giving time and talent to others is an American tradition that helps many organizations carry out needed services. Girl Scouting is no exception. In fact, the constitution of Girl Scouts of the USA affirms that the strength of the Girl Scout Movement rests in the voluntary leadership of its adult members.

With that in mind, and to acknowledge the tremendous contribution volunteers make, the South Cook County Council has an annual STAR (Super Talents Achieve Results) dinner each April to recognize individuals whose efforts have been especially notable.

Every year council members are invited to nominate their peers for national Girl Scout awards. Those nominations are reviewed by a volunteer committee; then those selected are forwarded to the council's board of directors for final approval.

The highest honor a Girl Scout adult can receive is the Thanks Badge II. It is presented to individuals who have already received the Thanks Badge for extraordinary service, and who still continue to perform their duties at a superior level of commitment.

There are four 2007 Thanks Badge II recipients. They are Maureen Jamrock of Dolton, council president; Phil Walroth of Chicago, vice-president, and members of the board of directors June Randall of Tinley Park and Jennie Stevenson of Richton Park.

All four have had extensive involvement at multiple positions of responsibility in the council, have been recipients of other awards, and are currently involved in work related to the realignment of seven councils in the metropolitan area into a new council.

The Honor Pin recognizes dedicated service to Girl Scouting at several levels such as in an association or with a council-wide group, over a period of at least five years, that shows initiative and has helped the council achieve its goals.

The 2007 recipients are Dianne Gittings of Tinley Park, Winding Creek Assn. chair; Rosemary Hulett, Flossmoor, council treasurer; Kathy Kovanich of Burbank, Maple Assn. chair; and Frances Starks of Matteson, board member.

The Appreciation Pin is given to service beyond the level of the Girl Scout troop for at least three years.

Among this year's recipients are Debbie Grady of Oak Lawn; George Hogan of Evergreen Park; Gail Bradshaw and Toiria Baker of Chicago; Darlene Kendricks, Calumet Park; Dr. Jane Brown and Twylla Bennett of Hazel Crest.

Also, Dennis Stachowiak, Palos Heights; Judy Alberts, Diane Galante and Debra Kozlowski of Tinley Park; and Lisa Maszak of Homewood.

Others were Cheryl Haworth, Laura Nichols, Karen Binkowski, Chris Donovan and Karen Nolan, all of Orland Park; Larissa Redfield of Matteson; and Jennifer Gasbarro of Monee.

In October, Girl Scouts of South Cook County will merge with six other area councils to become Girl Scouts of Greater Chicago and Northwest Indiana. The new council will cover a wide area from the Wisconsin border into Indiana, and will have a membership of close to 100,000.

More information about the South Cook County Council and opportunities for girls and adults is at (708) 957-8100.

FCC To Be Commended For Pushing To Ban Violent Television Programming

Once in a while, government actually gets it right. So it is with the recent FCC push to ban primetime broadcasting of violent programming.

On April 25, the FCC released a report recommending the "action should be taken" to protect children from excessively violent television programming.

Commenting on this matter is Morality in Media President, Robert Peters.

Said Peters, "The government has often been criticized for not doing more to curb children's exposure to violent entertainment." My answer was and is two-fold. First, we do often speak out against gratuitous depictions of imitable violence that can cause death or serious harm, especially where children are likely to view such 'entertainment.'

"Second, as far back as 1946, when the Supreme Court invalidated a New York law (and by implication similar laws in 19 other states) that prohibited distribution of publications containing certain types of violence, the courts have been invalidating every law intended to protect children from violent entertainment.

"Admittedly, drafting a law that isn't vague poses a challenge, but once upon a time the courts understood that 'the inability to define regulated materials with ultimate, god-like precision' was not a fatal flaw.

"Admittedly, drafting a law that will distinguish between materials that pose a serious risk of harm from those that don't also poses a challenge, but when it comes to protecting children from exposure to entertainment that can harm them, government must have leeway.

Peters shares with your audience that the current

Supreme Court is applying 'strict scrutiny' to laws that restrict speech based on content, and as the Court has said, 'It is rare' that any such law 'will ever be permissible.'

Peters contends that the one way to overcome this Supreme Court-imposed roadblock is to see another Justice or two who have some common sense. "Failing that," said Peters, "the Constitution will have to be amended to clarify that the First Amendment does not prevent government from enacting reasonable legislation to protect children from entertainment that is harmful to them."

"The FCC Report states that Congress could mandate some form of consumer choice, which would certainly help. But violent programming isn't limited to cable and satellite TV, and wise consumer choice depends on wise parents, which not every child is fortunate to have," concluded Peters.

Headquartered in New York City, Morality In Media (MIM) works through constitutional means to curb traffic in illegal obscenity. MIM operates the www.obscenitycrimes.org website, where citizens can report possible violations of federal Internet obscenity laws.

Established in New York City in 1962 to combat pornography, now national in scope, Morality In Media works to inform citizens and public officials about the harms of pornography and about what they can do through law to protect their communities and children. MIM also works to maintain standards of decency on TV and in other media. Contributions are tax-exempt.

Launches 811 "Call Before You Dig" Number

JULIE, Inc., also known as the Illinois One-Call System, recently announced the launch of a new national 811 "Call Before You Dig" number to help prevent homeowners and professional excavators from damaging underground utility lines while digging and causing injury or service outages.

"Knowing where utility lines are buried before each digging project helps protect those who dig from injury, expense and penalties," said Mark Frost, executive director of JULIE, Inc. "One easy phone call to JULIE at 811 will get the approximate location of underground utility lines marked for free."

In addition to JULIE's existing telephone number, (800) 892-0123, 811 is a new FCC-designated national N-11 number that will assist excavators with reaching the one-call center. This quick and efficient one-call service will notify the appropriate member utilities, who then send locators or locate technicians to the requested site to mark underground lines for free.

"Safe digging is no accident. Regardless of the project size or depth, always call 811 before you dig," Frost continued. "Call center representatives at JULIE are available to receive and process calls 24 hours a day, seven days a week."

Today, more member utility companies that supply power, gas, water and telecommunications are delivering these services underground. Following are a few simple safety tips when planning outdoor projects:

Call JULIE (simply call 811 or (800) 892-0123) before you dig.

Wait the required amount of time (two working days).

Respect the marks.

Dig with care.

Releases Report On Carbon Footprint

U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) applauded the release of a Government Accountability Office (GAO) report, which documents greenhouse gas emissions of the legislative branch and proposes concrete methods to reduce output of carbon dioxide. The report, issued at Senator Durbin's urging, investigated the output of carbon from the 36 buildings and over 300 cars that make up the legislative branch's operations. The legislative branch is comprised of 11 agencies, including the US Senate and House of Representatives, and employs over 28,000 people.

The GAO determined that in fiscal year 2006, carbon emissions from legislative branch operations was 316,000 metric tons, an amount equal to that of over 57,000 cars, marking a nearly 4 percent increase from the average emissions levels from 1998-2001. The largest single source of carbon emissions comes from electricity consumption, namely from the use of electricity created from the burning of fossil fuels by an outside provider. This alone accounts for over 60 percent of the carbon output of legislative branch operations. The remaining carbon output comes from natural gas, chilled water purchases, business travel in government owned and government leased vehicles and the Capitol Power Plant.

To accomplish the goals of reducing greenhouse gas emissions, the report recommends each agency conduct an audit of their individual energy consumption and carbon emissions.

These audits will provide critical information on how to effectively implement energy efficiency measures that will save taxpayers money.

"The United States Congress and its related offices have the opportunity to lead by example," Durbin said. "By conducting audits on our energy consumption, we'll have the information necessary to make changes in how we consume energy. The path we're on now is not sustainable. The legislative branch should agree to regular audits so that we can reduce our carbon footprint and save the American taxpayer money."

As a member of the Senate Rules Committee and the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on the Legislative Branch, Durbin has consistently promoted energy efficiency within the Capitol complex. Durbin's own office was one of the first in the Senate to join a pilot program, through the Architect of the Capitol (AOC) to reduce his office's energy consumption. The AOC has already started the process to update his office by installing modernized, energy efficient lighting which, when combined with occupancy sensors will result in a decrease in the electricity used by his office.

The report also suggests some ways to reduce energy consumption. Agencies could purchase energy efficient appliances, increase the use of renewable sources of energy; and acquire fuel-efficient vehicles and vehicles that run on renewable fuels.

Credit Score Confusion

If you're one of the millions of Americans who don't know their credit scores, you could be missing out on an opportunity to save money on your mortgage, cars, jewelry, electronics, vacations and anything else you may charge.

Your credit score is an estimate of your credit risk, which is based on your credit report. Lenders use this number to determine how likely you will be to repay a loan or line of credit in a timely manner. The higher the score, the more likely you'll receive a lower interest rate, and ultimately save money.

Only 27 percent of consumers understand that credit scores measure credit risk - not credit knowledge, amount of credit or attitude toward credit, according to the Consumer Federation of America.

"There are many misconceptions circulating about the function and purpose of credit scores," said Mike Sullivan, director of education for Take Charge America, a national non-profit credit counseling agency. "Yet, this three-digit number can impact you financially nearly every day of your life."

American consumers have an average of 13 credit obligations on record at a credit bureau, according to Fair Isaac Corporation, which pioneered the most common credit score, called the FICO score. These obligations include commonly-used credit cards, store cards, gas cards and installment loans, each of which has an impact on your credit score.

To help sort out the confusion, Sullivan answers six common questions about credit scores:

Do I have only one credit score? No, lenders are not required to report to each of the three major credit bureaus: Equifax, Experian and Trans Union. Each agency may have different information on your report, and therefore, a different score.

If I continually check my credit report, will that lower my credit score? You can check your report directly from the three credit bureaus as many times as you want, and it will not affect your credit score. To obtain a free credit report, visit www.annualcreditreport.com.

If I cancel a credit card, can that lower my credit score? Yes, canceling credit cards can actually decrease your score. For instance, if you have $50,000 in available credit and owe $10,000, then you owe 20 percent of your available credit. If you close an account with a $30,000 credit limit, you will then owe the same $10,000 but it will be 50 percent of your available credit. That lowers your credit score. It also affects the history part of your score, lowering it even further.

Does my salary affect my credit score? Your credit score is based on the amount of credit and debt you have, not how much money you make. If you receive a raise, and your credit and debt remain the same, your credit score will not improve. If you receive a raise and use that extra money to pay down your debt, then your credit score will improve.

Does shopping for a loan lower my credit score? While multiple inquiries do show up on your credit report, they do not necessarily damage your score. If the same types of inquiries are made within 14 days of each other, they only count as one inquiry on your credit report. Keep in mind that this applies to loans, not credit cards.

If I only use cash to make purchases, will I improve my credit score? Your credit score is determined by the amount of credit you use, not the amount of cash you use. A steady, responsible use of credit is the best way to build your credit score. You need to find a middle ground, as an absence of credit as well as an overuse of credit can work against you.

Prepare For Spring And Summer Severe Weather

With the one-year anniversary of a major tornado in Central Illinois just days away, Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently encouraged people to prepare now for severe spring weather. The governor proclaimed March 4th to 10th as Severe Weather Preparedness Week in Illinois, and urged Illinois residents to learn more about the weather hazards that can threaten during the spring and summer months.

The governor said the Illinois Emergency Management Agency (IEMA) and the National Weather Service (NWS) are joining together to raise awareness of tornadoes and severe storms during this year's Severe Weather Preparedness Week. As part of the week, schools and businesses were encouraged to practice their severe storm emergency plans during a statewide tornado drill that was held on Tuesday, March 6th at 10 a.m.

Illinois experienced a record number of tornadoes in 2006, with 124 tornadoes reported touching down throughout the state. The new record surpassed the previous record of 120 tornadoes set in 2003. Tornadoes last year resulted in one death and 49 injuries. On average, Illinois sees around 41 tornadoes each year.

Weather watches and warnings from the NWS are a critical tool in alerting people to approaching severe weather in their areas. The NWS is working to refine its warnings so they provide people with more specific detail about storms in their counties.

Nearly 30 percent of all tornadoes in Illinois occur after dark. For that reason, it's especially important that homes and businesses closely monitor threatening conditions at night, particular when people are asleep.

Besides tornadoes, spring and early summer in Illinois also bring severe thunderstorms and flooding. Severe thunderstorms can produce tornadoes, damaging winds, lightning, hail and heavy rain, all of which can cause death, injuries and property damage. Since 1990, lightning has killed 26 people. In 2001, Illinois ranked second in the nation for lightning fatalities.

While many people don't consider floods as dangerous as tornadoes, flooding is the number one severe weather killer nationwide. The most dangerous type of flooding is a flash flood, which can sweep away everyone and everything in its path. Fourteen people in Illinois have died from flash floods since 1995, most of which occurred in vehicles.

IEMA and NWS have also developed a Severe Weather Preparedness Guide, which contains information and tips on how to keep you and your family safe when a storm approaches and what actions to take following a severe storm, tornado or flood. The guide is available on the IEMA Web site at www.state.il.us/iema or by calling (217) 785-9888.

Hands Off The Internet

Citizens Against Government Waste (CAGW) urged Congress to say no to a national broadband policy and government intrusion of the Internet. After the release of a worldwide broadband usage report, Senate and House Committees held hearings on April 24th to examine the need for further government involvement in broadband service in light of other countries' policies.

"The Internet has thrived in America precisely because it has been free from government interference. The implementation of burdensome regulations, wasteful subsidies, and complicated tax breaks that other countries are imposing will only stifle growth and innovation," said CAGW President Tom Schatz. "Competition and the free market must be allowed to continue to work."

The Organization for Economic Co-Operation & Development (OECD) Broadband Statistics to December 2006 report was released on April 23rd. While finding that the U.S. has the most total broadband subscribers of the 30 studied countries, it ranked the United States 15th in broadband-deployment penetration. The survey does not disclose how it obtained its numbers and does not take into account population density or supply and demand.

The Rural Utilities Service (RUS) is an example of an ineffective government program charged with increasing broadband access. Besides the more than $30 million in broadband loans that have gone into default, the program has lost its focus on serving rural America. The RUS has been subsidizing private companies to provide broadband in suburban neighborhoods that would have received service anyway. Instead of allowing the free market to work, efficient private sector forces are crowded out by government subsidies.

According to a September 2005 audit by the USDA Inspector General (IG), "RUS has not exclusively served those rural communities most requiring Federal assistance to obtain access to broadband technologies. Because RUS' definition of 'rural area' is too broad to distinguish usefully between suburban and rural communities, the agency has issued over $103.4 million in grants and loans (nearly 12 percent of $895 million in total program funds) to communities near metropolitan areas... And the IG report noted "one of the more highly publicized cases, [where] RUS issued loans to a company providing broadband access to affluent suburban communities a few miles outside of Houston, Texas."

"Instead of increasing government control, Congress should remove barriers to the further flourishing of Internet usage and access by rejecting net neutrality, continuing the Internet tax ban, and protecting intellectual property," concluded Schatz.

LEGAL NOTICE

Cook County Annual Tax Sale
Notice to Property Owners,
Annual Tax Sale Schedule and Delinquent Real Estate Tax ListIMPORTANT NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNERS

This legal notice includes a list of parcels of real estate on which 2005 property taxes (due in 2006) are listed as delinquent and subject to sale as of April 16, 2007.

SPECIAL NOTE: This list may include some properties on which the taxes were paid subsequent to the list's preparation. It is the property owner's responsibility to determine if the taxes are paid in full.

IF YOUR PROPERTY IS LISTED IN THIS NOTICE FOR SALE OF DELINQUENT REAL ESTATE TAXES, IT IS IMPORTANT FOR YOU TO TAKE ACTION SO THAT YOUR TAXES ARE NOT SOLD. The sale of taxes will result in a lien against the property that will add, at a minimum, hundreds of dollars in fees to the amount currently due. Sale of the tax and continued failure by the owner to redeem (pay) may result in the loss of property. Under Illinois law, the Cook County Treasurer's Office must offer properties having delinquent real estate taxes and special assessments for sale. The tax sale is scheduled to begin TUESDAY, June 5, 2007. The purchaser of the delinquent real estate taxes and special assessments may obtain title to these properties if they are not redeemed (paid) in a timely manner. Payments of delinquent real estate taxes and special assessments must be paid by CERTIFIED CHECK, CASHIER'S CHECK or MONEY ORDER. Payments may be made at more than 290 CHASE BANKS throughout Chicagoland through June 1, 2007. Payments may also be made in person at the Cook County Treasurer's Office, 118 N. Clark St., Suite 112, Chicago, IL 60602. For questions about submitting a payment or to verify the precise delinquent amount, contact the Cook County Treasurer's Office by phone at (312) 443-5100 or by e-mail through our website at www.cookcountytreasurer.com and click on "CONTACT US."

The Village of Oak Lawn Says

"Good-Bye Trustee Joy"

The Oak Lawn Village Board of Trustees held their inauguration of newly elected officials at its regular village board meeting on Tuesday. After a hard fought battle at the last election, Trustee Marjorie Joy gave up her seat on the board to newly elected trustee Carol R. Quinlan.

Ms. Joy leaves office after 16 years on the board. Prior to her serving on the Village Board, Ms. Joy also served on the school board, also for 16 years. Her fellow trustees lauded her for her 32 years of service to the community. They described her as compassionate, honest and an advocate for education. Even new Trustee Carol Quinlan described Joy as a "classy lady".

Ms. Joy said that it was time to retire. "After all, I have my kids to take care of," she said. As she stepped down, Joy called for the village board to unify and set the village as a priority to politics.

Sworn-in, at the meeting was Jerry Hurckes, incumbent in District One; Robert Streit, incumbent in District Three; and newly elected trustee Carol R. Quinlan in District Five.

Hurckes, a trustee for eight years, said that he will continue to work for the betterment of the village and he will continue to work to earn the trust that his district has given him.

Robert Streit, a sixteen-year member of the board, said that when he first came to the board, he was young and idealistic. He said that being the senior member of the board, he will still remain idealistic and work hard for his district.

Carol Quinlan took her seat on the board and thanked the residents of District Five for her chance to make a difference in the village. She said that she looks forward to serving the Village of Oak Lawn.

In other business, Trustee Streit reported on the work done regarding the village's flooding problems. He said that the MWRD has begun to do the clean up work on Stony Creek and the Melvina Ditch that had been promised. He reported that a clean up had been done on Stony Creek where 400 Cubic Yards of waste were taken from Stony Creek and 50 cubic yards were taken from the Oak Lawn Creek. He said that when the waste materials were taken out of the waterways, the water level immediately went down. Most of the debris that was taken away was "anything and everything that was tree". Work is continuing on the rerouting of the Melvina Ditch.

It was reported that the Farmer's Market will begin on June 6th, from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. and will be held on Wednesdays.

Recall On Magnetic Building Sets Expanded

Attorney General Lisa Madigan on May 1st alerted consumers to a recall expansion announced by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission in cooperation with Mega Brands America, Inc. (the new owner of Rose Art Industries, Inc.) dated April 19, 2007. This expansion stems from additional reports of serious injuries following the March 31, 2006 recall of Magnetix Magnetic Building Sets.

The recall involves all Magnetix Magnetic Building Sets sold before March 31, 2006. Recalled sets have the brand name "Rose Art" on the package. Newer sets sold after March 31, 2006, are not included in the recall and have the brand name "Mega" on the package. These newer sets are age-labeled 6+ and contain the following caution label: "CAUTION: Do not ingest or inhale magnets. Attraction of magnets in the body may cause serious injury and require immediate medical care."

The recall is based on the fact that the magnets can detach from the plastic building pieces. If a child swallows more than one of the small but powerful magnets, or one magnet and a metallic object, the objects can attract inside the intestines and cause perforations and/or blockage, which can be fatal if not immediately treated.

Magnetix advises that the newer sets, sold after March 31, 2006, better retain magnets due to improved quality control, material and design changes and, thus, the newer sets are not included in the recall.

CPSC and Mega Brands are aware of one death, one aspiration and 27 intestinal injuries as a result of ingesting magnets from Magnetix Magnetic Building Sets. In all but one of the cases, the children required emergency surgical intervention. At least 1,500 incidents of magnets separating from the building pieces have been reported. Although the hazard was initially thought to be a problem primarily for children younger than six, reports filed since then have revealed that at least ten injuries involved children between the ages of six and eleven years old.

These older sets, which were manufactured in China, contain up to 250 plastic building pieces and 2-inch diameter steel balls. The building pieces include 1 1/2-inch squares, 1-inch triangles, cylinder rods, flexors, connectors, x-tenders, and curves and come in an assortment of colors such as metallic, primary, translucent, and glow in the dark.

Mass merchants and other toy and arts and crafts stores sold the sets nationwide for between $20 and $60, depending on the size of the set.

Based on this recall, Madigan urges parents to stop using these magnetic sets immediately and contact Mega Brands to return them and receive a comparable product replacement.

Madigan's office will be sending out investigators pursuant to the Illinois Children's Product Safety Act to spot check to see that retailers have posted the recall notice in a prominent location in stores and have removed the products from shelves.

Consumers can sign up to receive e-mail notification of recalls as they are issued at www.cpsc.gov. Consumers can select to receive notification on several topics, including: infant or child product recalls, sports or recreation product recalls, outdoor product recalls, and household product recalls. Last year, the Consumer Product Safety Commission issued recalls for 466 products. E-mail notification provides a helpful alternative for consumers to make sure they learn of any recalled products that they may have in their home.

The Illinois Department of Public Health's Web site provides a direct link to www.recalls.gov, where citizens can find up-to-date recall information about past and current recalls.

History Fair

The fourth grade students of Hazelgreen School recognized triumphs and tragedies in history by hosting a History Fair on Wednesday, May 2nd. Each student chose a historical person, or event to research and created a report and display about the topic. Family members, Hazelgreen students, and staff were invited to travel back in time, and take a walk through history.

The fourth graders dressed up as famous people, stood in front of their projects, and answered questions about their displays. This experience made teaching and learning about history fun and exciting.

Corrected Delinquency Lists

Lists of Cook County property owners who owe taxes were published correctly in the Chicago Tribune and the Chicago Sun-Times, but are being republished in this paper that received incorrect information because of a computer glitch, Cook County Treasurer Maria Pappas said.

Pappas said correct delinquency information was sent by certified mail to all of the 37,500 property owners who owed $102.5 million from tax year 2005 (due in 2006), and correct information is available on her office's website at www.cookcountytreasurer.com and automated phone system at (312) 443-5100. Pappas advised taxpayers to have their 14-digit Property Index Number when accessing such data.

Lists of delinquencies are published in newspapers to give property owners notice that they owe taxes which may be sold at the Annual Tax Sale beginning June 5.

Unveiling The New Elim

It's time to take the wraps off the new Elim. On May 17th, Elim Christian Services hosts the dedication and public open house at their new Life Skills Center for adults with disabilities.

The completion of the Center marks the end of the first phase of a three-year capital improvement project on Elim's main campus on the border of Crestwood and Palos Heights.

Dr. Bill Lodewyk, president, notes that "Elim has expertise and a vital message that the world needs to hear. We believe strongly that God calls us to care for and challenge people with disabilities, not just because someone has to do it, but because we value the blessings they offer." Lodewyk has served as Elim's president for almost seven years, but it is only recently that the new Elim has been unveiled. "For decades, Elim has been seen as an expert and outstanding ministry in the field of special needs services. Now, we are sharing this expertise with ministries in other parts of the country and the world. This new Life Skills Center reflects that vision, equipping us to put our knowledge and expertise into practice with a state-of-the-art adult services facility."

"The Life Skills Center is a statement to the world that Elim believes in and cares for adults with developmental disabilities," remarked Dianne Kariotis of the Illinois

Dept. of Human Services-Bureau of Accreditation, Licensure and Certification after a recent visit. "I am overwhelmed by the design and beauty of the facility. I look forward to returning to see the adults in their new work environment."

This new Center exemplifies Elim's ability to capitalize on 59 years of expertise in serving people with disabilities. The structure's design maximizes staff efficiency, requiring less investment in staff while increasing the capacity to serve up to 120 adults with disabilities. The new Center also utilizes many eco-friendly building techniques, increasing energy savings and reducing energy costs over the long term.

Chicago-area residents can view the new Life Skills Center for themselves. Join Elim and hundreds of invited guests at the dedication ceremony and open house on May 17th. The dedication event begins at 10:30 a.m. with an open house for the public from 12 noon until 2:30 p.m.

Elim Christian Services has served thousands of children and adults with disabilities from the Chicago area and beyond. In addition to its programs for adults, Elim also provides educational and residential services to children with disabilities and provides resource centers to assist schools with addressing the needs of children with learning disabilities.

Don't Forget The Windshield

Most automotive safety experts rank the windshield as the third most important safety component in today's cars and trucks, according to the Car Care Council, which sponsors National Car Care Month. Seatbelts and airbags rank first and second. All three components are part of what automotive engineers refer to as a vehicle's safety restraint system (SRS).

"Now is the time for drivers to look at their vehicles for any winter damage, such as chips, cracks, and bad seals," said Joseph Levigne, of the Glass Doctor of Chicago franchise. "Simple upkeep can save motorists money, time and possibly their lives or the lives of their loved ones later down the road."

Drivers can follow these preventive maintenance tips by the Glass Doctor of Chicago to help keep themselves and their passengers safe:

- Repair chipped glass immediately.
- Nicks and dings can block driver visibility.
- Thermal shock (the stress caused by drastic differences in outdoor and indoor temperatures) can turn a ding into a crack when you turn on the air conditioning.
- Replace worn windshield wipers, which can compromise vision in rainy conditions and scratch windshield glass.
- Refill windshield washer solvent to keep the windshield clean from dirt, insects and glare.
- Clean windshields with a proper cleaner, not a strong abrasive that could scratch the glass.
- To help improve visibility, consider applying a dirt and water repellent to the windshield, such as Aquapel®, either personally or by a professional Glass Doctor service technician.

Levigne encourages repairing a windshield rather than replacing it:

- Repairing a chip restores the structural integrity of the windshield.

- The repair takes 30 minutes or less. Once it's done, the car is ready to drive.
- Windshield repair is a permanent restoration, and the damage won't spread further.

"If a dollar bill can't cover the damaged area, we would advise you to replace the entire windshield," Levigne said. "Windshield replacement is a last resort, but it may be essential to your vehicle's safety. Be sure to find a glass repair service you can trust to replace the windshield professionally."

During Car Care Month drivers can receive estimates for their windshield damage from the Glass Doctor franchise in the Chicago area at (773) 737-9800 or call 1-800-838-GLASS (4527) to schedule an appointment.

National Car Care Month (NCCM), a vital part of the "Be Car Care Aware" (BCCA) consumer education campaign, is designed to increase public awareness about the benefits of good vehicle maintenance and repair. Because nine out of 10 motorists pump their own gas, under-hood checks are rarely performed and vital maintenance and repairs often go undone. A vehicle that's been well cared for, as opposed to one that's been neglected, is safer, more dependable and more economical to operate. In addition, emissions are reduced, improving air quality. National Car Care Month is sponsored by the Automotive Aftermarket Industry Association (AAIA), with the Car Care Council serving as the brand and messaging source. For more information about National Car Care Month, contact Rich White at 240-333-1088 or rich.white@aftermarket.org and visit www.carcare.org.

Promotion Of Pain Reliever OxyContin Agreement Reached

Attorney General Lisa Madigan, along with 26 other attorneys general, recently filed a lawsuit and entered into a settlement agreement with Purdue Pharma, L.P., requiring the pharmaceutical company to significantly alter and restrict its practices in promoting the drug, OxyContin, and to pay $19.5 million to the states involved.

The settlement resolves allegations that Purdue marketed OxyContin for use beyond the FDA-approved uses and that Purdue failed to adequately disclose abuse and diversion risks associated with the drug in violation of consumer protection laws. OxyContin is a time-released, Schedule II opioid approved by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) for use for pain management of moderate to severe pain over an extended period of time.

The FDA approved OxyContin for use in 1995. At that time, OxyContin was uniquely placed in the pain medication market as a "time-released" drug that could provide for the release of medication, and the relief of pain over a longer period of time. Shortly after its release, it was discovered that individuals were bypassing the safety aspect of the pill form of OxyContin by crushing the medication, which defeated the time-release feature and led to a high rate of abuse.

In addition to requiring that Purdue restrict its marketing and promotion of OxyContin to be strictly in line with FDA-approved uses and maintain and formalize its "OxyContin Abuse and Diversion Detection Program," the settlement prohibits Purdue from making any false, misleading or deceptive claims regarding OxyContin.

In its 2007 Illinois Fact Sheet, the Drug Enforcement Administration recognized OxyContin as a highly abused substance in Illinois and noted that diversion of OxyContin continues to be a problem in this state.

OxyContin abuse is a particular problem with teenagers. According to a 2006 survey by the National Institute on Drug Abuse, OxyContin use outside of the use prescribed by a physician increased steadily among 12th graders from 2002 to 2005, with the number of students who admitted taking OxyContin in the last year rising from 4.0% to 5.5% of those surveyed. In 2006, there was a slight decline to 4.3% of those surveyed. Unfortunately, during this same period, younger students that had not previously shown much increase in OxyContin use indicated increased usage, with 2.6% of 8th graders and 3.8% of 10th graders surveyed reporting that they had used OxyContin in the last year.

The settlement requires Purdue to pay $19.5 million to the states. Illinois' share of this payment is $719,500 and will be used to fund consumer education and enforcement in the state.

Catholic Charities Supper Program

The hungry and homeless who are guests of Catholic Charities' supper programs will share their photographs with the public and express the artists within themselves this summer when Catholic Charities hosts Visions of My Life, a photo exhibition, at 721 N. LaSalle St. on June 22nd.

Guests were invited to participate in this year's photography project in October 2006, and those who chose to accept the challenge were given a camera and a roll of film - either black-and-white or color. During the fall and winter, guests began photographing, and their best work was chosen to be framed and exhibited.

Proceeds from the sale of their work go directly to the photographers.

Each week, Catholic Charities feeds 130 guests at its Tuesday night suppers alone. The suppers, begun in the fall of 2001, serve a buffet-style dinner in a dining space filled with tables decorated with tablecloths and flowers. Dinners are sponsored by a family, a parish group or a local restaurant. The atmosphere is one of respect and encouragement for the guests. Often there are more guests than the agency can accommodate in the dining area, so Catholic Charities provides them with a sandwich and a snack so that no one is turned away hungry. Social service staff members are available at the dinners, and guests who are in need of transportation to a nearby shelter are brought there once they finish their meals.

The agency provides more than 4.8 million meals to persons in need annually.

For information about the Tuesday Night Supper program, call Ellen Gorney, Catholic Charities Director of Programs, at (312) 655-7136.

First Lady Announces May Selections For Children's Reading Club

First Lady Patricia Blagojevich recently announced May selections for her Children's Reading Club - The Peanut-Free Café by Gloria Koster and Beverly Cleary's Strider. One of this month's selections, The Peanut-Free Café, promotes awareness about the potential seriousness of food allergies. In anticipation of Food Allergy Awareness Week celebrated nationwide on May 13th through 19th, the First Lady encouraged parents and children to become better educated on the potentially threatening effects of food allergies.

"Reading is a powerful tool because it helps broaden people's perspectives on serious problems like food allergies," said the First Lady. The Peanut-Free Café will teach children who don't have food allergies about ways they can help those who do. Food allergies can cause serious or even deadly reactions in children and this book provides helpful information for those unfamiliar with the condition."

The Children's Reading Club selection for preschoolers, The Peanut-Free Café by Gloria Koster, is a book about peanut allergies, told from the perspective of a child without allergies. Simon is an elementary school student who loves peanut butter. But then new student Grant comes to school. Grant is allergic to peanut butter and can't even sit near anyone eating it. Simon comes up with a clever idea. The school can have a peanut-free café! It will be a fun place to eat and watch movies, where the only admission is a peanut-free lunch. Simon gives up his favorite peanut butter in order to partake in a special lunch routine with his peanut-allergic friend.

Strider by Beverly Cleary, for children at a middle school reading level, tells a story about an abandoned dog that changes the life of a teenage boy. Strider is a dog that loves to run. Because of Strider, Leigh Botts finds himself running - well enough to join the school track team. Strider changes Leigh on the inside too, as he finally begins to accept his parents' divorce and gets to know a redheaded girl he's been admiring. With Strider's help, Leigh finds that the future he once hated to be asked about now holds something he never expected: hope.

Mrs. Cleary's books have earned her many prestigious awards, including the 2003 National Medal of Art from the National Endowment of the Arts and the 1984 John Newbery Medal for Dear Mr. Henshaw. Her Ramona and Her Father and Ramona Quimby, Age 8 were named 1978 and 1982 Newbery Honor Books, respectively.

Mrs. Blagojevich began the Children's Reading Club to encourage parents to read with their children. It is a recommended reading list made up of books the First Lady and her daughters enjoy at home. The Children's Reading Club applies to all children, but specifically targets children between the ages of seven and twelve.

The First Lady launched the Children's Reading Club literacy initiative in March of 2005, and has selected books such as Charlotte's Web, Harriet the Spy, The Growing-up Feet, Henry Huggins and Number the Stars for the recommended list. Each month's book selection is featured on the First Lady's web site, <http://www.illinois.gov/firstlady>. The First Lady hopes the recommended list will enable parents to find books the whole family can enjoy.

The Cicada Craze

The Forest Preserve District of Cook County invites all Cook County residents to join its nature center to learn all about cicadas. It's been 17 years since the emergence of these big and noisy, but harmless, insects, and the district is offering a class to explore their odd life cycle.

The 17-Year Miracle will be held at Camp Sagawau, 12545 W. 111th St., Lemont, on Sunday, May 27th at 12 noon. Class registration is required by calling (630) 257-2045.

Cook County residents will only have a few chances in their lifetime to witness the emergence of periodical cicadas. Come and learn about this phenomenon.

For more information on cicadas and the Forest Preserve District of Cook County, call John Elliott, Education Manager, at (708) 771-1332.

"Cocaine" Drink Off Illinois Store Shelves

Attorney General Lisa Madigan on May 4th announced the successful results of a demand to have all Illinois marketing and sales of the "Cocaine" energy drink immediately cease.

Attorney General Madigan and Illinois Dept. of Public Health Director Dr. Eric E. Whitaker made the demand on May 2nd to the California-based Redux Beverages, LLC, the manufacturer and distributor of the product.

The Attorney General's office will continue to work with the company to ensure that this product remains off the shelves.

Advertisements for the drink describe it as the "legal alternative" to cocaine and promote the use of an ingredient in the drink that creates a burning sensation to simulate the throat-drip effect of using cocaine. The company had been actively promoting the product and recently hosted a "Cocaine Energy Drink Launch Party" in Chicago.

In December 2006, prior to distribution and promotion of the drink in Illinois, Madigan contacted Redux to voice her concern that the energy drink would have a detrimental effect on Illinois consumers and may promote the use of illicit drugs, especially among young people. There had been no response from the company.

Madigan informed Redux that if Illinois consumers purchased this product she would consider taking enforcement action against the company. Madigan argued that the marketing and sale of "Cocaine" is in violation of the Illinois Consumer Fraud and Deceptive Business Practices Act because it promotes the use of illegal drugs. She also asserted that it violates the Illinois Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act because the company is attempting to market an unapproved new drug. Under these laws, Madigan's office has the authority to obtain injunctive relief and civil penalties.

Madigan has successfully pursued enforcement action against manufacturers of similar products such as Chronic Candy Pops, commonly referred to as "pot suckers." In 2005, Madigan's office took action to stop the sale of this product in Illinois.

Hynes Applauds Senate Approval Of Judicial Public Financing Initiative

Comptroller Dan Hynes applauded Senate approval of a bill creating public financing of appellate and Illinois Supreme Court election campaigns, and urged the House to follow the Senate's lead.

"The men and women who preside in our courts must remain free from prejudice and favoritism and we must ensure that those who want to serve as judges are not prevented from doing so because they are unable to raise the millions of dollars that is sometimes required for a competitive election campaign," Hynes said. "This public financing initiative will help maintain an independent judiciary and help eliminate financial barriers to attaining office."

Hynes said the amount of money spent on high-profile judicial elections would shock most Illinoisans. He pointed to a recent State Supreme Court race where the two candidates raised more than $9 million.

"The public deserves to have confidence that in a court of law, no matter who you are, or where you come from, you will receive a fair shake," Hynes said. "It is sometimes difficult for people to maintain that confidence when they see special interests contributing large sums to judicial campaigns."

Hynes said the bipartisan initiative (SB222) is an important first step toward establishing a sustainable public funding system for campaigns for statewide offices in Illinois and he commended its sponsors, Sen. Kwame Raoul (D-Chicago) and Sen. Kirk Dillard (R-Hinsdale).

The initiative removes the corrupting influence of campaign contributions from state Supreme Court and appellate court judicial campaigns by approving public funding for those races. It provides a baseline of $750,000 in public funds to qualifying Supreme Court candidates, $250,000 for appellate court candidates, limits contributions to candidates who choose not to take public financing, and triggers matching funds for publicly financed candidates when third parties or non-participating candidates spend a certain percentage over the baseline. It is funded by a tax check-off and a $1 court appearance fee and becomes operational when the fund reaches $5 million.

Hynes long has been a strong advocate of state government and campaign finance reforms. He issued an Executive Order more than two years ago requiring his office to adhere to reforms which prevent entities with large contracts with the Comptroller's Office from contributing to his election campaigns.

As we prepare to move into summer, we can't help but notice the continual spike in fuel prices throughout our area. Oil prices (barrel price) have exceeded $75 each again this spring and record setting prices continue to creep skyward. At this writing, regular gas has skyrocketed nearly 45 cents a gallon, leading to a $3.30 per gallon cost. Numerous economists continue to prognosticate that $3.50 to $4 per gallon could be the norm in the next couple of months. Analysts contend that numerous factors are contributing to these escalating prices. They include the conflict in the Middle East, political chaos in Nigeria, and the after effects still felt by Hurricane Katrina, tornados and uncommon natural weather patterns. Our reality is that this nation has a ferocious appetite for oil consumption. The administration in Washington needs to push a national policy which would address the immediate situation we are experiencing and how this nation intends to facilitate energy needs in the decades to come. Our children deserve effective leadership, not just rhetoric, as well as answers NOW!

With health care costs soaring and the number of uninsured people in Illinois climbing to nearly 1.5 million, AARP says enough is enough, and changes are absolutely necessary. Last week, AARP Illinois joined with Governor Rod Blagojevich in pressing for what is the nation's most comprehensive health care reform initiative.

To mark this important occasion, AARP likewise kicked off a statewide campaign to urge lawmakers to support the Governor's plan. As part of their efforts, AARP members will lobby in Springfield and take the message to the streets in their legislative districts. AARP is pressing Illinois state lawmakers to address the problem by passing the Governor's (Blagojevich's) health care reform initiative to help ensure people without coverage do not continue to fall through the cracks.

AARP is a non-profit nonpartisan membership organization numbering over 1.7 million Illinois members dedicated to making life better for people over 50 years of age. AARP provides information and resources; engages in legislative, regulatory and legal advocacy; assists members in serving their communities; and offers a wide range of unique benefits, special products, and service for their members. The Illinois Parent Teacher Association (PTA) recently announced their official support for legislation proposed by Secretary of State Jesse White to improve teen driving laws with the aim of reducing traffic crashes and fatalities involving young drivers. Delegates to the 105th Annual Convention of the Illinois PTA voted to support Senate Bill 172.

Senate Bill 172 will strengthen the Illinois Graduated Driver Licensing (GDL) Program that governs drivers up to the age of 21. Several recent studies have shown that comprehensive GDL programs greatly reduce traffic crashes and fatalities involving teen drivers. The legislation was drafted based on recommendations made by White's Teen Driver Safety Task Force, composed of legislators, traffic safety experts, law enforcement officials, educators, judges and victim advocates.

This proposal has gained widespread acclaim from leading national traffic safety experts who believe the legislation will make Illinois' GDL program one of the best in the nation.

The legislation, sponsored by State Senator John Cullerton (D-Chicago) and State Representative John D'Amico (D-Chicago) was overwhelmingly approved by the full Senate and is now awaiting the consideration of the House.

The Illinois PTA, with a membership of about 200,000, works to support and speak on behalf of children and youth in the schools and before governmental bodies and other organizations that make decisions affecting children.

Congratulations to State Rep. Al Riley (D-Matteson), an executive board member of the Calumet Council of Boy Scouts of America, who was recently honored for his outstanding volunteer service as the recipient of the "Silver Beaver" award from the Calumet Council of Boy Scouts of America.

The Silver Beaver Award is presented for distinguished service to young people within a Boy Scouts of America (BSA) council. The recipient must be a registered adult member of the BSA. Rep. Al Riley served as a longtime executive board member, unit leader, scout master and advisor. "His dedication and service to the scouting community made him an easy choice to receive this honor by our selection committee," stated Mike Creagh, a scout executive.

"Being involved with the Boy Scouts is an exciting way for me to give back to my community," Riley said. "Both of my sons were Eagle Scouts and we traveled, all over the country due to our Scouting involvement. That is why I'm still involved; sharing the gifts of scouting with others."

The 38th District is located in Cook County's south suburbs. It includes all or portions of the following municipalities: Country Club Hills, Flossmoor, Harvey, Hazel Crest, Homewood, Markham, Matteson, Oak Forest, Olympia Fields, Park Forest and Richton Park.

In Business, SCORE Speaks Her Language

The old story goes that if you speak three languages, you're tri-lingual; if you speak two languages, you're bi-lingual; if you speak one language, you're American. Johanna Torres, founder and CEO of Language Loop LLC, a startup based in Chicago's West Loop neighborhood, is trying to change that as she tutors a wide range of clients in any of 14 major languages and helps clients new to America with English-as-a-second-language skills. Language Loop's target market is "anyone 12 years of age and up; currently the majority of our work is with young professionals, but we are positioned to do much more," Ms. Torres reports. Languages offered at Language Loop include English, Spanish, French, Italian, German, Russian, Portuguese, Chinese, Japanese, Vietnamese, Polish, Dutch, Arabic, Farsi and Turkish, 15 languages in all.

Teaching language has always been a specialty of Johanna's. Before Language Loop, she rose to Chicago-area senior manager for the nation's foremost language schools. "With this experience and an advanced degree in Communications, I knew exactly what I wanted to do with the language and teaching parts of my schools; the business part of it was another thing altogether." Johanna called SCORE in March of 2006 and set an appointment to talk about business issues as wide ranging as office location and hiring and compensation of independent contractors, to the mechanics of getting started, business structure and marketing — plus web design and the ways that the Internet could become a part of Language Loop.

SCORE is a not-for-profit association of successful business executives who provide free one-on-one counseling, teach low-cost workshops and supply other resources to entrepreneurs and small businesses.

Over the next several months, Ms. Torres had 15 counseling sessions with SCORE — three face-to-face at the SCORE Chicago office, three on site at Language Loop and nine on line. "My SCORE counselors, Michael Koen and Roger Loeffler, provided an incredible range of expertise: Michael in operations, finance and accounting; Roger in marketing. Between them they helped prepare me for a July 2006 opening. By October I reached 25% of classroom capacity which was far beyond my expectations for the first quarter of operation."

The fast start positioned Ms. Torres to approach businesses, schools and organizations for group instruction and to intensify marketing efforts for individual instruction. "We don't want Language Loop to be the biggest language school, just the best," Ms. Torres says. And she'll keep coming back to SCORE to help make that happen.

New Data On Illinois' Uninsured Population

According to a new report released by the Gilead Outreach and Referral Center there is hint of good news, but relatively a dark outlook for Illinois' uninsured population. The Gilead Center, a non-profit organization that connects the uninsured with affordable health care benefits and services, found that while recent eligibility expansions for the state's FamilyCare program and the creation of the All Kids program have lowered the number of uninsured children since the last reporting period in 2005, Illinois' uninsured population increased to more than 1.78 million individuals age 0-64, a two percent increase from 2004 - 2005.

"When we broke down the numbers, we saw some light at the end of the tunnel in regard to providing health care coverage for our children," Michael Taitel, President of the Gilead Center said. "But ultimately, we are failing our families when it comes to providing affordable health insurance coverage. Nearly one million families in Illinois have at least one uninsured family member, and 360,000 Illinois families with an annual income of over $50,000 have at least one uninsured member."

The Face of the Uninsured: A Detailed Description of Illinois' Uninsured, Gilead's fifth annual report, found that nearly 60 percent of Illinois' uninsured population is employed — a trend that is expected to continue. This report, based on data from the U.S. Census Bureau, looks at socioeconomic, racial and educational levels from those who live in Chicago, the metro suburban area and downstate Illinois and provides real life examples that reflect the face of the uninsured.

"When we think of the uninsured, many people assume it's only unemployed, welfare recipients who make up the numbers," said Dr. Lawrence U. Haspel, Senior Vice-President of Metropolitan Chicago Healthcare Council and Gilead Center Board Treasurer. "The Gilead report puts a more accurate face on who the uninsured crisis in Illinois is affecting — every ethnicity, and more and more middle class people who are being failed by the current system of employer-sponsored health coverage plans."

Other Key Findings: 26 percent of the uninsured population is 19-29 years of age; the fastest growing uninsured segment in Illinois; the highest percent of uninsured individuals in the state were Hispanic at 30 percent, non-Hispanic African Americans at 26 percent and non-Hispanic White at 12 percent; 26 percent of the total population of Chicago is with out health insurance — 551,563 people or the population equivalence of the entire downstate population; of the 2.4 million full-time workers in the Chicago metro suburban area, over 12 percent or 298,308 are uninsured. Most work in small firms with less than 100 employees (22 percent work in firms with fewer than 25 employees; 12 percent work in firms with 25-99 employees); Individuals between the age of 19-29 in downstate Illinois are disproportionately impacted by being uninsured. Although they are the smallest population of downstate inhabitants (612,703 of 3,760,420 inhabitants total), they account for over 25 percent of the uninsured population.

"Over the years, Gilead has been witness to the rise of our state's uninsured first-hand. While we have made a difference in the lives of over 120,000 individuals whom we have connected with health benefit programs, we know the only way to fully address this issue is to continue to present data and analysis on Illinois' uninsured to guide reform measures greatly needed at the state and federal levels of government," Taitel said.

Nationally, the number of uninsured Americans has increased by about one million people annually, and it shows no sign of slowing down. According to the latest Census Bureau report, approximately 47 million people in the United States are uninsured — more than the aggregate population of 24 states plus the District of Columbia — costing the nation an estimated $40 billion in medical debt.

The Gilead Outreach and Referral Center commissioned faculty at the University of Illinois at Chicago, School of Public Health to analyze data to support The Face of the Uninsured: A Detailed Description of Illinois' Uninsured.

Announces Cast For "Charlotte's Web"

The Orland Park Theatre Troupe has chosen the E.B. White classic, "Charlotte's Web," as its children's summer show.

"Our summer production is always tailored to children or teens," said Orland Park Recreation Program Supervisor Irene Buikema, executive producer of the village's theater program. "We're very excited to bring 'Charlotte's Web' to our stage, both because of its important message of friendship and because it's an American classic that many children read in school," Buikema said.

Performances will be held June 8 and 9 at 8 p.m. and June 10 at 2 p.m. The village's theatre program performs in the Jane Barnes Annex of the Orland Park Civic Center, 14750 S. Ravinia Ave.

Theatre Troupe Resident Producer/Director Frann Carnivele-Sidlow is producing and directing the show, with Alice Trull serving as assistant director.

"The cast includes 29 children and one adult, Michele Hynes of Plainfield, who portrays Charlotte," Carnivele-Sidlow said. "I have been absolutely amazed with the natural talent that these kids have already shown. Many of them have never set foot on a stage before and they're naturals!" she added.

Orland Park's Cecilia Trippiedi appears as the young girl, Fern Arable, while Hunter Morris, also of Orland Park, is Wilbur the pig.

Other Orland Park residents in the show include Julia Donnelly, Kayla Donnelly, Valeric Esposito, Ryan Fish, Kyle Gambla, Grainne Kelly, Kate Kelly, Mitchell Kraus, Samuel Kraus, Joshua Lahey, Nicole Lahey, Samantha Lahey, Chrystal Suich and Haley Suich.

Oak Forest youngsters appearing in the show include Cara Franson, Michaela Humenik, Louis Sidlow and Sadie Vrba. Those from Mokena include Elizabeth Fellios, Abbie Fioretti, Haley Fioretti and Jonathan Franson.

Also appearing in the show are Erin Cunnea (Crestwood), Bridget Gagnon (Plainfield), Andrew Havens (Hickory Hills), Skyler Mackovitch (Palos Park) and Katie O'Sullivan (New Lenox).

The stage version was adapted by Joseph Robinette and is produced by special arrangement with the Dramatic Publishing Company of Woodstock, Illinois.

"We do expect all three performances to sell out," Buikema said, adding that reserved seat tickets are available at the Franklin E. Loebe Recreation Center, 14650 South Ravinia Avenue, and at the Orland Park Sportsplex, 11351 West 159th St. Tickets are $12 for adults, $10 for seniors and $8 for children ages three to eleven. Further information is available by calling the Village of Orland Park Recreation and Parks Department at (708) 403-7275.

Watch Robots Compete At The Museum

On May 12th from 11:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. the Museum of Science and Industry will host ChiBots, the Chicago-area robotics group, as it holds its spring semi-annual robot games. Museum guests are invited to watch these ingenious, autonomous robots compete, and for $5, museum guests can even enter their own robots in the competitions. (The entry fee will be waived for members of the Museum of Science and Industry.)

Robots can compete in the following events:

Basic Line Following: Robots will attempt to follow a line made up of numerous straight sections, curves, and with no crossings sections.

Advanced Line Following: This event is more difficult, as it involves numerous line crossings and two 'forks in the road' where the robots make a choice of which path to follow.

Expert Line Following: Hardest of all, this line course is narrower and has switchbacks, traps, zigzags and other obstacles.

Racing Line Following: Robots run at full speed on a NASCAR-like racecourse, with only the fastest machines being allowed to compete.

Line Maze: Robots have to set out to solve a maze made up of lines drawn in complex patterns - and speed counts.

Mini Sumo: This competition is inspired by Japanese Sumo wrestling. Two robots compete against each other; each tries to force its opponent out of the ring.

Robot Talent Show: Robots will be judged on their artistic merit and unusual designs.

After the competition, robots and their owners can go explore the museum exhibit, Robots Like Us, which features more than 200 colorful robotic toys collected from the pre-war era through the 1960s.

The cost is free with museum general admission. General admission is $11 for adults, $9.50 for seniors and, and $7 for children 3-11.

The event will take place at the Museum of Science and Industry, North Court, 57th and Lake Shore Drive.

LAKE MICHIGAN SALMON FISHING ON THE 'CONFUSION TOO': Dad and I were invited to join 'CAPTAIN BOB' POTESHMAN, his first mate and co-captain, Frank Grider, and second mate and captain in training, Brian Griffen, on a morning launch out of Winthrop Harbor for a half-day charter on April 24th. I expected that there was an interesting story behind the naming of these 2 boats, the 'CONFUSION' and the 'CONFUSION TOO', however, the actions of all three men showed me there was 'NO' confusion on their boats!

We launched at 6 a.m. on the 'CONFUSION TOO' to a clear crisp morning with a blazing red sunrise that foretold of a pleasant day on the water. Frank and Brian rigged up 15 rods (3 per fisherman) with 20-lb. test line on 14 rods, and one rod rigged with 65 lb. Firewire. The rods were set with varying colors of dodgers and flies sent out with yellow birds, downriggers and dipsey divers. The water temperature in harbor was 47 degrees, and dropped to 43 a mile south. The 'power bait' turned out to be the pure white dodger and fly combination, a surefire hit according to Grider. As luck would have it, Dad caught the first fish and it was on that very setup!

We fished the shallower, warmer waters off the bottom for a few hours and then a call came in from another captain that the jumbo perch were hitting another mile out. Captain Bob asked if we would like to get in on the action. We couldn't refuse. This answered our question why Frank came on board carrying a minnow bucket. Frank then asked us what our preferences were in rods, line and reels for perching. This showed me not only that the 'CONFUSION TOO' is well equipped and her crew very knowledgeable, but that these men are serious sportsmen. We reeled in and took a heading of 177 degrees two miles out from the harbor. In the time it took us to get to the perch, our crew had us re-rigged and ready to 'dropshot' with minnows and sinkers. We spent a couple of hours perching and gabbing with these men and their passion for the outdoors. The time was getting late so our crew re-rigged again to troll for salmon on our way back to the harbor to meet their afternoon charter. All in all, it was a wonderful day of fishing!

The 'CONFUSION TOO' is a 38', 22,000 lb. cruiser with twin Chevy 350 V8's. It had been setting out from Hammond Marina, however, both the CONFUSION and the CONFUSION TOO are located at Northpoint Harbor this year due to the construction of the casino at Hammond. Both boats are equipped with all the bells and whistles such as radar, sonar, depth gage, water temp and fish finders, of course. A comfortable cabin with heat for those cold mornings (definitely a plus) and deck chairs for those lazy afternoons make a perfect setup for a family fishing outing, however, the skills and intuition of her captain and crew can impress the hardcore anglers as well. Captain Bob skillfully filleted the salmon for us to take home.

To book a charter on the 'Confusion' or the 'Confusion Too', call Captain Bob toll-free at 1(888) 929-3474 or email at call2fish@aol.com. More information about Confusion charters can be obtained at www.confusioncharters.com.

EATING SALMON HELPS PROTECT EYE-SIGHT: Two new studies give yet another reason to eat a diet rich in fish: the prevention of age-related macular degeneration, the leading cause of blindness in old age.

The omega-3 fatty acids found in fish such as salmon are already known to help the heart and brain stay healthy. The new studies, appearing in the Archives of Ophthalmology, add to evidence that fish eaters also protect their eyes.

The new studies aren't the strongest level of scientific evidence, but they confirm the findings of previous studies that also link fish consumption with prevention of macular degeneration. (Source: Great Lake Basin Report)

Introduce Bipartisan Bill To Combat Meth

U.S. Sens. Dick Durbin (D-IL) and Chuck Grassley (R-IA), both members of the Senate Anti-Meth Caucus, recently introduced the Methamphetamine Production Prevention Act of 2007. This legislation will promote the use of electronic logbook systems by pharmacies to better track the sales of ingredients that could be used to make meth.

Most of the chemicals necessary to produce methamphetamine are readily available in household products or over-the-counter cold or allergy medicines such as pseudoephedrine. Current law restricts the amount of these ingredients that can be purchased at one time by a single person. Some meth producers have been able to get around restrictions by "smurfing" - purchasing illegal amounts of meth precursor drugs by traveling to multiple pharmacies and buying small quantities at each.

The legislation revises the technical logbook requirements found in the Combat Methamphetamine Epidemic Act ("Combat Meth Act"). Enacted in 2006, the Combat Meth Act limits the amount of precursor drugs - drugs that can be used to make meth, such as pseudoephedrine - that a customer can buy and requires pharmacies to keep written or electronic logbooks recording each purchase of the drugs. This approach has led to a drop in the number of meth labs discovered in many states, however, meth producers are beginning to adapt to the current restrictions through the practice of "smurfing."

The legislation:

- Creates a federal grant program that would provide money to states to create or enhance electronic logbook systems.
- Assists law enforcement in combating the meth epidemic by improving the effectiveness of the electronic logbook systems.
- Awards federal grants on a priority basis to encourage states to design logbook systems that will be effective in stopping smurfing across state and county lines.
- Preserves existing privacy safeguards that are currently found in federal and state law.

Thoughts On Health & Nutrition

by
Lucinda K. Lysen, RD, RN, BSN

RESTLESS LEG SYNDROME

Ever have an irresistible urge to move your legs and feet when you are trying to fall asleep at night? You might have restless leg syndrome (RLS). RLS is characterized by a "creepy-crawly", burning, tingling, twitching and/or painful sensation which occurs during sleep or periods of inactivity, and is frequently accompanied or caused by uncomfortable and unpleasant sensations that are partly or completely relieved by movement. The symptoms of the condition tend to appear when you are trying to relax or sleep. This results in daytime fatigue and exhaustion which over time affects work and mental performance.

Although the cause of RLS is uncertain, researchers believe that it results from abnormal functioning of the central nervous system. RLS produces excitability in a region of the brain known as the subcortical area. A dysfunction of a nerve-signaling chemical called dopamine, which regulates movement, causes this excitability.

RLS may be more common than is currently thought. People may not report it to their physicians and some physicians may wrongly attribute the symptoms to nervousness, insomnia, stress, arthritis, muscle cramps, or aging. It is also associated with diabetes and smoking. Studies show that up to twenty percent of adults over 60 are affected. Race and genetics also play a role. It is rare among Asians and most common among people of northern European descent.

A number of conditions are associated with RLS including:

- Iron deficiency
- Low dopamine levels
- Tumors within the spine or peripheral nerves
- Pregnancy-related deficiencies in iron, folate, and magnesium
- Kidney disease
- Medications, such as antidepressants
- Caffeine

NUTRIENT DEFICIENCIES

Eating a well-balanced diet and getting adequate amounts of iron, folate, magnesium and vitamin E may avert or reduce the symptoms of RLS. It is also recommended that patients not smoke, and reduce their intake of caffeine, sugar and alcohol.

To help monitor healthy blood levels of nutrients, patients with RLS should have the following blood tests:

- Complete blood cell count and chemistry panel
- Serum ferritin for measure of iron stores
- Magnesium
- Vitamin B12

Once RLS is diagnosed, medications can be prescribed. Finding the underlying cause, however, is most effective for proper treatment. In some cases, RLS can be primary, with no underlying cause. It tends to onset earlier and is associated with a single genetic defect.

For more information on RLS, go to www.webmd.com.

Enroll More Doctors In Illinois Health Connect Program

Governor Rod R. Blagojevich on May 6th announced that the landmark Illinois Health Connect program, which guarantees a medical home for every child in the Governor's All Kids program and every parent in FamilyCare, has enrolled more than 4,000 doctors statewide - far surpassing the original goal to enroll 3,000 doctors. Even more doctors are expected to enroll as the program, which was launched in Chicagoland in March, continues to roll out in Central and Southern Illinois this summer. Illinois Health Connect is a continuation of Governor Blagojevich's nationally recognized efforts to ensure that every family in Illinois gets the healthcare they need.

Through Illinois Health Connect, every child in All Kids and every parent in FamilyCare will have a primary care doctor who will make sure they are getting regular check-ups and preventive care. The Illinois Department of Healthcare and Family Services (HFS) unveiled Illinois Health Connect in Cook and the Collar Counties in March, and will begin rolling out the program in the northwest region of the state and then in the central and southern regions of Illinois in the coming months. Through extensive outreach to doctors, through professional organizations, hospitals and direct office visits, HFS has already enrolled more than 4,000 doctors to be primary care physicians.

Physicians and medical groups around the state have voiced their support of Illinois Health Connect. In March, Christie Clinic in Champaign announced that they will take 3,500 All Kids and FamilyCare clients in addition to the clients they already serve in anticipation of the launch of Illinois Health Connect in their area.

As Illinois Health Connect is launched in each region of Illinois, All Kids and FamilyCare families will receive information in the mail on selecting a primary care physician. If they do not choose a primary care physician, one will be assigned for them.

In conjunction with the launch of Illinois Health Connect, HFS also announced the launch of the Illinois Nurse Helpline, which is available to every participant in state healthcare programs and provides back-up support to enrollees who cannot reach their primary care physicians after-hours or on weekends as a means of minimizing unnecessary emergency department use and helping participants learn skills that can help stop serious medical problems before they start. HFS Medical Program participants may contact the Illinois Nurse Helpline Monday-Friday, 6 p.m. to 7 a.m. (CST) and 24 hours a day on Saturday and Sunday. The Illinois Nurse Helpline telephone number is: 1-800-571-8094, (TTY: 1-800-571-8419). The call is free.

On Becoming A Midwife

Ricki Lake's documentary, "The Business of Being Born," along with her publicity tour has brought extreme awareness to what she sees as the benefit of home delivery. Most women however believe giving birth in a hospital provides piece-of-mind. For those women, choosing to work with a Certified Nurse-Midwife (CNM) may be the best of both worlds.

According to American College of Certified Nurse-Midwives, 97% of all births attended by CNM's occur in a hospital. Working with a CNM, mothers-to-be can experience the intimacy of working with a midwife along with the reassurance of hospital walls. Once a woman decides she wants to work with a CNM it is important she chooses the best fit for her.

CNMs are licensed health care practitioners/advanced practice nurses educated in the disciplines of nursing and midwifery. They provide primary care to women, including prenatal care, labor and delivery care, care after birth, gynecological exams, newborn care, assistance with family planning decisions, preconception care, menopausal management and counseling in health maintenance and disease prevention. If a mom-to-be chooses a midwife to share in this wonderful experience, it is important to know what questions to ask and how to determine whether mom and midwife will be a good fit.

Many times midwives develop lifelong relationships with families and share in the birthing experience from generation to generation. If someone is thinking about working with a Certified Nurse Midwife, questions a patient should ask include:

- What and why did you become a midwife?
- What is your background and training? How many births have you attended as the primary caregiver?
- What can I expect before, during and after the birth?
- What role will you play in each of these phases?
- Do you work alone or with an assistant? Will my husband be present at the time of the birth?
- What equipment do you typically use during birth?
- What complications have you seen or encountered?
- How do you handle these?

With roots dating to 1929, the American College of Nurse-Midwives (ACNM) is the oldest women's health care organization in the U.S. The mission of ACNM and the Midwives of Illinois is to promote the health and well-being of women and infants within their families and communities through the development and support of the profession of midwifery as practiced by certified nurse-midwives, and certified midwives. The philosophy inherent in the profession states that nurse-midwives believe every individual has the right to safe, satisfying health care with respect for human dignity and cultural variations. The 52nd Annual American College of Nurse-Midwives' Annual Meeting is coming to Chicago the weekend of May 25th and will be held at Sheraton Chicago Hotel & Towers.

Those who would like more information about the Midwives of Illinois or would like to find an area midwife, should visit its website at www.midwivesofillinois.org and click on "find a midwife."

Team Transwestern Rallying For MS Walk

The National Multiple Sclerosis (MS) Society's fundraising walk for Greater Chicago on Sunday, May 6th at Grant Park is receiving a major boost of support from Team Transwestern, a group comprised of more than 45 participants from commercial real estate services firm in Transwestern's downtown office.

Team Transwestern is led by Anthony Karmin, Executive Vice-President of the firm's tenant advisory group for the Midwest region. Karmin set a fundraising goal of $10,000 for this year's walk. To date, Team Transwestern has raised $6,000. According to www.msillinois.org, the amount is one of the most ambitious of all corporate participants.

The Transwestern contingent is comprised of real estate advisors, staff, clients and their families, including executives for the Chicago region, John Marquardt and Rob Karger. "Transwestern is going to become the 'poster child' for our corporate walk teams," said Lynda Chott, president of the Greater Chicago MS Society. Karmin is also calling on his professional contacts from the commercial real estate industry for their support. You can learn more about how to join the movement to create a world free of MS at www.msillinois.org.

Leading Cause Of Accidental Death Of Young Children

Calling on caring citizens across the state to join a campaign to help keep children safe near water, Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently proclaimed May as Childhood Drowning Prevention Month in Illinois.

Nationally, drowning is the leading cause of accidental death among children ages 1 to 4, and the second leading cause for children 1 to 14. In Illinois, 17 children lost their lives to accidental drowning in 2006, following annual totals of 24 in 2005 and 21 in 2004.

Less than half of recent Illinois accidental childhood drownings have taken place in swimming pools. Children are at risk anywhere water collects or is stored: in ditches, garden ponds, bathtubs, quarries, septic tanks, streams and farm ponds. Five-gallon buckets, such as those commonly used in home improvement projects, pose a special risk for toddlers with undeveloped upper body muscles, who may topple over headfirst into the bucket, unable to free themselves. Children can drown in as little as 2 inches of water, in as little time as 20 seconds. Even children who survive through resuscitation may suffer severe brain damage from the accident.

Illinois' initiative to prevent these child deaths is based on thorough analysis of statewide data, which show that physical barriers are insufficient, and that careful supervision of children near any kind of water is necessary to succeed in saving lives. The state is supported in this effort by numerous local chapters of the American Red Cross, which provide community-based information and training, water safety and Learn-to-Swim classes.

The American Red Cross identifies 4 crucial elements to childhood water safety:

Maintain constant supervision. Watch children around any water environment (pool, stream, lake, tub, toilet, bucket of water) no matter what skills your child has acquired and no matter how shallow the water. For younger children, practice "Reach Supervision" by staying within an arm's length reach.

Don't rely on substitutes. The use of flotation devices and inflatable toys cannot replace parental supervision. Such devices could suddenly shift position, lose air, or slip out from underneath, leaving the child in a dangerous situation.

Enroll children in a water safety course or Learn-to-Swim classes. Your decision to provide your child with an early aquatic experience is a gift that will have infinite rewards. These courses encourage safe practices. You can also purchase a Water Safety Handbook at a Red Cross Store.

Parents should take a CPR course. Knowing these skills can be important around the water and you will expand your capabilities in providing care for your child. Contact your local Red Cross to enroll in a CPR course.

The 101st Airborne Division Association, with headquarters at Fort Campbell, Kentucky, is seeking "lost" Screaming Eagle veterans who served with the Division during its ongoing history from World War II to Iraq. With 8,500 members and 32 Chapters, including Eagles recently returned from a second tour in Iraq, the Association is a vibrant, dynamic organization.

Activities include Memorial Day 2007 ceremonies at Arlington National Cemetery and the Vietnam Memorial, May 25-28, in Washington, D.C.; the 62nd National Reunion in Omaha, Nebraska, Aug. 8-11; and special programs to combat the hospital wounded and assist today's Eagles and their families.

This report is taken from the VFW Washington Weekly, dated April 27th.

VFW Washington Office Executive Director Bob Wallace (a past national-commander-in-chief of the VFW) testified before the Presidential Commission calling for changes to how the military evaluates disabled military personnel. This commission was set up after the disgraceful incidents at Walter Reed Army Medical Center and intends to look at all aspects of healthcare and treatment provided to our wounded warriors.

VFW also testified before the House VA Subcommittee on Health on twelve bills that were mostly centered on VA healthcare access by veterans seeking care. The VFW supports increased access to the Veterans Administration, especially in rural areas, but regards some of the legislation as too reliant on contractors, which could present future funding problems for the VA.

It is so very important that we stay alert to what is happening concerning our men who served and are now serving our country. We can't let down our guard for one day in this rapidly changing society. Contact your legislators to support all veterans' issues whenever the need arises.

On May 20th the US Coast Guard Auxiliary will hold a 9-hole Golf Outing at South Shore Golf Course, 71st and Lake Michigan. The golf outing will cost $35 for 9-holes of golf, and will include a luncheon immediately after. Tee-off time is 8:30 a.m. Part of the fee will go toward the Coast Guard Mutual Assistance Charity, a charity which has been established over 80 years. There will be a free beginner's clinic at 7 a.m. for new golfers. Prizes will be available for Closest-to-the-Pin Men, Closest-to-the-Pin Women, etc. as well as $3,000 for anyone who gets a hole-in-one on the short 9th hole.

The US Coast Guard Auxiliary is a volunteer organization that is dedicated to boating education and safety. The purpose of the golf outing is in part, to help get out the story of what the US Coast Guard Auxiliary is all about. Past military experience is not a requirement to join the organization and it is open to all.

Encourages Law Enforcement, Fire And Emergency Response Agencies To Apply For Response Equipment Grants

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently encouraged law enforcement, fire and emergency response agencies to apply for a direct federal assistance program that could provide tools to better protect and respond to their citizens in the event of a disaster. The program offers local responders, outside Cook County, the opportunity to compete for approximately $33.7 million in equipment and related training and technical assistance, which can improve their ability and capacity to respond to a major critical incident or to work with other first responders.

"Through the Illinois Terrorism Task Force, we've helped responders throughout the state get the equipment they need to protect and help their communities, including interoperable communications equipment that has dramatically increased their ability to communicate with each other during disasters," Gov. Blagojevich said. "This federal program complements our state efforts to equip responders, and I strongly encourage local law enforcement, fire and emergency response agencies to take advantage of this opportunity."

The U.S. Dept. of Homeland Security (DHS) Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) National Preparedness Directorate Commercial Equipment Direct Assistance Program (CEDAP) offers specialized commercial equipment, equipment training, and equipment technical assistance directly to smaller jurisdictions and eligible metropolitan areas.

Last year, nearly 80 Illinois communities benefited from receiving response equipment through the CEDAP program.

Information and applications for the competitive federal assistance program are available online at www.rkb.mipt.org and must be submitted by May 29th.

Jurisdictions within Cook County, including the City of Chicago, that have received Urban Area Security Initiative (UASI) funds for equipment are not eligible for this grant program. In addition, agencies that have received Assistance to Firefighters Grants since Oct. 1, 2005 are also not eligible. Agencies that received grant assistance from FEMA under the Interoperable Communications Equipment program are not eligible for interoperable communications equipment under CEDAP.

Prospective applicants can direct questions regarding the CEDAP program to the Centralized Scheduling and Information Desk at 1(800) 368-6498 or via e-mail at askesid@dhs.gov.

Family Video Lawsuit Resolved

Attorney General Lisa Madigan recently announced that her office has entered into a consent decree with Family Video Movie Club, Inc. to resolve a 2005 lawsuit filed against the video rental store chain stemming from an investigation which confirmed allegations that stores located throughout the state were not accessible to individuals with disabilities in violation of Illinois law.

"It is unacceptable that Illinois residents with disabilities have been denied access to such a popular Illinois business," said Madigan. "Today's consent decree will help to ensure equal access."

Family Video, based in Springfield, currently operates 93 stores in Illinois. It is the third largest video retailer in the country with more than 450 stores nationwide.

The consent decree, entered by the Cook County Circuit Court, requires that Family Video make all of their stores in Illinois accessible to people with disabilities. Under the terms of the decree, Family Video must modify its stores to comply with the Environmental Barriers Act, an Illinois state law requiring facilities to be accessible to individuals with physical disabilities. The decree specifies that Family Video provide legally compliant accessible parking spaces, curb ramps, entrances and service counters among other things. The decree also requires that Family Video pay a fine of $225,000.

"Illinois businesses must comply with applicable state and federal laws regarding physical accessibility. When they fail to do that, they unlawfully deny people with disabilities a full opportunity to participate in all aspects of daily life," Madigan said. "When we find that businesses have violated these important laws, we take action to bring them into compliance."

Exterior Rehabilitation: Demonstrates appropriate rehabilitation and or additions that are compatible with the Historic Bungalow style. 4. Small Scale Project: Improvement that was completed with $5,000 or less. 5. Landscape Design: Demonstrates creative design solution.

Nominations are due to the Historic Chicago Bungalow Association by Friday, June 8th. Homeowners are reminded to include 3 to 5 photographs when submitting their application.

Projects may be nominated by the homeowner, a neighbor, community group, family member or friend, but the bungalow must be certified with the Historic Chicago Bungalow Association to be considered. Finalists will be chosen by a panel of judges consisting of architects, designers, community leaders, and members of the local media.

The panel will evaluate projects based on the following criteria: 1) the nature of the challenge faced; 2) the project that ensued; and 3) how well the restoration or landscaping supports the integrity of fundamental Bungalow design. All projects must also conform to the HCBA's Design Guidelines.

"Historic Chicago Bungalow owners are in a league of their own when it comes to restoration and rehab projects and the Richard H. Driehaus Foundation Bungalow Awards reward this dedication," said Annette Conti, Executive Director of the HCBA. "We look forward to celebrating this year's winners, their bungalows and showcase their home restoration successes."

Observatory Open Viewing

Moraine Valley Community College will continue hosting its series of telescope open viewing nights in 2007. Remaining dates and times for this season's open viewing include the following Fridays:

- * May 25 at 8:30 p.m.
- * June 22 at 9:15 p.m.
- * July 20 at 9 p.m.
- * August 17 at 8:30 p.m.
- * September 14 at 7 p.m.
- * October 19 at 6:30 p.m.

Viewing will be cancelled in the event of inclement weather such as clouds or rain.

The college's next open viewing will take place at 8 p.m. on Friday, April 20, when participants can observe the planets Venus and Saturn, the four-day old crescent moon, open clusters, binary stars, a galaxy pair and planetary nebula.

All open viewing is held at the telescope dome on the G. Jack Bradley Observation Deck, located in a western sector of the college's Nature Study Area, near 107th Street and Kean Avenue. Observers are asked to park near the college's tennis courts and then walk on the path through the nature study area to the observation deck. Limited parking is also available in a pull-in area off Kean Avenue, just west of the observatory.

Tom McCague, retired associate professor and department chair of Moraine Valley's Biology department, hosts the viewing. An amateur astronomer for more than 40 years, McCague built the telescope using common hardware store items and donated it to the college. The telescope is a 6-foot Newtonian reflecting model with a 13 inch diameter and took him nearly 14 months to build.

Because of the outdoor location of the telescope, observers are reminded to dress appropriately for the weather and to bring binoculars if they have them.

Mary Kate Styler and Maggie Danaher perform at the Irish-American cultural booth at All-American Day at Richards High School.

Richards Celebrates All Americans

For nearly a decade, the staff of Richards High School has organized a spring fair celebrating the diversity and talents of the student body. "All-American Day" features food, student dance groups, entertainment, a student-produced television news magazine and, just for fun, student-faculty contests.

This year, the school added an essay contest with the theme "What does it mean to be an American?"

"Out of all the nations in the world, you find the richest blend of cultures in the United States. We have that here at Richards, too, so we think it's important to recognize how all of them contribute to the strength and beauty of America. It's also important to remind everyone of the common ground we share - our values, freedoms, rights, and, for our students, the choice to pursue the college degree and career of their choice," said Principal Ross Cucio.

All-American Day featured a special edition of Dog Pound, the school's broadcast news program. Profiling the day's event, Dog Pound highlighted the assorted cultures represented in the student body and the overall culture of Bulldog Pride at Richards. The show included student interviews.

A multicultural fair included student-staffed booths featuring information, educational materials, cultural artifacts, and food. Booths included Irish-American, African-American, Middle Eastern-American, and Greek-American and others.

For students, the highlight of All-American Day may have been the student-faculty contests. Teachers and students squared off in just-for-fun competitions that included Twinkie eating, arm wrestling, scooter racing, Hoopla-Hoop, and root beer chugging.

Dance groups, who performed at an all-school assembly, included Middle Eastern- and African-American performances. Each group gave a brief statement on the cultural significance of the dance before they performed.

Juniors Amber Atkinson and Mike Slys won the essay contests on "What does it mean to be an American?" Ashley wrote "America is like no other place on earth. It is young, powerful, and active. To me, being an American means many different things. We have freedoms that cannot be described in words. Being American means being able to be yourself. We can not only have our own opinions, but we can share them without regret or penalty. We can debate with all types of people and groups and actually make a difference. That is power."

"In America, I can write or speak how I feel about almost anything I choose. I can grow and change and become who I want to be, not who I have to be or must be. Being yourself and having the ability to reach ones highest potential is what makes America. To be an American is to be truly alive, encouraged, and FREE!"

Mike wrote "Being an American means being made up of many different backgrounds and ethnicities. Americans are accepting of other cultures, but at the same time, they realize that we are actually one big family. Americans never turn their backs on others in need. They fight for and take care of everyone. Being an American means realizing we are one big melting pot and understanding how we came to be that way. For liberty and justice for all!"

Richards High School Industrial technology teacher Christine O'Reilly collected, cut, and pasted photos of every student in the school on a paper cutout of the Statue of Liberty. Students in her Aviation Club and classes assisted with the project, which celebrated the school's All-American Day.

Recall Vinyl Baby Bibs Containing Lead

Attorney General Lisa Madigan announced on May 2nd the voluntary recall of three styles of Baby Connection baby bibs sold exclusively at Wal-Mart stores because they contain levels of lead in the vinyl that exceed the Illinois standard for lead in children's products. The Attorney General has obtained a voluntary recall agreement with Wal-Mart and the bibs' supplier. The product has been removed from Wal-Mart store shelves and arrangements to reimburse customers or offer a replacement for the bibs are in place.

Recalled bibs feature a vinyl front with a cloth backing or a cloth front with a vinyl backing and come in a variety of colorful designs including some with Sesame Street characters. The recalled bibs were sold from June 2004 to March 29, 2007 at Wal-Mart stores throughout Illinois ranging in price from $2 to $7 and typically sold in packs of two or seven. Many of the bibs have a tag sewn into the lining that contains the UPC number. UPC numbers affected by this recall are: #1468102732, #1468152705 and #1468151077.

Madigan recommends, out of an exercise of caution, that parents stop using these bibs to prevent unnecessary cumulative exposure to lead. Consumers can return bibs to Wal-Mart for a full refund or may call 1-877-373-3812 to receive a comparable replacement bib from the supplier. Consumers do not need to provide a receipt to receive a refund or replacement bib. If consumers wish to receive additional information from Wal-Mart regarding the refund they can call Wal-Mart's toll free hotline at 1-800-925-6278.

As a result of the voluntary recall, the Consumer Product Safety Commission issued a simultaneous alert on May 2nd to assist in bringing this issue to the public's attention. The Illinois Attorney General's Office commends the Consumer Product Safety Commission for issuing a simultaneous alert and for bringing this issue to the public's attention.

The Illinois Attorney General's Office and the Chicago Department of Public Health, in conjunction with the New York Attorney General's Office, began investigating after the Center for Environmental Health, a California consumer advocacy group, informed the Attorney General's Office of allegations that lead existed in the bibs. Madigan's office purchased and the Chicago Department of Public Health tested various styles of Baby Connections vinyl bibs obtained from several Wal-Mart stores throughout Illinois. Three styles tested positive for total lead in excess of 600 parts per million, the Illinois standard for lead in children's products.

As part of her efforts to protect Illinois children from the dangers of lead exposure, Madigan has obtained a commitment from Wal-Mart to seek industry-wide changes to reduce lead in children's products. Wal-Mart has put plans in place to only provide and sell PVC-free baby bibs as soon as possible. In addition, Wal-Mart has committed to support an industry standard that would eliminate PVC from children's products and establish a maximum safe lead level for children's products. Madigan commends Wal-Mart on its cooperation in this matter and its efforts in recalling these bibs.

Polyvinyl chloride, also known as PVC or vinyl, is a soft plastic used in many consumer products. Lead is commonly used as an ingredient in vinyl to help keep the vinyl stable, softer and more durable.

According to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, childhood lead poisoning is considered to be the most preventable environmental disease impacting young children. While children are most commonly exposed to lead from lead-based paints in older homes, other items such as tainted toys, food and water can be significant sources of lead exposure for children.

For more information on the effects of lead in children, visit the Illinois Department of Public Health's website at www.idph.state.il.us and the Chicago Department of Public Health's website at www.cityofchicago.org or contact the Chicago Department of Public Health hotline for general lead concerns at (312) 747-LEAD (5323).

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor,

The Illinois Family Institute applauds State Rep. Kevin Joyce for sponsoring and advocating legislation to require neighborhood libraries to filter pornography on Internet computers. Parents and law enforcement officials strongly support this common sense legislation.

Opponents of this bill suggest that this issue should be decided locally, because local officials know what's best for their communities. Yet I doubt that any local official believes that providing Internet pornography for adults or children in public libraries is somehow beneficial for the community.

No resident wants a family member rubbing shoulders in their local library with another person who has recently viewed sexually stimulating images on the Internet.

Some librarians claim that having to purchase filtering software creates a financial burden for the library district. What they aren't telling us is that once a library filters its Internet, they become eligible for federal funds under the Children's Internet Protection Act (CIPA) - an average of $17,000 per library system. This is more than enough to pay for Internet filtering solutions.

Opponents also argue that filtering technology doesn't work. Yet even the liberal ACLU had an expert argue before a Federal District Court (in ACLU v. Gonzales <http://www.paed.uscourts.gov/documents/opinions/07D0346P.pdf>, March 2007) that filters are about 95% effective in blocking unwanted sites, while providing full access to legitimate websites. The Justices agreed!

Internet filtering technology would help clean up communities and protect children and families from being exposed to harmful images in their neighborhood public library. Government, at every level, has a compelling interest here, especially as it pertains to children.

Sincerely,

David E. Smith, Executive Director
Illinois Family Institute

Governor Blagojevich Offers Condolences, Support In Response To Greensburg Tornado

Responding to the devastation caused by last weekend's tornadoes that ravaged through Kansas, Governor Rod R. Blagojevich on May 7th sent a letter to Kansas Governor Kathleen Sebelius, offering condolences for the loss of lives and the devastation suffered by the state, and by the town of Greensburg. The Governor also offered assistance to help the State of Kansas restore order to the community, keep thousands of residents safe from harm, and participate in the rescue and recovery efforts.

"On behalf of the people of Illinois, I express my sadness at the devastation caused by last weekend's tornadoes. I offer my condolences on the loss of lives and the families broken apart by this disaster. The State of Illinois joins in mourning the victims and praying that their loved ones can someday find peace," said Gov. Blagojevich. "I am proud to offer my support to the State of Kansas, and encourage you to reach out to my office and let us know in what way we can help Greensburg and its residents rebuild their lives and their community."

Last weekend, a series of violent storms blew across the Plains, killing at least 12 people in the State of Kansas. A massive, F-5 tornado with wind speeds estimated at 205 mph devastated Greensburg, killing at least 10 people and leaving the small, Western Kansas town in ruins.

In the letter, Governor Blagojevich offered the assistance of the State of Illinois and the Illinois Emergency Management Agency (IEMA) to the State of Kansas while they rebuild the communities damaged by the storms.

1970 Illinois Constitutional Convention Available At Public, Academic Libraries

Secretary of State and State Librarian Jesse White and Senate President Emil Jones Jr. announced that Illinois' public and academic libraries soon will be receiving a free CD containing the complete record of proceedings from Illinois' historic sixth Constitutional Convention in 1970.

The Illinois Legislative Research Unit (LRU), at the request of President Jones, undertook the project with the goal of having an easy-to-use, hyperlinked CD of manageable size. The CD is composed of seven volumes and approximately 8,900 pages of convention proceedings and puts them onto one Mac or PC compatible CD.

Secretary White said the convention records are still frequently used, but users, currently have only the printed volumes and index for legal research. He said public interest in the 1970 Constitutional Convention is expected to increase during the coming months as Illinois voters decide in 2008 whether the state should conduct another Constitutional Convention.

"I anticipate the teachers, historians, members of the media and others will want to revisit the 1970 Convention as the 2008 election approaches," said White. "I am delighted that this CD will be available at our public, college and university libraries. Those who review the record of these historic proceedings will no doubt be fascinated by how this important document came together during ten months of intense negotiations."

President Jones noted that the 1970 constitution approved by voters in December of that year created landmark initiatives, such as equal protection laws for women, the institution of home rule, creation of the State Board of Education, Auditor General and Comptroller's office and annual sessions of the General Assembly.

"The availability of the 1970 Illinois Constitutional Convention, on CD and online showcases an important part of Illinois' history," President Jones said. "The accessibility of the document, and the ease of searching it will allow everyone - from elementary school students to astute historians - to fully realize how the state constitution was crafted."

Patrick O'Grady, Executive Director of the Legislative Research Unit, said the CD also contains several additional documents to aid in researching the convention. He said the original document is unchanged, though LRU corrected misspelled words for searches. He said search capabilities allow the researcher to search for a word that was originally misspelled and still find it. It may be searched by key word, table of contents, or index for the volumes; or the Mary Redmond Index, organized by article and section.

In addition to its availability at public and academic libraries, the contents of the CD may be used or downloaded free of charge from the Illinois General Assembly's Internet site: <http://www.ilga.gov>.

Mother's Day At The Farm

Mothers are invited to a free visit to the Children's Farm at 12700 Southwest Highway in Palos Park, on Mother's Day, May 13.

The Children's Farm will be open May 13 from 1 until 4 p.m., as it is every Saturday and Sunday this spring and summer. Visitors to the farm can tour the barns and see the farm animals. Pigs, lambs, calves, goat kids, bunnies, chicks, and ducklings are waiting to greet farm visitors. Families are invited into each animal pen by a farm volunteer who helps children to touch and learn about the animal. According to Farm program coordinator Kay Ardizzone, the farm is a hands-on opportunity for children to experience the life of the farm. Complimentary pony rides and/or hayrides are offered every weekend throughout the spring and summer.

Admission to the farm is $4.25 per person, or by a $75 annual family pass. No reservations are required on the weekends from 1 until 4 p.m. For further information, interested persons should call The Center at (708) 361-3650.

9th Annual Child Care Business Expo

The 9th Annual Child Care Business Expo, a one-day informative, inspirational event for new and existing home-based and center-based child care entrepreneurs, will be held on Saturday, June 16th from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Chicago Hilton and Towers, 720 S. Michigan Ave., in Chicago.

Presented by the Women's Development Center (WDBC), the Expo, themed A Bridge To Success: Taking Your Child Care Business to the Next Level, will offer a wide variety of panel discussions and workshops on topics that include how to start a business, how to expand, tax and insurance issues, access to financing, professional development, managing staff, balancing business and self, and much more.

Presented in Spanish and English, the Expo will feature the annual Child Care Applause Awards Breakfast and a Luncheon Forum on the new state environmental ratings scale beginning on July 1. The Exhibition Hall will feature 50 booths, with vendors offering educational products and toys, services and resources for child care business owners.

Registration, which includes all workshops and materials, a continental breakfast, and lunch, is $40 before June 1st, and $50 thereafter. For more information, contact the WDBC at (312) 853-2477, ext. 29, or log onto www.wdbc.org.

Dog Blood Donors Can Save Lives Of Pets

Everyone knows that donating blood can save lives - and that includes people and their pets.

When a dog or cat is seriously injured or suffering from a disease, a blood transfusion can be a lifesaver.

"Having a supply of available blood is critical to treating animals," says Dr. Maureen McMichael, an emergency and critical care veterinarian at Texas A&M University's College of Veterinary Medicine & Biomedical Sciences. "The most common need for blood comes from trauma. If an animal gets hit by a car, it needs blood fast."

Other conditions, such as heatstroke and anemia, also require patients to receive additional blood, McMichael adds.

The procedure for dogs that donate blood is relatively simple. Dogs receive a physical exam including blood test and once approved, are placed on a waiting list to be called when blood is needed. Generally, the hospital or clinic covers the costs associated with donating blood, and a file is kept on each dog, including a record of its blood type.

There are several canine blood types, called dog erythrocyte antigens, or DEA. Like humans, canine blood can either be positive or negative, but McMichael says the canine blood bank is in need of donors with negative blood types because it is universally accepted.

"Dogs, unlike humans, are not born with antibodies," McMichael says. "If the dog has never had a transfusion, technically it can receive any blood type and shouldn't have a reaction the first time."

If a dog had received a prior transfusion, the information should be listed in its file. Blood testing would be used to determine an exact match. When blood is drawn, it is separated into red blood cells and plasma for storage. Plasma can be frozen up to five years but red blood cells only last 30 days, McMichael notes. Small animal veterinary clinics are constantly seeking donors because of the time limitations of the supply.

"Technically, dogs are allowed to give blood every 28 days, but we will allow them to donate blood no more frequently than four times a year," she adds.

McMichael recommends using large breed dogs to safely obtain the required amount of blood. Dogs must weigh more than 50 pounds and be in good health, free of any serious illnesses such as cancer or heart disease.

Cats can also be blood donors, but the process with felines is a bit more complex.

"Unlike dogs, cats are born with antibodies, so confirming a cat's blood type is critical," McMichael says.

The same clinical screening process used for dogs is also used for cats. Felines have three blood types - A, B and AB - and the blood type between donor and recipient must be an exact match, McMichael adds.

A substance called oxyglobin, though not currently approved for use in cats, has been substituted when a specific blood type is not available in emergency situations because it is non-specific, McMichael confirms.

"Cats do not require blood transfusions as frequently as dogs do, so there is no real shortage of blood," she notes. "Only one cat for every 15-20 dogs will need a transfusion."

There are no known risks for the blood donor. McMichael says she can't recall ever seeing health problems because of an animal giving blood and each animal is monitored closely for reactions.

"Because of the great need for canine blood and the limited number of donor banks, the availability of canine blood is at a nationwide low," McMichael says. "By placing your dog's name on a blood donor list, you can help save lives. It's a human gesture that could save man's best friend."

Do You Really Need A Lawyer?

Sometimes it's obvious. You've been accused of a crime or you are sued for damages in a civil suit, and you become very aware of the urgent need for professional legal help.

Other times, it's less clear. The fact is that legal assistance is often desirable, even essential, in situations which may have nothing to do with crime or a court action.

How do you determine if you need a lawyer? It depends on the issue. If you've received an ordinary parking ticket, you probably don't need legal help. But if you're facing a situation involving a significant amount of money or your personal rights are in jeopardy, it may be wise to seek out professional legal advice.

Common situations where you need a lawyer include the following:

When You Enter into a Contract. Any agreement, oral or written, which involves a consideration – that is, the exchange of something of value in return for some goods or service rendered – may be binding and enforceable. Generally, oral agreements should be avoided. Written agreements should be either prepared by or examined by a lawyer before you sign anything.

When Your Personal Status Changes. Marriage, the birth or adoption of children and moving to a different state may result in new or different legal and personal responsibilities. Your lawyer can help you plan for an meet new obligations, including the preparation of various legal documents which may be required.

When You Make Or Revise A Will or Estate Plan. The planning and drafting of your Will is an important legal matter. Your lawyer can plan your estate in a way that will be most beneficial to you and your heirs. In addition, your lawyer can suggest ways to organize your estate so that substantial savings in taxes and other estate costs are realized.

When You Buy Or Sell Real Estate. Buying and selling real estate is a huge financial transaction for most people. Your lawyer will review all legal documents necessary to the transaction and participate in the closing, in order to avoid legal pitfalls that could lead to losing your home.

When You Are Involved In An Accident. If you are involved in an accident of any kind resulting in personal injury or property damage you should immediately consult with a lawyer. Your lawyer may also be helpful if you believe that a doctor or other professional has committed malpractice.

Whenever Your Personal Rights Are Threatened. The law exists to protect your rights, but often you must take definite action to make those laws work for you. For example, you may need a lawyer if you've been fired from work or have faced discrimination or immigration problems.

When Financial Problems Arise. If you have tax problems or face personal or a business bankruptcy, your attorney can help you wade through the maze of legal issues towards a satisfactory solution.

When Organizing a Business. Your attorney can help with the formation of your business and assist in the ongoing concerns about employment law, workplace safety issues, immigration issues, intellectual property rights and other matters.

When You Are Arrested. If you are arrested for any reason or are accused of or questioned about your involvement in a crime, you should consult with an attorney immediately. If you cannot afford an attorney, one will be provided to you free of charge.

For further information about law-related issues, contact an Illinois State Bar Association-member lawyer in your area or visit www.isbalawyers.com.

Daley Announces New Zoning Web Page

Cook County Commissioner John P. Daley is informing residents of unincorporated Cook County about a new, convenient web site for obtaining building permits, and information about contractors, who are licensed to work in unincorporated Cook County. On line applications are available for building, electrical, and plumbing permits, as well as detailed information and supporting documents to help explain the county's application process.

The complete text of the Cook County Zoning Ordinance, completely overhauled in 2001, is also available. Future plans are being considered to add the complete text of the Cook County Building Code to the web site.

"This convenient new web site will save residents time and money," said Commissioner Daley. "Some of these tasks used to require a trip downtown to process paperwork. Now, it can all be done from the comfort of your own home."

Homeland Security Education Act

U.S. Sens. Dick Durbin (D-IL), Daniel K. Akaka (D-HI) and Thad Cochran (R-MS) recently introduced the Homeland Security Education Act to strengthen instruction in science, math and foreign language in our nation's schools.

Reports show that prior to 9/11, the Intelligence Community was not prepared to handle the challenge of translating the volumes of foreign language counter-terrorism intelligence it had collected. The Intelligence Community faced backlogs in material awaiting translation, including papers providing details on foreign research and development in scientific or technical areas; a shortage of language specialists and language-qualified field officers; and a readiness level of only 30 percent in the most critical foreign languages.

The Homeland Security Education Act provides the framework to enhance our education system ensuring that our nation will have individuals possessing these critical skills in the future by:

- Awarding scholarships to students as an incentive for them to earn undergraduate degrees in science, technology, engineering, math and foreign language studies.
- Awarding scholarships to practicing scientists and engineers and those who are fluent in foreign languages to return to school to obtain their credentials for teaching in elementary or secondary schools.
- Encouraging public-private partnerships to improve science and math curricula; upgrade laboratory facilities; provide scholarships for students to study math, science or engineering at the university level; and establish internship and mentoring opportunities for students in grades K through 12.
- Developing cultural awareness and immersion programs in colleges and universities that combine science, technology and engineering instruction with foreign language to expand international understanding and scientific collaboration.
- Creating language learning pathways to facilitate proficiency in critical foreign languages from kindergarten through graduate school.

The Homeland Security Education Act also establishes programs to increase the number of teachers in the fields of science, math and foreign language through scholarships tied to service agreements and would improve foreign language teacher professional development through partnerships between local education agencies and institutions of higher education to hold summer workshops and provide distance learning.

Internet Safety Education

Joined by educators from Chicago Public Schools (CPS), CPS Board President Rufus Williams and area lawmakers, Attorney General Lisa Madigan recently unveiled new and concentrated measures designed to help protect today's school children from threats not known to school kids of just a few years ago: online predators and other criminals that use the Internet to perpetrate crimes against children.

At a morning news conference in the library and computer lab at Chicago's Drummond Elementary School, Madigan announced two important tools that will help parents and educators monitor how children use the Internet. Senate Bill 1472 calls on schools to provide yearly Internet safety education to students in grades K through 12. In addition, Madigan announced that her office would coordinate the distribution to schools throughout the state educational videos that promote Internet safety.

Introduced into the General Assembly last month, SB 1472, the Internet Safety Education Act, sponsored by Sen. Dan Kotowski and Rep. David Miller, encourages Illinois schools to adopt an age-appropriate Internet safety curriculum. Intended to serve as a tool to assist education, SB 1472 identifies several key topics for instruction including safe and responsible use of the Internet, online predators, identity theft, cyber-bullying and harassment, and illegal downloading.

Madigan also announced that her office will coordinate the distribution of Think Before You Post, a new public service advertising (PSA) campaign created by NCMEC and the U.S. Dept. of Justice in cooperation with the Ad Council. The PSAs are designed to raise awareness about the prevalence of online sexual exploitation and to help parents, guardians and teens better protect themselves from online predators.

Approximately 34 percent of children ages 10 to 17 post their real names, telephone numbers, home addresses or the names of their schools online where anyone could see, according to a recent study conducted by University of New Hampshire researchers for NCMEC.

Madigan commended Superintendent Arne Duncan and the Chicago Public Schools for partnering with her office in making the Think Before You Post PSA available to over 500 grammar and high schools throughout the city of Chicago.

Madigan used the occasion to stress the ever-changing virtual world and how online predators have new mediums to reach potential victims and perpetrate crimes against children.

According to a 2005 report by the Pew Internet and American Life Project, 87 percent of teens between the ages of 12 and 17 are online.

In 2006, 55 percent of teens reported use of social networking web site of which 48 percent reported visiting such web sites at least daily.

According to NCMEC, approximately 13 percent of youth received a sexual solicitation or approach over the Internet within the preceding year.

Governor Announces U Of I's Historic Lincoln Hall Project Will Be "Green"

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently announced that the planned $66.4 million rehabilitation of the University of Illinois' historic Lincoln Hall will be a model "green" project, and will be submitted for an official national designation of projects that place an emphasis on energy-efficient and environmentally-friendly design.

The Lincoln Hall project will be submitted for Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) Gold certification, which would place the project at the forefront of the national movement for sustainable energy practices.

LEED certification rates projects based on their energy and water use efficiency, indoor air quality, the use of recycled and local materials, design innovation, pollution reduction, erosion control, and the overall impact of the project on the surrounding environment. The Lincoln Hall project goals include the latest energy-saving climate control systems that would also improve indoor air quality; special insulation and window treatments to improve the building's energy efficiency while preserving its historic character; lighting systems that would conserve energy and improve the classroom environment; plumbing fixtures that would reduce water usage; and other measures that will be specifically addressed during the design phase of the project. These planned upgrades would not only save energy but also help cut emissions of greenhouse gases and air pollutants.

The State of Illinois has released $3 million for planning the Lincoln Hall renovation, with the balance of state funds, $55.1 million, included in the governor's proposed FY 08 budget. The University of Illinois is contributing $8.3 million to the project.

Lincoln Hall was built in 1911 and has had no major improvements since the west half and theater were added in 1930. The planned $66.4 million construction project will reconfigure existing space for more classrooms and to meet current life safety codes. Instructional space will be concentrated on the first two floors and the backstage area of the theater, which has not been used for 25 years since the relocation of the Theater Dept. to the Krannert Center. The top two floors will be primarily faculty office space. The building will also receive upgrades to its electrical, lighting, heating, ventilation, air-conditioning, and computer network systems, as well as new flooring, ceilings and wall finishes.

This 6.74% APR fixed rate would result in 60 monthly payments of $19.68 per $1,000 borrowed for a 5 year term, and assumes a Harris checking account with automatic monthly payments. (For loan amounts of $25,000 or more without automatic payment deductions from a Harris checking account, for a 5 year term the APR would be 7.49% and would result in 60 monthly payments of $20.03 per $1,000 borrowed.) Funds will be disbursed after the federally mandated cancellation period. Property must be an owner occupied 1-to-4 family residence in IL, IN, and WI and is subject to no less than a second lien position on your property and is subject to our underwriting standards. LEGAL NOTICE

Cook County Annual Tax Sale Notice to Property Owners, Annual Tax Sale Schedule and Delinquent Real Estate Tax List

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNERS

This legal notice includes a list of parcels of real estate on which 2005 property taxes (due in 2006) are listed as delinquent and subject to sale as of April 16, 2007.

SPECIAL NOTE: This list may include some properties on which the taxes were paid subsequent to the list's preparation. It is the property owner's responsibility to determine if the taxes are paid in full.

IF YOUR PROPERTY IS LISTED IN THIS NOTICE FOR SALE OF DELINQUENT REAL ESTATE TAXES, IT IS IMPORTANT FOR YOU TO TAKE ACTION SO THAT YOUR TAXES ARE NOT SOLD. The sale of taxes will result in a lien against the property that will add, at a minimum, hundreds of dollars in fees to the amount currently due. Sale of the tax and continued failure by the owner to redeem (pay) may result in the loss of property.

Under Illinois law, the Cook County Treasurer's Office must offer properties having delinquent real estate taxes and special assessments for sale. The tax sale is scheduled to begin TUESDAY, June 5, 2007. The purchaser of the delinquent real estate taxes and special assessments may obtain title to these properties if they are not redeemed (paid) in a timely manner. Payments of delinquent real estate taxes and special assessments must be paid by CERTIFIED CHECK, CASHIER'S CHECK or MONEY ORDER. Payments may be made at more than 290 CHASE BANKS throughout Chicagoland through June 1, 2007. Payments may also be made in person at the Cook County Treasurer's Office, 118 N. Clark St., Suite 112, Chicago, IL 60602. For questions about submitting a payment or to verify the precise delinquent amount, contact the Cook County Treasurer's Office by phone at (312) 443-5100 or by e-mail through our website at www.cookcountytreasurer.com and click on "CONTACT US."

Credit Score Confusion

If you're one of the millions of Americans who don't know their credit scores, you could be missing out on an opportunity to save money on your mortgage, cars, jewelry, electronics, vacations and anything else you may charge.

Your credit score is an estimate of your credit risk, which is based on your credit report. Lenders use this number to determine how likely you will be to repay a loan or line of credit in a timely manner. The higher the score, the more likely you'll receive a lower interest rate, and ultimately save money.

Only 27 percent of consumers understand that credit scores measure credit risk - not credit knowledge, amount of credit or attitude toward credit, according to the Consumer Federation of America.

"There are many misconceptions circulating about the function and purpose of credit scores," said Mike Sullivan, director of education for Take Charge America, a national non-profit credit counseling agency. "Yet, this three-digit number can impact you financially nearly every day of your life."

American consumers have an average of 13 credit obligations on record at a credit bureau, according to Fair Isaac Corporation, which pioneered the most common credit score, called the FICO score. These obligations include commonly-used credit cards, store cards, gas cards and installment loans, each of which has an impact on your credit score.

To help sort out the confusion, Sullivan answers six common questions about credit scores:

Do I have only one credit score? No, lenders are not required to report to each of the three major credit bureaus: Equifax, Experian and Trans Union. Each agency may have different information on your report, and therefore, a different score.

If I continually check my credit report, will that lower my credit score? You can check your report directly from the three credit bureaus as many times as you want, and it will not affect your credit score. To obtain a free credit report, visit www.annualcreditreport.com.

If I cancel a credit card, can that lower my credit score? Yes, canceling credit cards can actually decrease your score. For instance, if you have $50,000 in available credit and owe $10,000, then you owe 20 percent of your available credit. If you close an account with a $30,000 credit limit, you will then owe the same $10,000 but it will be 50 percent of your available credit. That lowers your credit score. It also affects the history part of your score, lowering it even further.

Does my salary affect my credit score? Your credit score is based on the amount of credit and debt you have, not how much money you make. If you receive a raise, and your credit and debt remain the same, your credit score will not improve. If you receive a raise and use that extra money to pay down your debt, then your credit score will improve.

Does shopping for a loan lower my credit score? While multiple inquiries do show up on your credit report, they do not necessarily damage your score. If the same types of inquiries are made within 14 days of each other, they only count as one inquiry on your credit report. Keep in mind that this applies to loans, not credit cards.

If I only use cash to make purchases, will I improve my credit score? Your credit score is determined by the amount of credit you use, not the amount of cash you use. A steady, responsible use of credit is the best way to build your credit score. You need to find a middle ground, as an absence of credit as well as an overuse of credit can work against you.

Expand Family-Based Substance Abuse Treatment For Meth Addiction

U.S. Sens. Dick Durbin (D-IL), a member of the Senate Anti-Meth Caucus, and Norm Coleman (R-MN) recently introduced legislation, known as the Family-Based Meth Treatment Act of 2007, to improve comprehensive, family-based substance abuse treatment for methamphetamine addiction.

Durbin and Coleman noted that studies consistently show that family-based treatment increases long-term sobriety, educational enrollment, and gainful employment, along with decreased criminal activity and child development delays. Family-based treatment centers combine substance abuse recovery with mental health counseling, medical treatment, parenting, education and legal services. These programs provide essential needs of the entire family, rather than just the parent, and have proven to be extremely effective.

Statistically, Illinois and Minnesota mirror the rest of the country with at least 70% of the child welfare cases involving a substance-abusing parent. The meth epidemic now poses greater costs to states and the federal government as a result of increased child welfare and criminal justice caseloads.

"I am proud to say that Illinois has two very successful family-based treatment centers statewide," said Durbin. "The Women's Treatment Center and the Haymarket Center in Chicago have helped hundreds of participants reach their long-term sobriety goals, improve family relationships, enroll in school, and find jobs. This legislation will give these family-based centers the tools and resources they need to continue helping those that come through the door and give them a chance to open new doors for communities that still need help."

"I know firsthand from talking to victims and communities across Minnesota that methamphetamine abuse brings devastating consequences not only to individual abusers, but also to families, friends and the community," said Coleman. "Sadly, meth has a tendency to tear families apart. Our legislation will not only help parents and pregnant women break their addictions, but also provide services to help them recover their relationships with their children."

The Family-Based Meth Treatment Act of 2007: Allows additional funding for the Center for Substance Abuse Treatment (CSAT) to award grants to programs that provide comprehensive, family-based substance abuse treatment for parents and pregnant women;

Requires the Director to give priority to programs serving areas affected by high rates of meth addiction with special attention to rural areas;

Provides funding to organizations that specialize in comprehensive, family-based substance abuse treatment services for non-violent offenders as an alternative to incarceration.

Sen. Durbin recently received the Guardian Award from the Partnership for a Drug-Free America to recognize his work in combating substance abuse. He has successfully secured funds for local meth awareness campaigns in Illinois. In 2005, Durbin and Coleman co-sponsored the Combat Meth Act, which was included as part of the Patriot Act and signed into law. The bill includes funds set-aside for prosecutors and law enforcement agents for rural communities.

Declining Home Values Jeopardize Reverse Mortgage

A deeper and more widespread decline in home values is jeopardizing many retirees' ability to tap a reverse mortgage for relief from their financial hardships.

According to a recent report from the National Association of Realtors (NAR), the fourth quarter of 2006 had the biggest year-over-year decline in home prices on record. Prices dropped 2.7 percent in the fourth quarter which followed a 1.0 percent decline in the third quarter.

Not only do declining home prices impact sellers and buyers, they also impact how much senior homeowners may receive when they apply for a reverse mortgage.

A reverse mortgage enables homeowners 62 and older to convert their home equity into cash. What makes this type of mortgage so popular is that there are no payments for as long as the borrowers live in their home. The reverse mortgage is typically repaid from the proceeds from the sale of the home, when the senior homeowner no longer lives there.

The amount a borrower may receive from a reverse mortgage is determined by their age, the interest rate, and the home value. A slump in a home's value can reduce the amount a retiree may receive from the reverse mortgage.

Median home prices are down 3.4 percent, as reported by NAR. During the past six months, there have been declines in three-quarters of the markets. A number of markets reported double-digit declines.

The market with the biggest drop in home values was Palm Bay-Melbourne-Titusville, FL. The median prices plunged 19.5 percent.

A senior homeowner 74 years old with a $200,000 home may receive a lump sum of $123,421 from the federally-insured reverse mortgage. If the home value was to decline by 3.4 percent, the amount would be reduced by $4,484.

However, if the home value was to drop 19.5 percent, the lump sum from the reverse mortgage would be $99,773, or $25,717 less: a significant amount by anyone's standards.

Senior homeowners with an existing mortgage on their home must pay it off to qualify for the reverse mortgage. This is usually done from the proceeds of the reverse mortgage. Paying off an existing mortgage and eliminating the monthly mortgage payment can make a huge difference in the lives of retirees struggling to live on a fixed or limited income.

"A drop in the amount a senior customer may receive from the reverse mortgage could risk their ability to qualify if there are not sufficient funds to pay off an existing mortgage in full," Mary Pat Legler, Reverse Mortgage Specialist, South Central Bank, said. "A decline in a home's value or rise in interest rates can reduce the amount that a customer may receive from the reverse mortgage."

The good news is that NAR believes the worst is over for the slump in home prices.

To learn more about reverse mortgages, South Central Bank is providing a free reverse mortgage informational package and confidential estimate by calling them toll-free at (877) 370-7533.

Prepare For Spring And Summer Severe Weather

With the one-year anniversary of a major tornado in Central Illinois just days away, Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently encouraged people to prepare now for severe spring weather. The governor proclaimed March 4th to 10th as Severe Weather Preparedness Week in Illinois, and urged Illinois residents to learn more about the weather hazards that can threaten during the spring and summer months.

The governor said the Illinois Emergency Management Agency (IEMA) and the National Weather Service (NWS) are joining together to raise awareness of tornadoes and severe storms during this year's Severe Weather Preparedness Week. As part of the week, schools and businesses were encouraged to practice their severe storm emergency plans during a statewide tornado drill that was held on Tuesday, March 6th at 10 a.m.

Illinois experienced a record number of tornadoes in 2006, with 124 tornadoes reported touching down throughout the state. The new record surpassed the previous record of 120 tornadoes set in 2003. Tornadoes last year resulted in one death and 49 injuries. On average, Illinois sees around 41 tornadoes each year.

Weather watches and warnings from the NWS are a critical tool in alerting people to approaching severe weather in their areas. The NWS is working to refine its warnings so they provide people with more specific detail about storms in their counties.

Nearly 30 percent of all tornadoes in Illinois occur after dark. For that reason, it's especially important that homes and businesses closely monitor threatening conditions at night, particularly when people are asleep.

Besides tornadoes, spring and early summer in Illinois also bring severe thunderstorms and flooding. Severe thunderstorms can produce tornadoes, damaging winds, lightning, hail and heavy rain, all of which can cause death, injuries and property damage. Since 1990, lightning has killed 26 people. In 2001, Illinois ranked second in the nation for lightning fatalities.

While many people don't consider floods as dangerous as tornadoes, flooding is the number one severe weather killer nationwide. The most dangerous type of flooding is a flash flood, which can sweep away everyone and everything in its path. Fourteen people in Illinois have died from flash floods since 1995, most of which occurred in vehicles.

IEMA and NWS have also developed a Severe Weather Preparedness Guide, which contains information and tips on how to keep you and your family safe when a storm approaches and what actions to take following a severe storm, tornado or flood. The guide is available on the IEMA Web site at www.state.il.us/iema or by calling (217) 785-9888.

Fire At The Fox Home Center

The Alsip Fire Department is investigating a fire that struck the Fox Lumber Company on 115th & Cicero in Alsip that occurred on Sunday, May 13th. The 45-year-old business suffered extensive damage in a blaze that may have been caused by exploding propane tanks. However, it was stated that the direct cause of the blaze was 'unclear' at this time.

The fire reportedly began at about noon. The store was not crowded with only 20 employees and customers conducting their business. They were able to get out of the main building when several Oak Lawn police personnel who were eating at a nearby restaurant as well as warnings from people coming into the building alerted everyone to the fire.

When the fire fighters arrived on the scene, the building was engulfed in flames. At the height of the five alarm fire, nearly 150 firefighters from 20 departments were on the scene. It was reported that the column of smoke that the fire generated could be seen as far away as Kane County. Alsip Fire Chief Chuck Geraei reported that the fire was fully involved when the department got there. It had started in the rear northeast lumberyard and spread to the north showroom. The south showroom and lumberyard were only slightly damaged by the fire. Several explosions were heard during the fire.

Fighting the blaze became complicated due to a broken water main. Firefighters were forced to hook up their equipment to water sources in Oak Lawn and Chicago. On the scene were eight tower ladder trucks pouring water on the fire. During the fire, 115th to 107th streets from Ridgeland to Pulaski were closed off to traffic and nearly 2,500 Commonwealth Edison customers were without electricity for nearly 2 1/2 hours. By 3:05 p.m., power was restored to almost all of ComEd customers. The fire was finally under control at about 5 p.m., but firefighters remained on the scene dousing 'hot-spots' until later Sunday night.

The Fox Home Center has been an Alsip landmark for 45 years when Jack and Rod Laird opened the business in 1961. At that time, the company only sold lumber. The family-owned business grew to include a hardware store as well displays of kitchen and bathroom fixtures and children's play accessories. The company mostly sold to contractors. Damages were estimated at between $20 and $40 million.

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives as well as the State fire marshal will aide the Alsip Fire Department in the investigation of the cause of the fire. Only two firefighters were affected by dehydration during the blaze. One was taken to the hospital, the other was treated at the scene; no other injuries were reported. About 20 to 30 construction trailers parked in adjacent businesses were also destroyed in the fire.

Five Local Contractors Named In Lawsuits

The Cook County State's Attorney Office Consumer Fraud Division filed consumer fraud lawsuits on May 14th against five local home repair and remodeling contractors for violating the Illinois Home Repair and Remodeling Act and the Illinois Consumer Fraud and Deceptive Business Practices Act.

The lawsuits were filed in the Circuit Court of Cook County against Grzegorz Greda a/k/a Greg Greda and Greda Construction, 88 South 84th Court in Hickory Hills; Samir M. Mansour and his company, Precision Iron & Welding, Inc., 8800 S. Harlem Ave. in Bridgeview; Milton Cole d/b/a Mcl's Construction, 5359 W. Crystal in Chicago; and Willie Clark d/b/a Clark's Mechanical Services, James Rios and Marshall Brescia d/b/a Rios Construction, who operate their businesses from unknown locations.

Greg Greda, James Rios and Marshall Brescia were also charged with violations of the Illinois Roofing Industry Licensing Act.

The lawsuits allege that the contractors collected thousands of dollars from customers for home repair, did not start or complete the work they were hired to perform and then failed to refund deposits due to customers, even after letters were served on them by the State's Attorney's Office. Furthermore, according to the lawsuits, the contractors failed to notify customers of their rights to cancel the contracts, failed to provide consumer rights brochures to customers, and failed to maintain mandatory liability and property damage insurance.

Greg Greda of Greda Construction is accused of failing to install vinyl windows under contract for a Chicago woman and failing to install a new roof and siding on a building owned by a senior Country Club Hills woman. In each case, Greda did not provide the refunds due to the women. Greg Greda is additionally charged with engaging in the business of roofing without a license and misrepresenting in "door knocker" advertisements delivered to area homes that he was authorized to perform roofing work when, in fact, he was not a licensed roofer.

Samir M. Mansour, owner/operator of Precision Iron & Welding, is accused of failing to install wrought iron fencing on the property of a Chicago man, failing to refund the consumer's deposit, and failing to notify contracted customers of a change in business address.

James Rios and Marshall Brescia, joint operators of Rios Construction, are charged with roofing without an Illinois license and fraud for misrepresenting themselves as authorized roofing contractors.

Milton Cole and Willie Clark, both owners/operators of their respective companies, are charged with taking deposits from seniors pursuant to contracted home repair work and failing to perform any work, or refund monies paid under the contract.

The lawsuits seek to enjoin the defendants permanently from engaging in fraudulent and unlawful business practices in Illinois, and requests that those defendants who engaged in the business of roofing without a license be shut down permanently. Refunds for consumer victims and the imposition of $50,000 civil penalty against each of the defendants are also being sought.

Consumers should be aware that Illinois law requires roofing contractors to be licensed by the Illinois Dept. of Financial and Professional Regulation. Also, consumers should know that when a home repair contract for $25 or more is made in a consumer's home, by law the contractor must notify the consumer orally and in writing of their right to cancel the transaction within three business days. Furthermore, prior to the execution of a contract for home repairs of $500 or more, a contractor must provide the customer with the consumer information pamphlet entitled "Home Repair: Know Your Consumer Rights." Contractors are legally required to maintain public liability and property damage insurance in the amount of $50,000 per occurrence for property damage, $100,000 per person and $300,000 per occurrence for bodily injury, and $10,000 per occurrence for home repair or remodeling not in conformity with applicable state, county or municipal codes.

The State's Attorney's Consumer Fraud Division initiated the lawsuits after it received numerous citizen complaints about the five contractors. If you feel you have been the victim of fraud, the Consumer Fraud Division may be able to help you recover your losses, prosecute the person or business responsible for the fraud, and prevent other members of the public from falling victim to the same scheme. Cook County residents who have a complaint about a fraudulent home repair contractor are urged to contact the Cook County State's Attorney's Office, Consumer Fraud Division, at (312) 603-8700.

Amendment Establishes Early Warning And Notification System For Human Food

Last week, the United States Senate approved the Prescription Drug User Fee Act, S.1082, commonly referred to as the FDA Reauthorization bill. The bill as passed includes an amendment offered by U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL) that will strengthen the nation's food safety system. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA), one of the federal agencies charged with safeguarding the U.S. food supply, has come under fire recently in the wake of nationwide recalls and quarantines of tainted pork, spinach, peanut butter and pet food. On May 8th, the Senate approved the FDA Reauthorization bill by a vote of 93 to 1.

"With the passage of this legislation, we have begun to address the growing food safety concerns across our nation. My colleague, Congresswoman DeLauro, will be working to include this measure in the House version of the bill and we will be working together to ensure that the House and Senate include it in the final version when they go to conference on the bill," said Durbin.

Durbin's amendment establishes an early warning and notification system for human food, as well as pet food, establishes fines for companies that don't promptly report contaminated products, improves inspections/monitoring of imports, and provides better, more uniform pet food safety standards. Durbin's amendment was accepted as part of the FDA Reauthorization bill by a vote of 94-0.

Some of the new responsibilities given to the FDA under Durbin's amendment include:

- Establishing an early warning and notification system for human food as well as pet food products. The legislation directs the FDA to work with professional organizations, veterinarians and others to disseminate information about pet food contamination and in cases of both pet and human food, to keep up-to-date, comprehensive, searchable recall lists on their web site.
- Improving FDA's ability to detect problems, and alert consumers of contaminants by creating an adulterated food registry for imported and domestically produced food. The amendment requires the FDA to establish a registry to collect information on cases of potentially dangerous food adulteration to improve risk-based surveillance of food safety and improve the speed at which consumers and firms are notified. Importers and domestic processors and manufacturers of food would have to submit information pertaining to actual or suspected adulteration of food. The submission would be made to the FDA for inclusion in a centralized database through an electronic portal. The sources of the recent human and pet food contamination were wheat gluten and rice protein concentrate that originated in China. Neither shipment was inspected by FDA; in fact, FDA inspects fewer than 1.5% of imports. A database would give FDA better information on which to base inspections.

- Requiring companies to maintain records and make them accessible to FDA as part of an investigation. This provision would prevent delays that could keep contamination from being traced as quickly as possible. In the case of the recalled peanut butter this past winter, an FDA report showed that inspectors were denied documents when they requested them. The bill would clarify that when FDA conducts inspections, it will have timely access to those documents needed to safeguard the food supply.
- Establishing uniform federal standards and better labeling of pet food. The guidance and practices that today govern the pet food industry are implemented on a voluntary basis by manufacturers and state departments of agriculture. However, there is no requirement for states to adopt these practices and they don't have the force of federal guidelines. Inspections are not coordinated state to state and some states have different standards than others.

Sen. Durbin and Congresswoman Rosa DeLauro (D-CT) have been actively engaged on food safety issues for over a decade. This Congress they introduced legislation that calls for the development of a single food safety agency and the implementation of a food safety program to standardize American food safety activities (the Safe Food Act - S. 654 and H.R. 1148 in the Senate and House respectively). Currently, there are at least 12 different federal agencies and 35 different laws governing food safety. With overlapping jurisdictions, federal agencies often lack accountability on food safety-related issues.

Guilty Of Medicaid Fraud

Attorney General Lisa Madigan said a Lake County woman and the Illinois corporation she operated were found guilty recently of three felony counts based on a scheme to defraud the state's Medicaid program for more than $2.9 million.

In separate bench trials on April 18th and 19th, Cook County Circuit Court Judge James Linn found Irit Gutman and Universal Public Transportation, Inc. guilty of Public Aid Vendor Fraud, Theft in excess of $100,000 and Money Laundering, all Class 1 felonies. In November 2004, co-defendant Ilya Lubenskiy pled guilty to Vendor Fraud.

In January 2001, Universal Public Transportation applied to the Illinois Dept. of Healthcare and Family Services (DHFS) to provide transportation services to Medicaid recipients. According to DHFS, however, the application listed another person's name as the sole owner of Universal when, in fact, the corporation was operated by Gutman and Lubenskiy. The Illinois Medicaid program had previously permanently excluded Gutman and Lubenskiy following a 1999 civil settlement that resolved a federal investigation into three transportation companies that they operated.

Upon the approval of Universal's application, the corporation began to illegally bill Medicaid and submit false claims using methods that Gutman and Lubenskiy developed while operating the companies that had been the target of the earlier federal investigation. A majority of the bills submitted were for services that were never provided. In the cases where services were provided, fraudulent invoices were submitted that included excessive mileage charges or improperly charged higher "medicar" rates when "service cars" had been utilized. To further disguise the true ownership of Universal, Gutman laundered money through various personal and corporate accounts and received laundered funds indirectly from Universal. Additionally, Gutman also used corporation funds to pay various personal expenses.

The court will hear post trial motions filed by Universal on May 16th, and post trial motions filed by Gutman on June 5th. The court will hold Gutman's sentencing hearing on June 5th. Judge Linn revoked Gutman's bond and ordered her held in the Cook County Jail pending the sentencing hearing. The court also entered an order freezing Gutman's assets and Universal's assets.

For his role in the scheme, Lubenskiy is scheduled to be sentenced on June 4th to 63 months in the Illinois Dept. of Corrections and time served in the Cook County Jail and federal custody. Lubenskiy also will be ordered to pay restitution of a sum not exceeding $335,000.

Stroger Releases Auditor's Report On Juvenile Detention Center

Last week, Cook County Board President Todd Stroger released a Cook County audit of financial operations at the Juvenile Temporary Detention Center, and outlined a series of recommendations and policy changes designed to address issues the audit had identified. Among the changes include the appointment of Jennifer Kochler, a senior policy advisor to President Stroger, as a full-time senior administrator at the Center.

"My administration launched this audit to identify ongoing challenges at the Juvenile Detention Center, and we embrace our responsibility to push forward in the wake of its results," said President Stroger. "Sound fiscal practices are an essential component of good management practices, and the recommended improvements will continue to move the Center forward in its effort to improve oversight and management at the facility. I'm delighted that Jennifer has agreed to be part of the team that will implement those improvements."

The audit is part of the Stroger administration's ongoing efforts to eliminate waste and mismanagement in County Government. As part of that commitment, Stroger has given County Auditor Laura Burman broad latitude to review financial and operational practices throughout the units of County Government under his leadership.

The audit reviewed practices in purchasing, inventory control, petty cash, payroll, overtime, unclaimed and/or confiscated funds and property, and current written policies and procedures, and has recommended a series of fixes designed to enhance management oversight, increase transparency and improve accountability.

The recommendations come in the wake of a series of improvements that the Stroger administration has implemented since Jan. 1, including new overtime procedures, an employee review process designed to tackle excessive absenteeism and plans to implement a swipe system for employees to sign into the worksite. The Stroger administration, which initiated the audit after Stroger took office, is currently conducting audits of policies and procedures throughout the Juvenile Temporary Detention Center in an effort to improve operations as the President's Office prepares to turn oversight of the facility over to the Office of the Chief Judge.

Stroger testified in Springfield this March in favor of legislation that would formally authorize the Chief Judge to assume responsibility for the facility. House Bill 236 is positioned for a vote before the full senate this week, and will then go to Illinois Governor Rod Blagojevich for his consideration.

Commend City Of Chicago

U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) has announced the passage by both the House and Senate of a concurrent resolution expressing the sense of Congress that the City of Chicago should be commended for being chosen to represent the United States in the International Competition for the 2016 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

"It has been over 100 years since a Midwestern city has hosted the Olympic Games," said Durbin. Chicago is recognized as a city with a remarkable amount of diversity, culture and history that inspires people around the world. From its beautiful downtown parks to the magnificent lakefront to its terrific sports venues, Chicago is truly a world-class city that has what it takes to bring the Olympics back to the United States."

On April 14, Chicago was selected by the United States Olympic Committee to represent America in its bid for the 2016 Summer Olympic and Paralympic Games. The last time a Summer Olympic Games was held in a U.S. city was in Atlanta, Georgia in 1996. The resolution encourages the International Olympic Committee to select Chicago as the site of the 2016 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

On April 15th, Representative Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) and Durbin (D-IL) announced plans to introduce legislation that will ensure international Olympic officials, coaches and athletes receive visas efficiently in order to compete in the 2016 Summer Olympic Games.

The legislation is cosponsored by Senators Barack Obama (D-IL) and Ted Stevens (R-AK).

Award Grants

U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) announced that the U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS), Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) has awarded nearly $22,000,000 in federal funding grants to the state of Illinois.

According to FEMA, this year's grants are as follows: Chicago Illinois, $6,811,74 for the City of Chicago Office of Emergency Management and Communications for port security; $11,456 for Kinder Morgan Liquids Terminals, LLC.; and $44,580 for Mittal Steel USA, Inc. Chicagoland Area, $12,837,834 to enhance security measures for critical transit infrastructure including bus, rail and ferry system; and State of Illinois, $1,540,000 to the state of Illinois for buffer zone protection programs.

All Points Southwest

By THOMAS E. GAVIN

Voters are pleased with touch screen and optical scan voting in suburban Cook County, according to an exit poll held during the April 17th Consolidated Election. Ninety-seven percent of those interviewed rated their Election Day experiences as "very satisfactory" or "satisfactory," according to the poll conducted by Data Prompt International.

Cook County Clerk David Orr told All Points that "I'm pleased the voters responded so well to the new equipment. And those who used the touch screens were especially positive about their experience."

Nearly 2,000 people were interviewed at 20 large, multi-precinct polling places in the suburbs. At each location, interviewers approached voters after they had cast their ballots and asked them a short series of questions about their Election Day experience. Of those surveyed, 1,328 chose to vote on the touch screens; while 603 chose to vote a paper ballot.

According to the survey, older and less educated voters were more likely than others to vote on a paper ballot. Differences by gender and ethnicity were less pronounced, although men and Hispanics were slightly more likely to choose the paper ballot rather than the touch screen.

The Consolidated Election marked the fourth time that suburban Cook County had used the dual-system voting equipment. To comply with the federal Help America Vote Act, the county began using optical scan and touch screen machines in March 2006.

The findings mirror results of a survey of early voters. Over 99 percent of the 3,070 voters surveyed reported an "excellent" or "very good" experience after casting ballots on touch screens.

The Consolidated Election consisted of 730 races, approximately 2,400 candidates, 767 ballot styles, 530 jurisdictions, 52 referendums and 81 write-in candidates. It involved 2,370 precincts with 10,100 election judges and utilized 10,000 pieces of equipment and 7,500 cartridges.

A copy of the exit poll can be found on the Clerk's web site at www.voterinfo.net or can be obtained by calling (312) 603-0931. Information about other services from the County Clerk's office can be seen at www.cookctyclerk.com.

After meeting with President Bush at the White House recently, U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) said that if the President doesn't want to implement timelines created by the U.S. Congress, he should enforce deadlines for political reforms that the Iraqi government has set for itself.

Senator Durbin called on the President to join Congress in enforcing political reforms along the timelines the Iraqi government has set for itself: *Approve a provincial election law by early 2007. *Approve a law to regulate the oil industry and share revenues by early 2007. *Approve the de-baathification law to reintegrate officials of the former regime and Arab nationalists into public life by early 2007. *Approve a law to rein in sectarian militias by early 2007. *Approve laws controlling militias by May 2007. *Approve the amnesty agreement by May 2007. *Complete all reconciliation efforts by May 2007. *Hold provincial elections by June 2007. *Increase the number of battle-ready Army units. *Take over total control of the Iraqi Army by April 2007. *Be given full civil control of all provinces in September 2007. *And achieve total security self-reliance by December 2007.

Legislation initiated by Secretary of State Jesse White increasing fines of up to $1,000 for people who continually abuse disability parking placards and license plates was approved Tuesday by the Illinois Senate.

Under White's proposal (SB 1318), those caught parking with a fraudulent disability placard or license plate in places reserved for people with disabilities will face fines of $750 for their second offense and $1,000 for their third or subsequent offense.

The violator may also have his or her driving privileges, as well as the disability license plates or placard, suspended or revoked. This legislation also clarifies that placards are not transferable and the authorized holder must be present, entering or exiting the vehicle at the time the parking privileges are being used.

The proposed legislation also states that 50 percent of each fine collected will be distributed to the law enforcement agency or agencies that issued the citation or made the arrest. This includes the Secretary of State Department of Police, where 50 percent of the fine will go into the Secretary of State Police Services Fund.

The measure now moves to the Illinois House of Representatives.

Palos Township Clerk Jane Nolan tells All Points that the 2007 Cook County vehicle stickers for residents of unincorporated Palos Township are available at the Township office, 10802 S. Roberts Road in Palos Hills, now. All residents in unincorporated Cook County must purchase a vehicle sticker for every vehicle in their household by July 1, 2007. If residents purchase their stickers after July 1st, they must pay a penalty which is double the sticker fee in most cases.

Clerk Jane Nolan will be opening the Township office on Saturday, June 16th and Saturday, June 23rd from 10 a.m. to 12 noon for sticker sales. The office will also be open on Wednesday, June 27th until 7 p.m.

The Clerk's office is offering this option to make stickers available to those who are unable to purchase them during the regular Township office hours of 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Belated congratulations to Comptroller Dan Hynes and his Comptroller's Office personnel on their selection as recipients of the prestigious Abraham Lincoln Ethics Award from the Executive Ethics Commission, the only Constitutional Office to receive the honor. The award is given for exemplary adherence to the principles of integrity, fairness and public service.

The Commission lauded the Comptroller's Office for providing annual small-group ethics training for the 300 employees in the office; imposing rules to limit campaign contributions from entities holding contracts with the office and banning the acceptance of gifts of any value.

The award was created in 2006 to recognize extraordinary ethical behavior of state employees. It was presented to Hynes at the Commission's ethics conference in Springfield on April 17th.

Hynes Offers Comprehensive Look At Illinois' Revenues

Comptroller Dan Hynes issued an expanded May issue of Fiscal Focus Magazine recently providing a comprehensive perspective on Illinois' major revenue sources, including an analysis of the governor's proposed Gross Receipts Tax now under consideration by the legislature.

"The State of Illinois' finances have reached a flash point," Hynes said. "It is my hope that as lawmakers weigh the various revenue and spending options available to them for fiscal 2008 and beyond, that this in-depth look provides a useful tool for evaluating the state's current tax system and the changes that have occurred during the last several decades."

Highlights from the issue include:

- Growth in state source tax revenues deposited into the General Funds has been consistent with increases in Illinois' Gross State Product since 1976, largely due to strong growth in individual income tax collections and ongoing changes in tax policy that have expanded the state's tax base.
- Corporate income tax collections and sales tax collections have not grown at the same rate as the state's economy in the last 30 years.
- Growth in Illinois' corporate income tax collections has lagged growth in individual income tax collections since 1973 and may be primarily attributable to changes in corporate tax policy and to relatively strong growth in partnerships, S Corporations, and Limited Liability Companies which pay income tax through individuals instead of as corporations.
- If corporate income tax collections had mirrored growth in individual income tax collections since fiscal year 1980, this would have generated approximately $632 million in additional General Fund revenues in fiscal year 2006.
- The Gross Receipts Tax is a corporate taxation model that has been used in several other states with mixed results. In many states with a GRT system, it is in lieu of other taxes such as property taxes or sales taxes.
- Illinois ranked 40th among the states in 2005 in state tax revenue collections as a percent of personal income. If local tax revenues are included, Illinois moves to 25th among the states.
- Illinois' sales tax rate of 6.25% is the 9th highest sales tax rate, while 5 states have no sales tax at all.
- Over the last 10 years, the state's revenues from so-called "sin taxes" have increased from $1.693 billion in FY97 to $2.609 billion in FY06, an increase of $916 million or 54.1%, primarily due to growth in riverboat gaming taxes and cigarette taxes.

Hynes has already stated his opposition to the GRT and his criticized the governor's proposed spending proposal for failing to address a $2 billion funding deficit in the Medicaid program. Nevertheless, the Fiscal Focus presents an objective analysis of current state revenues and the GRT in an effort to provide legislators with the information they need to consider the proposals and pass an FY08 budget.

Fix Illinois' Mental Health System

For the 6th year in a row, over 1,500 mental health advocates representing patients and families from across the state traveled to Springfield to rally in support of critical services and funding measures needed to treat persons with mental illness. Scheduled to address the rally were Representatives Barbara Flynn Currie, Patti Bellock, Kathleen Ryg, Lou Lang and David R. Leitch and Senators Donne Trotter and Susan Garrett.

The National Alliance on Mental Illness gave Illinois a grade of F because mental health services are dramatically under-funded and disorganized. "People with serious mental illnesses continue to be turned away from or discharged from psychiatric hospitals without being linked to community services because we do not have a cohesive or adequate array of mental health services," said Mark Heyrman, Mental Health Summit Chairman. "Just in the past few months the lack of services in Illinois has resulted in horrible consequences for people with mental illnesses, their families and communities." These include:

A tragic fire in Chicago resulting in four deaths apparently caused by a person with a long history of untreated mental illness who set the fire while trying to keep warm; and

A person with serious untreated mental illness being shot to death by the police in his own home after his family sought their help in getting him treatment.

The shortage of mental health services ultimately places a heavy and unfair burden upon county and municipal social services agencies because without timely treatment, many persons will lose their jobs, their families and often, their home.

"In addition, our jails have become the largest Illinois provider of services to large numbers of people suffering from untreated mental illnesses," Heyrman continued. "Our jails are struggling to provide mental health services to these persons and to comply with their legal obligations. Jails in Illinois have been repeatedly sued because of their inability to provide mental health services and suicides by inmates, and one jail is even being investigated by the Justice Department in this connection."

Mental illnesses affect more than 62 million Americans - 22.2% of the population every year. With the help of new generation medications and community support, those suffering from mental illnesses can now hold jobs, pay taxes, maintain relationships, and contribute to their communities.

"We are in Springfield today saying: No more tragedies, no more wasted lives, no more wasted resources, said Heyrman. "We have carefully reviewed the programs and services currently in place and those desperately needed, and we have brought with us today specific cost-effective recommendations to present to Governor Blagojevich and the members of the General Assembly. By working together, we believe Illinois can develop programs and services that will effectively identify, support and provide access to medical care and the most effective medications for those suffering from mental illnesses rather than continuing to suffer from the high costs and tragic consequences of untreated mental illness."

20 Years Of Turkey Legs & Holes-In-One

Inspired by a ride at Busch Gardens, Ben Jones designed Congo River Golf & Games in Kenosha, Wisconsin around an African jungle theme, incorporating the history of Central Africa and two great explorers, Stanley and Livingstone. A little Polynesian and Indiana Jones influence were mixed in as well. Meanwhile, jousting knights, raucous, earth-clad mud beggars, strolling jesters, Robin Hood, and Her Majesty's Royal Parade and Progress, are set on the streets of an Elizabethan English Village at the Bristol Renaissance Faire. Both entertaining, one-of-a-kind attractions are celebrating 20-year anniversaries this year in the Kenosha area.

Located just miles from Lake Michigan, midway between Chicago and Milwaukee, Congo River and Bristol Renaissance Faire have both made their mark in the lives of numerous visitors. In 20 years time, Congo River has hosted countless birthday parties, group outings, family reunions and fundraisers. It features 18 holes of Adventure Golf, an Arcade, Concessions/Gift Shop, and a Jungle-themed scavenger hunt. Educational fun facts are placed on signs throughout the course and explain about the geographic region of Central Africa, the two explorers Stanley and Livingstone, and their discoveries. The multi-level course is a picturesque setting, full of artificial rockwork and man-made mountains, waterfalls, streams, caves and bridges. The course is designed so some holes require skill, some are based on chance, and still others call for a choice (262-857-7888.) www.congorivergolf.com.

Meanwhile, countless turkey legs have been consumed, ripe tomatoes have been hurled, and knighting ceremonies have taken place at the Bristol Renaissance Faire. This year promises to be no different as the Faire's special anniversary Feast of Fools festival begins July 7th for nine weekends through Labor Day, Sept. 3rd. "We're going to party like it's 1599," said Linda McFeters, general manager of the Bristol Renaissance Faire. One thing is certain when visiting the Faire - expect the unexpected. Jugglers, stilt-walkers, flying falcons, 16th century court dancers, world-class singers, wine tasting, Tea with the Queen and more will create lifetime memories for Faire-goers (847-395-7773, www.RenFair.com)

Exhibit "Cicadas And Emerald Ash Borers"

Cicada season is almost upon us: after 17 years, the cicadas of Brood XIII will emerge from the ground in enormous numbers this June. The insects, which have musical mechanisms in their abdomens, will certainly be hard to ignore once they have arrived in the Chicago area. To mark the emergence of the 17-year periodical cicadas, The Field Museum will open a new exhibition, Cicadas and Emerald Ash Borers, on Friday, May 18th.

The exhibit, which will be housed in several cases on the ground floor of the Museum, will feature an extraordinary video of a 17-year periodical cicada emerging from the ground, marching up trees and shrubs and bursting out of their exoskeletons to become adult cicadas. The exhibit also contains insect specimens from the Museum's collection, a letter about cicadas written by Charles Darwin to a Chicago-area scientist about the cicadas and nine different pieces of art from Asia depicting the insect and different cultural perceptions of them - including jade cicada amulets from China that were once placed in the mouths of the dead to symbolize rebirth. Cicadas will give insight to the life cycle of the cicada, the longest-living species in the world, and their astonishing behavioral adaptations.

Visitors will also get a chance to learn about the emerald ash borer, an invasive species of beetle, that is wreaking havoc on ash trees throughout the Chicago region. One fifth of all trees in the Chicago area are ash trees, and thus endangered. Visitors can examine emerald ash borer and damaged ash specimens, as well as learn how to prevent further damage.

If the Cicadas exhibit whets your appetite for all things creepy-crawly, be sure to also visit Underground Adventure to learn more about cicadas, as well as other subterranean life forms. Underground Adventure shrinks you to the size of a bug and turns you loose in an underground soil ecosystem. You will come face-to-face with giant earwigs, ants, a wolf spider and more. True cicada fans can even climb into a cicada exoskeleton. Cicadas and Emerald Ash Borers will be on display at The Field Museum from Friday, May 18 through Labor Day. Admission is free with basic admission. The Museum is open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., with last tickets sold at 4 p.m. For more information, call (312) 922-9410, or visit www.fieldmuseum.org. The Field Museum is located at 1400 S. Lake Shore Drive in Chicago.

Outdoor Jazz Concert

The 15th annual outdoor jazz concert will be held in the Pine Forest at The Center, 12700 Southwest Highway in Palos Park, on Sunday, May 20 at 5:30 p.m.

The Darlene Baresch Quartet of piano, drums, sax, and bass, with singer Darlene Baresch, will return to The Center's outdoor stage with an evening of jazz standards. The stage is located in a grove of pine trees on the north-east corner of The Center's farm property.

Guests are invited to park in the Children's Farm parking lot and ride the farm hayrack to the concert site. Guests should bring lawn chairs or blankets for seating, and may choose to bring a picnic supper (no alcohol please). The Center will serve punch and cookies.

There is no admission fee to the concert, as the jazz concerts are The Center's gift to the community. For further information, interested persons should call The Center at (708) 361-3650.

'Sanctuary' Looks At The Meaning OF Shavuot

The many dimensions of Shavuot, also known as the Jewish Festival of Weeks or Pentecost, will be explored in "Shavuot in the Jewish Community," the next episode of "Sanctuary," which airs at 11:30 a.m. Sunday, May 20, on ABC7-Channel 7.

Shavuot, one of the major holidays on the Jewish calendar, celebrates the giving of the Torah at Mount Sinai, and also is a harvest festival. In Jewish communities around the world, it is marked with celebrations, late-night study sessions, special prayers and more. "Sanctuary" will look at all of those aspects, and at how synagogues of different denominations come together for a joint observance in Chicago's Lakeview/Lincoln Park neighborhood.

Guests for the half-hour discussion are: Rabbi Asher Lopatin of Anshe Shalom B'nai Israel Congregation, Rabbi Aaron Petuchowski of Temple Shalom of Chicago, and Rabbi Michael Siegel of Anshe Emet Synagogue.

The program is hosted by Deborah Palmer Herst. This episode of "Sanctuary" is produced by the Jewish Television Commission of the Chicago Board of Rabbis and the Jewish Federation of Metropolitan Chicago. "Sanctuary" is broadcast monthly on ABC7. Other episodes are produced by the Archdiocese of Chicago and the Greater Broadcast Ministries.

MY LILAC BUSH SIGNALS THE OPENING OF FISHING SEASON: It is a tried and proven fact that when my lilac bush is in bloom, the crappies are hitting on the local lakes and ponds. And now is the time to take advantage of the White Bass runs on the Wolf River in Wisconsin, and Illinois River near Starved Rock.

In preparation for these events, I took the time to get my tackle in order, sharpen the hooks, sort out the lures, check the fishing rods for nicks in the guides and oil my spinning reel. Speaking of spinning reels, my new U.S. Super Caster 230 SX Reel, the world's only lightweight spinning reel with large diameter spools, shows great promise as a most versatile spinning reel. It is lighter than most reels, is smooth, and casts a country mile. The Super Caster comes with two huge 2.30" diameter spools. I filled one spool with Sulfix Siege 10-lb. Smoke Green monofilament line and the other spool with Sulfix Elite 6-lb. clear monofilament. All Sulfix lines have near zero memory.

Molded soft plastic fishing lures have been around for years. In 2006, Food Source Lures introduced the world's only molded fishing lures made from 100% real food, exactly what fish are hungry for and are 100% biodegradable.

Food Source Lures come in all sizes, shapes and colors for fresh and saltwater species of fish. Food Source Lures don't merely mimic a food source; they are a food source and are fully digestible by fish and other wildlife. I'm anxious to try out the Crappie Creature Food Source Lure, and some of the other lures available in a variety of scents, colors and shapes.

SPORTSMEN'S TAXES DELIVER $416.9 MILLION FOR STATE FISH & WILDLIFE AGENCIES: Excise taxes paid by the nation's anglers, hunters, shooters, archers and boaters will provide $416.9 million for state fish and wildlife agencies this year, according to preliminary reports from the USFWS. The funds collected on hunting and fishing equipment purchased by sportsmen are distributed to the states for conservation and education programs, including species protection, habitat improvement, hunter/angler access, and hunter safety.

Also referred to as the Pittman-Robertson Wildlife Restoration and Dingell-Johnson-Wallop-Breaux Sportfish Restoration programs, these sportsmen-supported funding mechanisms have been the foundation for conservation efforts in this country for more than a half-century.

GARLIC MUSTARD WEED ALERT: Like dandelions, if you have them, your neighbor has them and vice-versa. Take my word for it. The garlic mustard weed can be a big problem. It is one of the first green plants to appear in the spring, and one of the most aggressive invasive plants in the area, crowding out many native and planted plants. A classic example is Plum Island at Starved Rock. This island in the Illinois River is completely overrun with garlic mustard weed.

Because of its dominating nature, control of garlic mustard must be done in an equally aggressive fashion. I have had a running battle with this weed for four years. Garlic Mustard can be recognized at this time of year because of its lush basil leaves and early growth. Once it flowers it is the only plant ranging from 1 to 40 inches high that produces small white flowers. When crushed, the green rosettes give off the smell of garlic.

Hand pulling is the easiest and most effective way to control new or small populations. It is important to pull the entire root or new flowering stalks will emerge. Larger populations can be controlled with a combination of hand pulling or herbicides. Consult your local garden center for the best approach to handle these nasty weeds.

DUCKS UNLIMITED: Tickets are still available for the Palos Chapter of Ducks Unlimited 43rd Anniversary Dinner to be held next Wednesday, May 23rd at the Lexington House in Hickory Hills. The evening includes the $5,000 Grand Raffle; Gun Boards; Gun Raffles; Silent and Live Auctions; Sit Down Dinner and Open Bar. For information and tickets, call Jim Mayer at (708) 429-8696.

CONGRESSIONAL SPORTSMEN'S CAUCUS: In February, the Congressional Sportsmen's Caucus held a reception to welcome the Members of the 110th Congress and familiarize them with some of the issues facing sportsmen. More than 25 Members of Congress joined together with outdoor industry and conservation organization leaders as the Caucus members were recognized for their stewardship of fishing and hunting in the United States.

ACTIVISTS RANSACK GAME FARM, LEAVE ANIMALS FOR DEAD: Animal extremists vandalized a New Jersey quail farm on Dec. 18th and sealed the fate of thousands of pen-raised birds who were forced into the night without food, water or shelter. The birds scrambled out of their cages directly into the path of oncoming traffic on a nearby highway, or froze to death. (The Sentry)

Bolts Trade Trevino & Lisk For Pair Of Pitchers

The Windy City ThunderBolts completed a trade on Saturday, May 12th sending pitcher Toro Trevino and catcher Charlie Lisk to the Gateway Grizzlies for pitchers Cory Lapinski and Anthony Rebyanski.

Lapinski spent his first two seasons of professional baseball with Class A Tri-City in the Houston Astros organization. Combined between both years, the left-hander went 3-2 with a 4.22 ERA in 36 relief appearances. He struck out 87 batters and allowed just 38 hits in 70.1 innings pitched. Opponents batted just .158 against Lapinski while he pitched for Tri-City.

Rebyanski played most of 2006 for the Grizzlies. He was 2-4 with a 3.62 ERA in 19 games out of the bullpen. Frontier League hitters managed just a .179 average against Rebyanski. The right-hander fanned 36 batters and gave up only 17 hits in 27.1 innings pitched.

"I think it was a very fair trade for both sides. It was a trade where both teams were able to strengthen certain areas of their clubs. I really feel like we acquired two guys who show the ability to strike hitters out," said ThunderBolts manager Andy Haines.

Trevino led the ThunderBolts with seven wins last year. He finished 7-3 with a 3.86 ERA in 15 starts. The Corpus Christi, TX native struck out 68 batters and walked 31 in 95.2 innings pitched.

Lisk signed with Windy City last August and hit .316 in 26 games. He was picked up by the San Diego Padres in September and began this season at Class A Lake Elsinore. Lisk appeared in 10 games before being released, giving his rights back to Windy City.

The ThunderBolts will host the Rockford RiverHawks for Opening Night at Hawk Ford Field on May 23rd. The complete schedule can be found at www.WCThunderBolts.com.

Host Ghosthunter At Mt. Greenwood Cemetery

The Ridge Historical Society (RHS) will host Chicago's first and foremost ghosthunter Richard Crowe for a program on "Weird, Weird Chicago and Summertime Ghosts" on Friday, June 1st at 7 p.m. The event will be held at the Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Rudd Chapel, 2900 W. 111th St. A brief self-guided tour of some of the cemetery's most interesting sites will be available, and attendees may even catch sight of the cemetery's resident owl family on its nighttime hunt.

"Weird, Weird Chicago and Summertime Ghosts" will delve into stories such as the Eastland boating disaster, Oprah Winfrey's haunted studio, the phantom monks of St. Rita's Church, and baseball's Billy Goat Curse. Other summertime stories include St. John's Eve (June 23rd) when fairies troop and witches mount their broomsticks; and August in far eastern countries when stories about ghosts are told to "chill the blood" during the hot summer.

A native Chicagoan, Richard Crowe has been researching Chicago ghost stories and giving tours of haunted sites since the 1970s. He holds a B.A. and M.A. in English Literature from DePaul University and has authored a book on Chicago's haunted places. Widely interviewed on the subjects of folklore and ghostlore by the local, national and international press and media, he is a popular speaker throughout the Midwest. His firsthand personal experiences in investigating Chicago's and other cities' haunted sites (and sights) make his presentations all the more interesting. Crowe includes an extensive slide program as part of his presentation.

Mt. Greenwood Cemetery is the oldest park-like burial setting in the community. The charming chapel building began as a stable in 1892. The family of Willis N. Rudd updated the building in 1937 to be a memorial chapel. The building maintains its Victorian ambience and makes a great venue for hearing folklore tales.

"Weird, Weird Chicago and Summertime Ghosts" will cost $15 for RHS members and $25 for non-members. Refreshments will be served in the cemetery's administrative building following the program. Reservations are required as seating is limited. The program may not be suitable for younger children. To make reservations or for more information, call RHS at (773) 881-1675 Monday through Friday between 2 and 5 p.m.

Memorial Day Grilling Tips

Not only is May National Barbeque Month, but consumers across the U.S. will be firing up their grills for Memorial Day. And that is a lot of grilling, according to the Hearth, Patio and Barbecue Association, 81 percent of all U.S. households now own a grill.

Magic American Products offers these simple solutions for grilling success: 1. Place the grill in an open area away from buildings and low hanging brush or trees. 2. Place a heat resistant pad beneath your grill to protect your deck or patio from greasy messes. 3. Be sure to keep baking soda nearby to control a grease fire, as well as a fire extinguisher, and never leave a grill unattended while hot. 4. Heat the grill for 5-10 minutes before grilling, this will ensure any cleaning residue has burned off. 5. Apply a light coat of cooking oil or spray to the grill grate prior to use, this will make clean up a cinch. 6. Clean the interior grill completely after every use to prevent food from sticking; it makes the surface easier to cook on and the food taste better. Use an interior grill cleaner like Goo Gone BBQ Grill Cleaner, removing baked-on food and dirt, drippings, grease and soot. It clings to the grate to clean better. 7. And don't forget about the exterior as well. If you have a stainless steel grill, clean the exterior with a cleaner like Goo Gone Outdoor Stainless Steel Grill Restoration Kit (Stainless Steel Grill Cleaner, Polish and Restoration Compound) to clean, buff out scratches, remove and repel fingerprints and remove tarnish spots and rust stains.

For more ideas on safe and enjoyable grilling experiences or for Magic American products call (440) 333-0001 ext. 104 or katie@sweeneypr.com or visit www.magicamerican.com to review more than 100 cleaning and bath products - from grease and grime cleaners to patio furniture and BBQ grill cleaners.

Promote Internet Safety Education For School Children

As part of her continuing efforts to promote Internet safety education, Attorney General Lisa Madigan is encouraging parents and guardians to take an Internet safety quiz titled, "How Aware R U?" The quiz demonstrates the risks that children face online and can serve as a starting point for parents as they learn to recognize online dangers and how to educate their children about these issues.

Madigan's "How Aware R U?" quiz is part of her office's ongoing efforts to educate parents and children about the ever-changing dangers that children face online. Last month, Madigan unveiled her Internet Safety Education Act (ISEA), SB 1472, to encourage Illinois schools to adopt an age-appropriate Internet safety curriculum for students in grades K through 12. Sponsored by Senator Dan Kotowski, Senator Arthur Wilhelmi, and State Representative David Miller, SB 1472 identifies key topics for instruction, including safe and responsible use of the Internet, and the risks posed by online predators, identity theft, cyber-bullying and harassment, and illegal downloading. The Illinois Senate passed the bill and it is currently in the House Committee on Elementary and Secondary Education. Also as part of her outreach efforts, Madigan's office is distributing Internet safety educational videos to schools throughout the state.

The quiz calls parents' attention to the abbreviated language which children use in e-mails, chat rooms, instant messages, and text messages. Some abbreviations are red flags to parents for a potential danger. For example, a seemingly harmless text message "LMRL" is an invitation: let's meet in real life. When parents become familiar with these cues, they can take an active role in protecting their children.

Approximately 13 percent of teenagers reported that they received an unwanted sexual solicitation online, according to a recent study conducted by University of New Hampshire researchers for the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children (NCMEC). In addition, 34 percent of children ages 10 to 17 post their real names, telephone numbers, home addresses or the names of their schools online, where anyone can access that personal information.

These new Internet safety initiatives join the overall efforts by Attorney General Madigan to protect children from online predators, including the Illinois Internet Crimes Against Children (ICAC) task force, which is located within her office. Since January 2006, ICAC has investigated 462 cyber tips from the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, arrested 74 Internet predators, and trained more than 30,000 parents, children and educators. More information can be located at http://www.illinoisattorneygeneral.gov/children/child_hitech.html.

Although the Science Club from Shepard High School did not return with trophies from the national Rube Goldberg Machine Contest, teacher and former mechanical engineer Jeff Partynski knows they're better engineers for the experience. For a teacher, that's really the point.

The machine contest challenges students to design complex contraptions that complete simple tasks. This year's edition required teams to design and build machines that would juice an orange and pour the liquid into a glass.

"The Goldberg competition is really an exercise in new product development. Our students followed the same steps in creating our juicer that companies like GM or Sony take in creating their new products. It all starts with defining the problem. A team of people with diverse talents then begin brainstorming different ways to solve that problem," said Partynski, who worked as a mechanical engineer for more than 20 years before coming to Shepard in 2005.

"That's the kind of thing I would like to do (professionally), build and design things," junior Mike Gabriel said.

For junior Matt Bellassai, the experience proved transformational. "Before this, I hadn't really thought a lot about a major in science. But the Goldberg project has taught me to (consider it.) I'll probably major in something related to science," he said.

As Partynski knew, the teamwork and collaboration made the experience more memorable for students than the design and construction of the juicer.

"After some debating, haggling and even arguing at times, the team came to consensus and began designing, building and testing a prototype. In the end each team member contributed to the final product," said Partynski.

Indeed, for students collaborating with one another proved as great a challenge as constructing their juicer.

"The most challenging aspect was working with everyone to bring all our ideas together and getting all of the things we built to work together," said Lindsay Drabek.

"Working together and all coming together on an idea," Gabriel said was the most challenging part of constructing the juicer.

Bellassai thought meeting deadlines challenged the Shepard team the most. "Our lack of time was probably the most challenging thing. Even though we didn't place, we won in the long run because we learned a lot and laughed along the way."

For other students, taking disparate parts or mechanisms and connecting them to achieve a singular goal overshadowed any of the 'human' obstacles.

"Definitely, the most challenging part was piecing together the ideas in our minds and making everything work. Seeing them actually work was a great accomplishment," said Brittany Leddy.

Hosted by Argonne National Laboratory, the Shepard team competed late last month at the Chicago Children's Museum at Navy Pier.

Rube Goldberg was a Pulitzer Prize-winning cartoonist whose drawings sometimes featured complex machinery made from everyday parts. The contest is "designed to pull students away from conventional problem-solving and push them into the endless chaos of imagination and intuitive thought," according to www.rube-goldberg.com.

- Bring a plant to get a plant!

- Please bring them tagged and identify if they are sun or shade loving, the type and color of bloom, if known. If you have a picture of the plant, it is a handy thing for other gardeners. A perennial reference book can help in identifying plants. Only healthy, pest-free plants may be exchanged.

- This is a free exchange. Please do not bring plants to sell. It will not be allowed.
- Also why not bring your old and gently used gardening magazines or books to share with other gardeners.

The most important thing to do at a plant swap is to have fun, make new gardening friends and enjoy the spring weather. Please join us, won't you?

MEDICAL MARIJUANA BILL REJECTED

Last Thursday, a vote on the floor of the State Senate rejected the medical marijuana bill--SB 650--by a vote of 22-29. The measure, sponsored by Sen. John Cullerton (D-Chicago) would have protected seriously ill patients from arrest for using marijuana to relieve pain, nausea, muscle spasms and similar symptoms of specific medical conditions, if their medical practitioner recommended it.

Opposition to the bill came from those who worried that their support would have signaled that they are "soft on crime".

"The Illinois Nurses Association supports this legislation because nurses know that there are some patients who suffer excruciating pain that cannot always be relieved by standard pain medications," said INA President Kathleen Perry, Ph.D., R.N. "The INA supports the rights of patients to have safe access to therapeutic marijuana under appropriate prescriber supervision, and supports the ability of health care providers to discuss and recommend the therapeutic use of marijuana without the threat of criminal penalties."

As proposed, anyone with cancer, multiple sclerosis, AIDS, or similar weakening conditions would have been able to use the drug, and caretakers could have access to it for their patients as well.

"New research has shown that medical marijuana can be both helpful and safe for many people living with HIV," said John Peller, director of state affairs for the AIDS Foundation of Chicago. "A University of California study found that marijuana relieves a type of incapacitating nerve pain that causes great suffering to people debilitated by AIDS, while other research has shown that vaporization allows patients to use medical marijuana without the risk of smoking. It's time for Illinois to act so that the sick and suffering don't have to face arrest and jail."

The statements by the Nurses Association and the AIDS Foundation continue a trend of medical and professional support for compassionate legal access to medical marijuana. Over 900 Illinois doctors, more than 300 nurses and 50 Illinois clergy members individually endorsed SB650. In addition, the American Public Health Association, American Bar Association, American Nurses Association, and Lymphoma Foundation of America have issued statements of support for access to medical marijuana nationwide.

State legislation approved a medical marijuana law in 1978 but it was halted amidst political debates and other restraints. Before last Thursday, no other state action had been taken.

If Sen. Cullerton is able to garner the 30-vote minimum, he said he would reintroduce the issue before the end of May.

WGN-TV News Anchor And Cancer Survivor Speaks On Cancer Survivors Day

A Sunday, June 3 Cancer Survivors Day HDR involves placing temporary radioactive catheters directly into the prostate with sophisticated computer planning to deliver the most precise radiation treatment available. This technique maximizes the cancer treatment and minimizes side effects.

"As a cancer survivor myself, I am deeply honored to serve as the guest speaker for Little Company of Mary's Cancer Survivor Day," Jordan said.

Jordan will address cancer survivors and their families and friends from the Chicagoland area next month in celebration of National Cancer Survivors Day. Jordan was diagnosed with prostate cancer in October 2005 and underwent a da Vinci® surgical prostatectomy in January 2006. He will speak about his battle with cancer.

The Cancer Center at Little Company of Mary (LCM) is ranked in the top 27 percent of the nation's cancer programs accredited by the American College of Surgeons' Commission on Cancer. Cancer statistics at Little Company of Mary are more hopeful than ever. In the case of breast cancer, the most common cancer treated at LCM, statistics show a diagnosis in its earliest stages, the better is the chance for survival. Stage 0, Stage 1 and Stage 2 breast cancer patients diagnosed at LCM have a greater than 80 percent chance of surviving more than five years.

In 2006, Little Company of Mary joined the ranks of the academic medical centers as it offers physicians the opportunity to employ the da Vinci® Surgical System in prostate cancer surgery. A minimally-invasive da Vinci® robot helps surgeons perform complex surgeries through tiny openings using state-of-the-art robotic technology. Patients who undergo da Vinci® prostatectomies typically enjoy shorter hospital stays and earlier returns to full activities.

In addition, LCM also performs High Dose Rate Brachytherapy (HDR) for prostate cancer patients.

Jordan first joined WGN-TV in 1973 as a general assignment reporter and he also served as an anchor for the One O'Clock News. He left WGN-TV in 1978 and joined the CBS News Midwest Bureau in Chicago where he worked for two years as a reporter, covering stories in the Midwest for network nightly news with Walter Cronkite. He then returned to WGN-TV in 1980. Among the work, Jordan has completed at WGN-TV are several documentaries and news series.

LCM also is known for providing high quality screening and diagnostic testing and therapeutic treatment for cancer, including PET/CT combination scan. The hospital's 33,000-square-foot cancer facility features private chemotherapy treatment bedrooms as well as sunlit chemotherapy treatment bays. The Cancer Center provides the latest in linear accelerator technology for radiation therapy, including IMRT, and a wide range of integrative therapy services - including massage, acupuncture and healing touch. The Center also has The Eilyn Rose Cronin Community Resource Library which was recently designated an American Cancer Society Community Resource Center, private conference rooms, laboratory and meeting rooms for support groups. The Cancer Center's treatment modalities and programs reinforce the hospital's commitment to the community's health and comprehensive cancer care.

Issue Warning About Food Borne Illness Linked To Ground Beef

Dr. Eric E. Whitaker, state public health director on May 15th issued a warning about E. coli O157:H7, a specific strain of E. coli, associated with the consumption of some beef trim meat used to make ground beef. The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food Safety and Inspection Service announced that a Minnesota company has recalled 117,500 pounds of beef trim products due to possible contamination. The beef trim products were used to make ground beef including fresh beef patties, fresh or frozen meatloaf and ground chili meat. Additional products subject to recall include boxes of mechanically tenderized steaks and ground beef varying in weights. Labels on the boxes bear the establishment number "Est. 1947A" inside the USDA mark of inspection and a date code (on the top right corner of the label) between "060" and "120." Only products with those date codes are subject to recall. Each box also bears a net weight declaration and the message "Manufactured for Gordon Food Service" or "Distributed by Gordon Food Service." For a detailed list of the recalled beef products, log on to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food Safety and Inspection Service website at www.fsis.usda.gov. Consumers with recalled beef products should return the items to the point of purchase.

The trim was produced on March 27 and was shipped to distributors and retail outlets in Arizona, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio, Virginia, Wisconsin and Illinois. Because these products later became ground beef sold under many different retail brand names, consumers should check with their local retailers to determine whether they may have purchased any of the products subject to recall.

E. coli O157:H7 is a virulent strain compared to other strains of E. coli. It causes diarrhea, often with bloody stools. Although most healthy adults can recover completely within a week, some people can develop a form of kidney failure called Hemolytic Uremic Syndrome (HUS). HUS is most likely to occur in young children and the elderly. The condition can lead to serious kidney damage and even death.

Therapists Provide Music, Comfort

Have you ever listened or sung along to a favorite tune to lift your spirits? If you have used music in this way, you have experienced one of the many ways in which music can serve to motivate or relax you, and also to elicit positive emotions.

Research demonstrates that listening to music can directly and positively influence our health. Board certified music therapists use techniques that are scientifically researched and clinically designed to meet a variety of needs including pain management, reducing anxiety, improving coping skills and rehabilitating physical abilities. Music therapists work with people of all ages and abilities in settings such as schools, hospitals, long term care facilities, as well as hospice and community programs.

Nearly thirty percent of the hospices in the greater-Chicago area employ at least one board certified music therapist. They honor cultural and religious diversity of their patients by integrating the person's favorite music into the therapeutic experience. "Research and clinical experience show us again and again that the music a person likes is often the most therapeutic for them," said Laura Pawuk.

Among those who participated in hospice music therapy was an eight year old boy who wrote and recorded songs for his dying grandmother. A middle-aged man with lung cancer breathed effortlessly and without pain while listening to his favorite songs that were improvised on the guitar to match his breathing and mood. And, a mother with breast cancer was supported in her final days by her family who sang her favorite spiritual songs to the accompaniment of the music therapist's folk harp. These illustrations demonstrate some of the ways that music therapy provides physical, emotional and spiritual support for hospice patients and families.

Music therapists are employed in a variety of settings, including but not limited to, schools, hospitals, nursing homes, adult day centers, psychiatric facilities, hospice and community programs. A wide body of scientific research demonstrates music therapy's effectiveness with people of all ages and needs, including those in end of life care, premature infants, persons with special needs, cancer, strokes, Alzheimer's/dementia and Parkinson's disease. Music therapists are trained in one of more than seventy colleges and universities across the country. Currently more than four thousand music therapists are board certified. Most are members of the American Music Therapy Association.

For more information about music therapy in your community, contact Todd Schorle at (847) 292-2355, TSchorle@RainbowHospice.org.

Dental Exams Key To Personal Control Of Oral Health

You take pretty good care of your teeth, brushing and flossing daily. You don't really have any major dental issues. Is it really necessary for you to schedule dental exams unless there's a problem?

Oral health professionals point out there are numerous reasons to keep those checkups on your calendar, even if you take good care of your teeth.

"Just because it's been awhile since you've had a cavity or a dental health issue, don't give up on those visits to the dentist," said Dr. Max Anderson, DDS, a national oral health advisor for Delta Dental Plans Association. "Dental checkups continue to be an important part of taking good care of teeth, preventing problems and providing people with greater control of their oral health."

Preventive checkups provide dentists with opportunities to identify and intervene early in dental diseases. This can reduce any pain and the financial costs associated with more severe forms of dental diseases.

For example, periodontal disease that goes unnoticed for lack of a checkup can progress into more serious stages possibly resulting in pain, tooth loss and other problems. If caught early, periodontal disease is easier to manage and, in some cases, reverse.

Dental professionals can also use today's dental exams to screen for periodontal (gum) disease, oral cancer and other health issues that can be difficult to spot on your own. More than 120 diseases can cause specific signs and symptoms in and around the mouth and jaw. Dental professionals performing checkups can spot symptoms that could indicate serious health problems elsewhere in the body that need attention.

The prevention connection extends to recent changes in your health. Regular checkups allow your dentist to keep up with changes to your health status. Upon learning of medical conditions you've developed or treatments you're receiving, your dentist can recommend strategies to help you proactively counter the negative effects the conditions and treatments would otherwise have on your oral health.

Visiting the dentist for exams is certainly easier if your employer has dental benefits. Most dental plans cover preventive care and a limited number of checkups each year. If you aren't getting dental coverage through your employer, ask your company's human resources department or benefits administrator if getting dental benefits is possible. Most employers, when briefed on the many business-friendly reasons for offering dental benefits, will recognize their worth.

"Your smile and your breath, the foods you can eat and social interactions are all enhanced through better oral health," said Dr. Anderson. "Dental checkups are a great investment in your oral and overall health."

Veterans And Soldiers News

By Lori Taylor Ph: 708.388.2425

The PRYME TYMERS are inviting everyone, especially Korean War Veterans, to their meeting on Thursday, May 24th at 11 a.m. at Trinity Evangelical Covenant Church, 9230 S. Pulaski Rd., in recognition of Memorial Day. Korean War Veterans under the leadership of Paul Guerrero, a member of Midlothian VFW Post 2580 and the Korean Vets who meet in Tinley Park, will present a program entitled "Tell It America". Bob and Charlene Oehmen of Tinley Park will also be featured. They are the couple who were treated to an Extreme Home Makeover by Tinley Park VFW Post 2791 and the Village of Tinley Park for their work with the veterans organizations in the south suburban area. In addition, Bill Lythberg of Oak Lawn will share a personally written military story and Richard Hellermann of Evergreen Park will have poppies available. "If you love America, you'll love this program," said Tom Panush, program coordinator of PRYME TYMERS.

Tom said red, white and blue are the suggested colors for your attire. A chop suey luncheon, prepared by Chef Pitluck, will be served at noon. The cost is only $6 and requires reservations. Call the church office at (708) 422-5111 or Tom Panush at (708) 636-7548 by Friday, May 18th. Transportation is provided upon request. A canned goods item will also be collected for the Salvation Army Food Pantry. (If you receive this paper too late for the May 18th deadline, call Tom anyway, I am sure he will be able to help you.) Sounds like a great program, have fun.

The Alsip Mayor's Office of Special Events will present Memorial Day Services on Sunday, May 27th at 11 a.m. at the Alsip Memorial VFW Post 450, 11800 S. Old Cicero Ave. (Veteran's Way). The guest of honor will be Tammy Duckworth, Illinois Veterans' Affairs Director. Featured will be a full Army color guard, The Emerald Society, 21-gun salute, a live bugler, fly over, unveiling of Oak Memorial Carving and releasing of the Doves.

Hamburgers and hot dogs will be served following the services. Shuttle buses will be provided from Sprinkler Fitters Hall, 11900 Laramie, and from Hazelgreen School on 118th St.

Orland Park Memorial Day Services will be held on Monday, May 28th at 1 p.m. at the Veterans' Memorial, Ara Pace - Place of Peace, adjacent to the Village Hall, 14700 Ravinia Ave. At this ceremony veterans' names, added to the granite wall are read aloud.

The ceremony will conclude at 1:30 p.m. with a P-51 Mustang Fly Over, the fee for this was paid by Orland Park resident Glenn Boley. The North American P-51 Mustang was an American long-range single-seat fighter aircraft that entered service with Allied air forces in the middle years of World War II. The P-51 became one of the conflicts most successful and recognizable aircraft.

Attendees are invited to bring damaged American flags to the ceremony, as members of the VFW and American Legion will perform a flag retirement ceremony immediately following the Memorial Day observance.

Refreshments will be served in the Orland Park Civic Center immediately following the ceremony. For more information, call Gail Blummer at (708) 403-6203.

All veterans and currently enlisted service men and women are invited to march in the Beverly Hills/Morgan Park Memorial Day Parade. The men and women who have served in the U.S. Armed Forces will lead the parade as grand marshals. Community groups, scout troops, bands and families are also invited to participate. The parade steps off at about 10:30 a.m. from 110th and Longwood Dr. and proceeds north to Ridge Park, 97th and Longwood Dr. Memorial Day activities are held following the parade at Ridge Park and include a Color Guard ceremony remembering men and women of the U.S. Armed Forces, both past and present.

Families and friends of men and women serving in the U.S. Armed Forces are welcome to show their support of the troops by marching behind the grand marshals. Schools, civic associations, social groups, businesses, organizations and others are all welcome to march. Included can be stroller or lawnmower brigades, vintage cars, families or groups dressed all in red, white and blue, or kazoo bands. Applications to participate are available. For more information, call (773) 233-3100.

The Illinois Department of Veterans' Affairs invites you to attend the May 2007 Veteran of the Month Award Presentation to Geno Pierson on Wednesday, May 23rd from 1 to 2 p.m. at the Matteson Village Hall Council Chambers, 4900 Village Commons. For more information, call Michael Smith at (312) 814-539.

This week's quote: "In case you're worried about what's going to become of the younger generation, it's going to grow up and start worrying about the younger generation." Roger Allen.

Good-bye until next week. God bless you and your family and God bless America.

A message from Director James P. Sledge Illinois Dept. of Employment Security

As Director of the Illinois Dept. of Employment Security, I am asking you to partner with me in an effort to employ our nation's veterans. As you know, payroll represents a significant portion of your budget. A major cost associated with operating a business is hiring, training and preparing new employees. All too often, individuals are hired who are simply wrong for the job, resulting in lack of retention and increased costs for your business. We at the Illinois Dept. of Employment Security (IDES) understand the urgency to address these issues head on. IDES can help. In fact, we have at our fingertips one of the most time-tested plans for successful employee placement - and that plan is simple...hire a veteran.

Your organization, no matter how large or small, depends on resilient and reliable employees to ensure its success and viability. IDES can provide you with resources at no cost, including Illinois Skills Match, an on-line data based system that utilizes precise skills matching to match job candidates to your employment needs. There is also one-on-one assistance with a local IDES Veterans Employment Representative who can provide information to assist your business in receiving federal tax credits for each eligible veteran you hire.

Veterans are dependable and disciplined, trained and trainable, team players with strong work ethics who are accustomed to diversity. A veteran is a high quality candidate worthy of your consideration. When you hire a military veteran, you are not only fulfilling a crucial need within your company, but also in the process providing a service to your country's economic base. With their unique experiences enhancing their qualifications and making their skills easily transferable to a work assignment, it is very likely that they will prove to be a substantial benefit to your company. The positive advantages of hiring a veteran make the choice clear: "partner with us to change the lives of many and do our part to serve the country." Hire a veteran first!

I invite you to contact Bill Harrison at (309) 343-3100, ext. 202, or e-mail William.Harrison@Illinois.gov to learn more about the resources IDES has available for employers.

Sincerely,
James Sledge, Director
Illinois Dept. of Employment Security

Pryme Tymers Invite Vets

The Pryme Tymers, a very active fellowship that meets at Trinity Church, 9230 S. Pulaski Rd. in Oak Lawn, invites the entire community (especially veterans of the Korean War) to their meeting on Thursday, May 24th at 11 a.m. In recognition of Memorial Day, our Korean War veterans will present a program entitled "Tell-It-America."

Also featured will be Bob and Charline Oehmen of Tinley Park who recently were treated to an Extreme Home Makeover in honor of their work with many south suburban VFW posts. In addition, Bill Lythberg of Oak Lawn will share a personally written military story, and Richard Hellermann of Evergreen Park will have poppies available. If you LOVE America...you'll LOVE this program. (Red, white and blue are the suggested colors for your attire.)

A chop suey luncheon, prepared by Chef Pitluck, will be served at noon. The cost is only $6 and requires reservations. Call the church office at (708) 422-5111 or Tom Panush at (708) 636-7548 by Friday, May 18th. Transportation is provided upon request. Canned goods are also collected for the Salvation Army food pantry.

"Quality Of Life" Lottery Scratch-Off

State Senator Jacqueline Y. Collins (D-Chicago) passed Senate Bill 774 from the Senate recently, bringing funding for HIV/AIDS treatment and prevention one step closer with a new lottery scratch-off ticket.

"The increasing trends in HIV acquisition rates are alarming, especially in minority communities. The need for prevention and education is very real, and Senate Bill 774 will provide a revenue source to bring those dollars to the communities and individuals who need them," said Senator Collins.

Collins said that as an anti-gaming legislator, her decision to sponsor the bill was somewhat conflicted. "I feel compelled to move forward on this legislation because it seems as though we have lost a sense of urgency as this disease has begun to devastate poor constituencies and communities of color. And with African American women representing 64% of all new cases, it seems as though the epicenter of the diseases has shifted," said Collins. "I feel that in order to curb the increasing rate of HIV/AIDS, we need to take immediate action."

Collins modeled the game after the Ticket for the Cure, which was first released in 2006 to provide funding for breast cancer research. The ticket was expected to generate around $3 million in the first year, but had surpassed that level after just eight months.

Money raised by the game will be dispersed in the form of grants to public or private entities that serve at-risk populations. Recent data indicates that HIV rates are on the rise not just in inner-city areas, but also in rural areas where testing and treatment options may not be as prevalent. The bill provides that organizations of various sizes will receive grants. "AIDS is a statewide problem and the Quality of Life Ticket will provide a statewide response," said Collins. "The bill will sunset in 2012 and hopefully by then we will have a handle on the devastating disease."

March Against Hunger

Staff and volunteers of Operation Blessing and more than 4,000 others will join the march against hunger on Saturday, June 16th at Montrose Harbor. The 22nd Annual Hunger Walk directly benefits participating food pantries, soup kitchens and shelters that are member agencies of the Greater Chicago Food Depository, including Operation Blessing. Funds raised help provide nutritious food to hungry people in our community.

In addition to an approximately 2.5-mile walk, the Hunger Walk features an array of fun activities for the whole family. Festivities include entertainment by the Jesse White Tumblers, choral groups and more as well as face painting, caricature artists, jugglers and stilt walkers. Hunger Walk participants receive an event T-shirt, goodie bag, beverages and snacks.

Every week, nearly 90,000 people turn to the Greater Chicago Food Depository and its network of member agencies, including Operation Blessing, for food assistance. Most agencies are run entirely by volunteers and raise their own operating funds in addition to assistance they receive through the Greater Chicago Food Depository in the form of equipment, grants and training opportunities. The Hunger Walk is a unique fundraiser which helps agencies raise money through an event planned and coordinated by the Greater Chicago Food Depository, Chicago's food bank.

Operation Blessing is seeking walkers and donors for this year's Hunger Walk. To pledge your support, call (708) 597-6326. Registration on the day of the event begins at 8 a.m. and step-off is at 9:30. Free parking is available on a first-come, first-served basis.

Relay For Life: Youth Inspiring Hope

Fifteen years ago, the first American Cancer Society Relay For Life event was held in Illinois. For those involved in Relay For Life it is more than just an event, it is an experience - a life-affirming opportunity to share hope with cancer survivors, caregivers and other supporters in the fight against cancer.

While participants in the American Cancer Society Relay For Life of Oak Lawn applaud the successes made over the last 15 years, they are also busy getting ready to welcome teams, cancer survivors, community supporters and the general public to this year's event that is being held from 6 p.m. on May 19th until 6 a.m. on May 20th at TOak Lawn Community High School, 9400 Southwest Highway.

Relay For Life brings together the community in the fight against cancer. Armed with comfortable shoes and an array of supplies needed for their overnighter, young and old alike will use the illuminated path to guide their feet and hearts as they walk around the clock. Throughout the night, teams of local businesses, schools, churches, community groups and families designate at least one team member at a time to walk or run on the track.

Relay For Life starts with local cancer survivors uniting to walk the first lap of the event. Then, the survivors are joined by family, friends and co-workers who have helped them through their battle with cancer.

A Luminaria Ceremony will be held after dark to honor cancer survivors and those who have lost their battle against cancer. Luminaria, bags filled with sand and a candle that bear the names of those being honored, line the track and continue to burn throughout the night to remind participants of the incredible importance of their contributions. Luminaria are available for purchase online at www.acsevents.org/relay/il/tinleypark or by calling Marshawn Brown at (708) 633-7770.

According to the Illinois Department of Public Health, more than 61,000 Illinois residents, or 168 Illinoisans a day, will be diagnosed with cancer this year and approximately 26,000 will die from the disease. In Cook County alone, more than 121,000 will be diagnosed and nearly 53,000 will die from cancer. Lung cancer is the leading cause of cancer related death in Illinois, followed by colon and rectal cancer.

The goal of this year's Relay For Life of Tinley Park is to raise more than $117,000 for cancer research, community educational programs and advocacy initiatives, and support services for area patients and their families.

As the American Cancer Society's signature fundraiser, Relay For Life helps fund programs such as Road to Recovery, a program that provides cancer patients with transportation to and from treatments; Look Good...Feel Better, which focuses on the inner and outer beauty of women going through chemotherapy and radiation treatments; Wig Bank, that offers free wigs, turbans and other head gear; Support for Recovery, which matches newly diagnosed patients with cancer survivors to help them cope with their diagnosis, treatment and recovery. Relay For Life also helps support the Society's Patient Navigation Services, which offers a place where cancer patients and their families can meet face-to-face with a social worker to discuss questions and concerns about diagnosis including subjects such as insurance support, clinical trials, financial assistance, family counseling and treatment.

For 15 years, Relay For Life of Illinois has been celebrating cancer survivors while honoring those in the community who lost their battle with cancer. For more information on how to get involved in Relay For Life, contact the American Cancer Society at (708) 633-7770 or visit www.acsevents.org/relay/il/tinleypark.

The American Cancer Society is dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem by saving lives, diminishing suffering and preventing cancer through research, education, advocacy and service. The Illinois Division has more than 120,000 volunteers and staff fighting cancer in the state. For the most up-to-date cancer related information and to join the fight against cancer, call 1-800-ACS-2345 or visit www.cancer.org.

Baseball Scoreboard Donation

Founders Bank President and Chief Executive Officer Tom Bugielski threw out the first pitch prior to the varsity baseball game on Tuesday, May 1 between Richards and Evergreen Park high schools. Although he claimed to not have touched a baseball for years, Bugielski threw a strike to catcher Kevin Lee and thus celebrated the donation of the new baseball scoreboard by Founders to Richards.

Founders Bank pledged $15,000 to purchase the new scoreboard. District 218 Superintendent Dr. Kevin Burns, Richards athletic director Ken Styler, and Richards varsity baseball coach Brian Wujcik all took turns thanking Bugielski and Founders Vice President Roberta Bauer for the generous donation. District 218's Eileen Neary worked closely with Founders Bank to secure the donation.

Seniors Named Evans Scholars

Brother Rice High School seniors Robert Henehan (left) of Oak Lawn and Spencer Hayne of Beverly have been awarded Chlek Evans Scholarships. They were presented scholarship certificates by Ed McMahon of Orland Park, a 1980 Brother Rice graduate and Evans Scholar alumnus at the school's award night May 3rd. The scholarships are based on high school grades, financial need, moral character and record as a golf caddy. The award covers tuition and housing for one year, and may be renewed for a total of four years by meeting the standards of the Evans Scholarship Program. Henehan, ranked 71st in his class of 254, will attend Indiana University and Hayne, ranked 37th, will attend the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

They are two of approximately 200 winners of Evans Scholarships this year. The scholarships, awarded since 1930, are supported by the financial contributions of the 100,000 golfers who contributed to the Evans Scholar Foundation.

At The Oak Lawn Village Board Meeting Three New

Police Officers Sworn In

Three new police officers were sworn-in at the Oak Lawn Village board meeting Tuesday night. After administering the oath of office, Patrol Officers Anthony Capron, Charles Zylus, Jr. and William O'Connor were introduced to the audience. Trustee Robert Streit, who was acting as mayor pro tem due to the absence of Mayor Dave Heilmann, welcomed the new officers to the force.

In other business, Trustee Hurckes brought up the suggestion of Oak Lawn getting information on supplying the public with birth and death information. He stated that the Village of Evergreen Park has been supplying birth and death certificates for people who used Little Company of Mary Hospital. Hurckes said that since Christ Hospital is in Oak Lawn, he would like to see village hall supplying the same information. Hurckes said that Evergreen Park makes money providing this service and he would like to see the same program in Oak Lawn. He asked that the village look into the program.

Hurckes also suggested that information on Cicadas be available to village residents. He has received calls already asking what effects the insects will have on the village. He suggested that the information be put on the village website.

Trustee Rosenbaum asked the board members about lowering the number of board meetings during the months of July and August. He stated that this is something that the village did every summer to accommodate vacation schedules. Rosenbaum made a motion to cancel two meetings, July 24th and August 28th. This motion was passed.

Rosenbaum also announced a District Four meeting at Salem United Church at 97th and Kostner. He said that Veolia Waste Haulers representatives would be on hand to explain the new waste management schedules and regulations. For date and time, call village hall.

Trustee Phelan asked the status of the Brunswick Zone restriction. He said that the time restrictions for the bowling complex had been put off when they were approved last year and Phelan wanted to know when they were going to start. It was stated that the reason that the restrictions were set aside was to accommodate the leagues that were already playing.

Last year, the bowling complex came under scrutiny due to the many police calls that were being made there. The complex was ordered to be closed by midnight to stem the incidents. It was reported that the number of calls have decreased since last year, but summer was coming and no one wanted to take chances.

Trustee Streit reported on a police report that he had read. It involved a dog bite where a pit bull jumped a three-foot fence to go after a 24-year-old man. The bite was not serious for the man, but Streit wondered what would have happened if the victim were a child. Streit reported that the owner was not cited for the loose dog and he wanted to know why. It was stated that Oak Lawn has a leash law where animals cannot be off their owner's property without control. It was stated that the police department would look into the incident.

Clerk Quinlan reported that the village hall would be closed Monday, May 28th due to the Memorial Day Holiday. She also reported that the Johnson Phelps VFW 5220 will have a Memorial Day Ceremony at the Veteran's War Memorial on the Village Green at 11 a.m.

National Merit Scholars

Queen of Peace High School juniors Veronica Eskra (left) of Palos Hills and Cynthia Wojtaszek (right) of Oak Lawn have been named National Merit Program qualifiers. Both students completed the 2006 Preliminary SAT/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test and have met requirements to enter the 2008 National Merit Scholarship Program. With a Selection Index score of 200 or above, both students are among the 50,000 highest scoring participants of the 1.4 million program entrants.

Because these scorers show outstanding academic potential, the National Merit Scholarship Corporation has invited the students to be referred to the two colleges or universities in which the students are most interested. This service will encourage college officials to communicate directly with these scholastically-able students about the educational opportunities available to them.

In September, 16,000 of the 50,000 honored students will be announced as National Merit Scholarship Semifinalists. Semifinalists then will have an opportunity to continue in the competition for the 8,200 Merit Scholarship awards offered in 2008.

Designate Senator Maloney Field

The City of Hometown had designated a local baseball diamond the "Senator Edward D. Maloney Field" in honor of the local senator. Mayor Don Robertson dedicated the field to Senator Maloney (D-Chicago) in April in honor of his efforts that enabled Hometown to purchase lights for the baseball and softball fields.

"I believe that the construction of the lights will expand the opportunities for both children and adults to participate in sports, especially giving our children the ability to learn teamwork while increasing opportunities for family activities," said Maloney.

The field, located in Patterson Park, is used for both little league baseball and youth softball games in addition to adult softball leagues. There is also a walking path around the perimeter of the fields and playgrounds nearby, both of which will now be more desirable for evening use as a result of the new lighting.

Mayor Robertson expressed his gratitude to Maloney, emphasizing his instrumental role in the funding of the light project for the ball fields in Patterson Park. He further stated that his efforts demonstrate a strong dedication to the citizens of his district.

Senator Maloney's familiarity with the area and the need for such an improvement stems from his years as a teacher and coach at Oak Lawn High School. He felt that by making this improvement to the field, baseball, as well as other activities, would be an even more enjoyable experience for people of all ages who will use the field and surrounding park.

Unveil The New Veterans Cash Lottery

As the nation prepares to honor veterans this coming Memorial Day weekend, Tammy Duckworth, Director of the Illinois Dept. of Veterans' Affairs (IDVA), on May 22nd joined Jodie Winnett, Acting Superintendent of the Illinois Lottery, outside Rockford to unveil the new Veterans Cash lottery ticket on behalf of Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich. Director Duckworth and the Illinois Lottery also encouraged veterans' organizations to apply for Veterans Cash grants.

Veterans Cash grants are made available through the funding generated by the Veterans Cash lottery ticket. Veterans Cash grants are currently available for organizations that help provide services to Illinois veterans in one of the following five categories: long-term care; post-traumatic stress disorder treatment or research; health insurance costs; disability benefits; and housing assistance.

Launched by Gov. Blagojevich in February 2006, Veterans Cash is the Lottery's first lottery ticket where 100 percent of proceeds go to support Illinois veterans. Proceeds from the sale of this ticket are deposited into an interest bearing account in the State Treasury called the Illinois Veterans Assistance Fund. IDVA awards the money in grants to fund additional services or conduct research relating to Veterans' Post Traumatic Stress Disorder, homelessness, health insurance costs, and disability benefits.

The Veterans Cash ticket has raised more than $3 million for the Illinois Veterans' Assistance Trust Fund. Combined with the proceeds from this year's previous ticket, Two for the Dough, the new Veterans Cash ticket is expected to generate more than $3 million this year for veteran services throughout the state.

Since the beginning of 2007, IDVA has granted over $1.4 million to veterans' organizations from around the state. Grants have ranged from $2,500 for clothing, food and transportation to local VA hospitals for sick homeless veterans, to $125,000 for the expansion of a homeless shelter. Director Duckworth is encouraging organizations that provide a wide range of services to our veterans to submit a grant application.

Veterans Cash is currently available at all Illinois Lottery retail locations. Each ticket costs $2 and has a top prize of $20,000.

Propose Two Changes To Firearms Law

Attorney General Lisa Madigan announced new legislation in response to the Virginia Tech tragedy to require Illinois to participate in the federal government's National Instant Criminal Background Check System and to close loopholes in existing Illinois law to keep guns out of the hands of prohibited purchasers. Senate Bill 940, sponsored by Senator Dan Kotowski (D-33rd) and Representative Harry Osterman (D-14th), proposes two key changes to make sure that Illinois law effectively prevents access to firearms by those who are prohibited from purchasing or owning guns.

First, the bill requires Illinois to share information about persons who are prohibited gun purchasers under federal or state law with the federal government's National Instant Criminal Background Check System (NICS). NICS was established under the 1993 Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act and is designed to allow any federal firearm licensee to be immediately supplied with information concerning whether a prospective gun purchaser is prohibited under state or federal law from owning a firearm.

Currently, 22 states share information with NICS regarding individuals prohibited from purchasing firearms under state and federal law. Illinois does not share information with NICS. It is critical that Illinois begin sharing information regarding prohibited gun buyers and owners with the NICS database so that persons who are prohibited gun purchasers cannot circumvent state or federal law by crossing state lines. Illinois' participation in NICS will give other states the information they need to prevent individuals prohibited under state or federal law from purchasing firearms.

"The background check databases exist to make sure that we can enforce the gun laws and protect people throughout the country," Madigan said. "The Illinois and federal background check databases should work together seamlessly to prevent prohibited purchases of firearms. Every state needs to do this."

Second, SB 940 would close a significant gap in the laws governing gun purchases. Illinois law currently mandates that the Illinois State Police deny an application for or revoke a current Firearm Owner's Identification Card (FOID card) for a person whose mental condition poses a clear and present danger to themselves, to others or to the community. However, under the present law, the Illinois State Police only receive notice of people who have received inpatient mental health treatment. Information concerning a person whose mental condition poses a clear and present danger to themselves, to others or to the community, but who has received outpatient, and not inpatient, mental health treatment is not submitted to the Illinois State Police. Consequently, the Illinois State Police background check system does not capture the information needed to ensure that a person who is precluded under the law from holding a FOID card cannot purchase a firearm.

SB 940 would close that loophole by mandating that the Illinois State Police receive sufficient information to effectively enforce the FOID Act. Specifically, SB 940 requires that hospitals and mental health facilities report information to the Illinois State Police concerning individuals who because of their mental condition are prohibited from purchasing a gun, regardless of whether the individuals received inpatient or outpatient mental health treatment.

Illinois State Police acts as the Point of Contact for the National Instant Background Check System and all federally licensed firearm dealers in Illinois are required to contact the Illinois State Police to determine whether the prospective gun purchaser is prohibited under federal or state law from purchasing a firearm.

Additionally, SB 940 is designed to make sure that Illinois State Police records are up-to-date by requiring that hospitals and mental health facilities report this information to the Illinois State Police within seven days of admission or provision of mental health services. The current law requires reporting within 30 days of admission to a hospital for inpatient treatment.

"This legislation strengthens existing laws," said State Representative Harry Osterman. "More thorough and timelier reporting requirements will better protect the public."

"Our laws make it clear that people who pose a danger to themselves or others should not be able to purchase or own a firearm. But those laws are only as effective as the information available to prevent unlawful purchases," said Madigan. "By closing this loophole in Illinois law, we can make it significantly harder for people who cannot legally own a gun to obtain one."

Offenders Registry

Governor Rod R. Blagojevich recently unveiled two new features to the ISP's website which will provide communities with more information about those convicted of sex offenses, child murderers, and violent offenders who have harmed children. The enhancements are the results of legislation signed by the governor to protect communities from sexual predators.

SB 3016 and HB 4193 require the Illinois State Police to enhance mapping capabilities that show names and addresses of offenders on the Illinois Sex Offender Registry (SOR). The legislation also adds the Child Murderer and Violent Offender Against Youth Registry to the ISP home page.

On July 3, 2006, Gov. Blagojevich signed SB 3016 which requires the ISP to add mapping capabilities on the Illinois Sex Offender Information website (<http://www.isp.state.il.us/sor>). Individuals making an inquiry on the site can determine the residence of a registered sex offender through a map with a radius from 500 feet to five miles from their home or any other address. Locations of schools and city, county and state parks are also displayed. Users can also obtain a photograph, if available, physical descriptions and information about the crime(s) for which the individual was convicted and is required to register.

Also now available through the Illinois State Police website is the Child Murderer and Violent Offender Against Youth (CMVOY) registry, accessible at <http://www.isp.state.il.us/cmvo>. The CMVOY registry contains individuals convicted of specific crimes in which the victim was a minor, but the crime was not sexually motivated. The crimes - as defined by HB 4193, signed by Governor Blagojevich on June 27, 2006 - include kidnapping, aggravated kidnapping, unlawful restraint, aggravated unlawful restraint, and any attempt to commit any of these offenses when the victim is under 18 years of age and when the defendant is not a parent of the victim. Other offenses include forcible detention, child abduction or murder when the victim was a person under 18 years of age and the defendant was at least 17 years of age.

Similar to the Sex Offender Information website, the CMVOY reflects individuals who have been determined by the county state's attorney to qualify under the provision of the new statute. Until proper verification and notification is received by law enforcement from the state's attorney, these individuals will remain on the Sex Offender Information website. All sex offenders who may be eligible for registration under the Child Murderer Violent Offender Youth Act have been notified of the process he or she must initiate to be transferred from the SOR to the Child Murderer and Violent Offender Against Youth registry. These offenders must continue to register as sex offenders until the appropriate determination has been made and information has been received by law enforcement.

CAGW Names Rep. Don

Young "Porker Of The Month"

Citizens Against Government Waste (CAGW) has named Representative Don Young (R-Alaska), the "Congressman for all Alaska," as Porker of the Month for defending earmarks and pledging to continue his state's disproportionate harvest of federal tax dollars.

During an April 9 KTUU-TV (Channel 2, Anchorage) interview, Rep. Young said, "People don't understand that this so-called cry for stopping earmarks, it does not add to the national debt. If you have a budget - that's the budget we just voted on that we work in, what we do is decide within the budget where those dollars will go." He also called President Bush's criticism of earmarks "dead wrong."

The annual budget resolution is non-binding. Since Congress can exceed its spending limits without penalty, the budget does not negate the cost of earmarks. Second, Congress has no obligation to spend all of the money in the budget. Instead of going to pork projects, the money could go toward reducing the national debt or, even better, back into taxpayers' wallets. In 2006, the last year all appropriations bills were passed, total pork spending reached $29 billion. With roughly 300 million people in the U.S., each person could have received almost $100.

Earmarks add to the national debt by acting as the gateway drug to Congress's spending addiction. Pork-barrel spending allows politicians to target benefits to specific groups at taxpayers' expense. That vote-buying mentality spills over into other areas of the budget, like entitlements, leading to higher overall spending. Pork also conditions voters to re-elect incumbents based on their ability to "bring home the bacon." Democracy is corrupted when Congress stops acting in the national interest and becomes source of hand-outs to lobbyists and special interests.

Although members of Congress profess the wisdom to fund the most worthy projects, the record of congressional earmarking is rife with waste, abuse, and inequity. Members of the House and Senate Appropriations Committees make off with the lion's share of pork. KTUU reported that Rep. Young "is confident Alaska will continue to be successful securing more than its share of federal funding." Last week, the Office of Management and Budget's 2005 earmark database confirmed CAGW's 2005 Congressional Pig Book ranking of Alaska as the number one state in pork per capita. Members routinely seek projects that benefit themselves, relatives, or campaign contributors. The 2005 highway bill included an earmark of $229 million for the Knik Arm bridge in Alaska, which was to have been renamed "Don Young's Way," before public outrage forced Congress to remove the earmark. The elimination of earmarks would filter more money through competitive grant programs, making it harder for such narcissistic boondoggles to pass muster.

For ignoring the detrimental effect of earmarks and pledging to fortify Alaska's status as America's earmark welfare state, CAGW names Rep. Don Young its April 2007 Porker of the Month.

Joyce's City Parks Resolution

A resolution sponsored by state Rep. Kevin Joyce (D-Chicago) urging Congress to support funding for the rehabilitation of parks and recreation areas in Chicago unanimously passed the House State Government Administration Committee last week.

"Clean, safe parks are something that every community deserves," Joyce said. "Parents and children should be able to play catch or fly a kite in a maintained public park. Federal funding will go a long way towards encouraging recreation programs and park upkeep in urban communities."

Joyce's resolution appeals to the U.S. Congress to support funding for the Urban Park and Recreation Recovery Program (UPARR). UPARR has distributed over $270 million - nearly $16 million to Illinois - in grants since being established in 1978. However, funding for UPARR grants was eliminated in 2004.

As the Illinois General Assembly continues to work on the state budget, Joyce's resolution aims to find an alternative source of funding for park improvements in Chicago. In the past, UPARR has offered grants to fund renovations of public recreation facilities, support recreation programs and assist local governments in improving existing programs.

"Budget talks provide a constant reminder of how many programs the state is responsible for," Joyce said. "This resolution works towards improving and developing our neighborhoods without creating another state program. I will continue to pursue fiscally responsible ways to improve our communities."

"Years ago the federal government made a commitment to rehabilitating parks in urban areas by creating the UPARR program, benefiting cities like Chicago," Chicago Park District Superintendent Tim Mitchell said. "It's impossible to imagine our city without the hundreds of parks and facilities that our residents enjoy every day. Without the proper care, our parks deteriorate. The federal government must renew its commitment to helping provide the funding needed to reserve our world-class recreation areas."

House Resolution 395 passed the House State Government Administration Committee 7-0 and now goes to the full House for consideration.

Illinois State Treasurer Alexi Giannoulias has drafted a resolution urging members of Illinois' congressional delegation to support the federal Savings For Working Families Act, which encourages the working poor to save money. The Savings For Working Families Act would establish Individual Development Accounts (IDA) for nearly one million families according to Giannoulias representatives.

IDA's are modeled after 401(K)s and other defined contribution plans and provide matching funds for each dollar saved. In addition, the act would require participants to take financial education courses.

"The Savings for Working Families Act would help lower wage workers and their families achieve financial independence," said Giannoulias, noting that the United States has a negative savings rate for the first time since the Great Depression.

"IDA's provide working Americans with strong incentives to build assets, and receive financial education and access to basic banking services that they normally would not have," he added. "IDA's help families save their way out of poverty and move towards long-term prosperity."

Under the program, which has bipartisan support and the endorsement of President Bush, the federal government would provide tax incentives to banks and community organizations to offer savings accounts to low income families. Participating families would receive a dollar-for-dollar match on the money they put away for education, buying a home or starting a small business.

Giannoulias urged state lawmakers to support a resolution he drafted that call the Illinois congressional delegation to approve the act. State Rep. Marlow Colvin (D-Chicago) is sponsoring the resolution in the Illinois General Assembly.

Illinois Is Charter Member Of Climate Registry

Governor Rod R. Blagojevich recently announced that Illinois joined 30 states as charter members of The Climate Registry, marking the largest multi-state effort to address climate change. The newly formed organization, which Illinois helped develop, creates national standards that businesses and governments will help measure and track, and other organizations can use to document their current level of greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions and track progress over time. Currently in the U.S., there is no common set of standards for measuring and reporting GHG emissions.

The Climate Registry is a broad-based effort. The states involved represent the length and breadth of the United States, Republicans and Democrats, east and west, north and south, coastal and interior. They all share a common concern about climate change and a desire to take action.

The federal government generally does not require companies to report GHGs, and Illinois and most other states do not either. Companies and other organizations located throughout the U.S. can voluntarily report GHG emissions to The Climate Registry beginning in January 2008. States that do require GHG reporting are expected to utilize The Climate Registry as well.

Many companies – including Midwestern companies operating in Illinois, support this effort and see it as an opportunity to demonstrate environmental leadership and to document emissions reductions that may count towards future requirements to reduce GHGs. Common reporting standards allow businesses to follow the same rules in all states. This reduces the cost of reporting and better manages risk.

Moreover, The Climate Registry is building off of existing internationally-recognized measurement standards and will allow global companies to consistently measure GHG emissions from facilities located anywhere in the world.

The registry, which will begin accepting new members in January, creates national guidelines that businesses, governments and other organizations can use as they document their current level of GHG emissions and track their progress as they shrink their carbon footprint by conserving energy, using renewable energy or investing in energy saving technologies.

Currently, GHG emissions are not required to be reported. The lack of leadership at the federal level – combined with the scientific consensus that global warming is occurring – has compelled more than half of the states throughout the U.S. to cooperatively create The Climate Registry.

Illinois joins Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Hawaii, Kansas, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Utah, Vermont, Washington, Wisconsin, Wyoming and the Campo Kumeyaay Nation as charter members of The Climate Registry. Two Canadian provinces, British Columbia and Manitoba, have also committed to participate.

Scientists have reached a consensus that increasing emissions of carbon dioxide from the combustion of fossil fuels, methane from landfills and other sources of GHGs are trapping heat and warming the earth's atmosphere. These gases remain in the atmosphere for decades or even centuries. Earlier this month, the United Nations Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change reported that heat trapped by GHGs are raising the temperature of the air and oceans, causing snow and ice to melt and sea levels to rise. More than 1,200 experts from 113 countries wrote and reviewed the report.

According to scientists, global warming could cause a variety of serious problems in Illinois, including more frequent droughts, flooding, and extreme heat. Such changes could endanger public health, decrease agricultural production, overwhelm sewage infrastructure, and cause property damage. Increased temperatures could also lead to dangerous increases in the level of air pollution and to the introduction of non-native invasive species that could damage Illinois' ecosystems.

By working together, Registry members are laying the foundation for climate actions that will benefit generations to come.

Educational Support

Congressman Dan Lipinski, Vice Chairman of the House Science and Technology Committee, addressed the 2007 recipients of the Presidential Award for Excellence in Mathematics and Science Teaching. Approximately 100 outstanding math and science teachers from around the country received this prestigious award for their leadership in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) education.

"There is nothing more important to our future than having the best math and science teachers available to inspire and guide our next generation of leaders in science and industry," said Lipinski. "As a former college professor and one of only a handful of members of Congress with an engineering degree. I have a unique perspective on this issue. I have often talked to my wife, Judy, who has a degree in math, about the teachers who inspired us. I will always remember how my high school calculus teacher, Father Thul, inspired me in math, and how my high school physics teacher, Father Fergu, inspired me to pursue a degree in engineering. It is vital that we provide ample support to our science and math teachers to continue inspiring more students."

"In my position as Vice Chairman, I have worked to advance critical legislation aimed at improving STEM education," stated Lipinski. "I will continue to work in Congress to improve funding for STEM research and education, with a special emphasis on funding for the National Science Foundation (NSF), which serves a needed role preparing teachers and students."

With the Congressman's support, the U.S. House Committee on Science and Technology this month approved and the full House passed a key piece of legislation, H.R. 362, the "10,000 Teachers, 10 Million Minds" Science and Math Scholarship Act. This legislation enacts the foremost recommendation of the National Academies' report Rising Above the Gathering Storm: increase the number of highly qualified math and science teachers in grades K through 12.

"Good teachers are integral to educating our youth, but they often do not have the tools or training opportunities needed to prepare students for the increasingly competitive economy," said Lipinski. "We must do more to ensure that more highly qualified teachers are in the classroom. Investing in the education of our youth in science, technology, engineering, and math is essential. I thank today's awardees and all science and math teachers for their dedication and hard work that is key to our children's future and our nation's continued prosperity."

"Defending The Caveman" Showing

"Defending the Caveman," the longest running solo play in Broadway history and now a worldwide blockbuster, will be performed at 8 p.m., Friday, June 15 and Saturday, June 16 at the Beverly Arts Center, 2407 W. 111th St. (111th and south Western Ave.), Chicago. Chicago actor Tyler Bohne will star as the Caveman.

Written by comedian Rob Becker, "Defending the Caveman" is a prehistoric look at the battle of the sexes. It played for two years on Broadway and is an international hit with productions in 30 countries including Canada, South Africa, Iceland, Sweden and Germany. With hilarious insights on contemporary feminism, masculine sensitivity and the erogenous zone, the play addresses the common themes in relationships that go straight to the funny bone.

Described as "An outrageously funny and surprisingly sweet exploration of the gender gap..." in the Chicago Sun Times, tickets to the Beverly Arts Center performances of "Defending the Caveman" are on sale now, in time for Father's Day giving.

An actor since he played Oliver Twist at age nine in his hometown, Milwaukee, Tyler Bohne has performed in everything from "Jesus Christ Superstar" to "The Crucible," and has found a real crowd pleaser in "Defending the Caveman."

Comedy is Bohne's favorite vehicle. After winning a national award for his work on the sketch comedy television show "Joy Farm," Bohne moved to Chicago in 1997 and began performing improv comedy at such noted venues as the Apollo Theatre, Mercury Theatre, National Pastime Theatre, The Second City, and Noble Fool, to name a few.

With partner and fellow actor Patrick Zielinski, Bohne formed the touring company "HeadCheese Fat Boss Productions," creating and performing original children's shows throughout the Midwest.

For tickets to see "Defending the Caveman" at the Beverly Arts Center, call (773) 445-3838 or buy online at www.beverlyartscenter.org. Tickets are $35. The show is produced by Theater Mogul, a global theatrical production company with shows in more than 30 countries and in 16 different languages. WISCONSIN FISHING OPENER, AS MUCH ABOUT TRADITION AS FISHING: May 5th was the official season opener for all species with the exception of bass (catch and release only, until June 15th to allow them to spawn) and muskies (May 24th). A group of us gathered the evening before the opener to plan our assault on our favorite species the next morning. Our planning was interrupted by a black bear looking in the window. Don Terry volunteered to step outside and get me a photo for this column, which he did.

After the bear incident settled down, several of us made plans to stream fish for brook, rainbow and brown trout. The Cable, Wisconsin area and Bayfield County have many fine trout streams including the White; Brule; Namekagon and Big Brook, just to mention a few.

Now comes the tradition part of the opener. About noon, the gathering of friends takes place at the home of Ed and Donna Lind. Those folks who were lucky enough to harvest some trout, clean them and turn them over to Donna to be pan-fried, as only Donna can do. Others bring goodies such as walleye, crappie, northern pike filets and smoked suckers. One gentleman just returned from a turkey hunt, and donated his smoked tom turkey that Lind proceeded to carve up as we took samples almost as fast as he could slice it. In addition to contributing a limit of 'brookies,' Walt Marek brought a cake he baked the night before. Of course, everyone brought a cooler with liquid refreshments.

Donna, with very little help (stay out of my kitchen) put everything together and set a buffet that was fit for a king. Like the saying goes, "It just doesn't get any better." During the course of the feast the usual stories were told of bygone openers, "the big one that got away" and "let's continue the tradition and do it again next year." I had enough to eat and drink, found an easy chair and settled in for an afternoon nap.

The next day, my friend Metro and I fished for walleyes under very adverse conditions. Winds were gusting at 30 miles per hour, that is no problem if your drift fishing. But we jig and minnow fish over structure that requires precision boat positioning. After doing battle with the waves and wind for five hours, we called it a day, with plans to resume the next day, hopefully under better conditions.

An answer to our dilemma occurred at dinner that night. Walter and Barbara Marek stopped in and we invited Walt to join us the next day in our quest for walleyes. Of course, we would fish out of Walt's 'roomy' Smoker Craft boat with all its bells and whistles, including electric anchors.

The next day was ideal for walleye fishing, a light chop, very little wind and mild temperatures and, more important, precision boat control. With Metro jig and minnow fishing at one end of the boat and Walt at the other end, I kept out of their way by drop-shooting minnows off the side of the boat. We caught enough slot-size fish for a good meal that night, our last night before heading for home.

We spotted this "rare" Albino Deer as we left for home.

We were staying at Norway Lodge on beautiful Lake Owen and would like to have stayed a few more days, but wife Mary had some commitments that involved, what else - grandchildren. Departing early in the morning in hopes of beating the heavy afternoon traffic back home, we spotted some whitetail deer in a field. Among the herd was a 'pure-white' Albino Deer, a rarity indeed. After a short-stalk, I was able to get a photo of the deer. Only in the North Woods could you start a fishing trip off with a 'Black Bear' and end it with a white 'Albino Deer.'

Sen. Ed Maloney Appointed IHSA Liaison

Sen. Ed Maloney (D-Chicago) has been appointed by the governor to serve as the General Assembly liaison to the Illinois High School Association (IHSA). This position ensures effective communication between the IHSA and the Illinois General Assembly in order to aid in adequately and successfully resolving issues that affect Illinois high school athletics.

"As a former high school teacher, basketball and cross country coach, and 15-year veteran official for IHSA basketball games, I am well acquainted with the extra-curricular activities associated with the IHSA, and look forward to bringing those many years of experience to the table," said Maloney.

Sen. Maloney's role will largely involve giving input from his various experiences as a teacher, coach, official and legislator to the IHSA Board of Directors during meetings, and creating a channel between the legislature and the IHSA in which issues can be addressed and resolved.

Marty Hickman, Executive Director of the IHSA, said he is looking forward to working with Sen. Maloney over the next year. "I believe he will be a great asset to the IHSA not only because of his experience with schools, years of officiating, but also because of his experience as a parent of participants in IHSA athletics. I also am looking forward to working with him because I believe he will strengthen and enhance the relationship between the IHSA and the legislature."

Hickman also added that with 760 member schools in the IHSA it is essential for the legislature to know what issues are occurring in high school athletics as well as for the IHSA to know what education issues the legislature is dealing with in order to effectively and promptly address them.

Reoccurring issues Sen. Maloney is likely to encounter while working with the IHSA involve topics such as school classification, fairness in competition, and individual eligibility. However, there are the occasional issues that arise which also need addressing. In recent years, those issues have involved home school eligibility and steroid education.

The IHSA Board of Directors typically meets once a month to discuss various issues related to high school athletics.

The RiverHawks tied the game with a run in the top of the fifth. Rockford had the bases loaded with no outs, but ThunderBolts reliever Billy Phillips got a double play ball and a groundout. The run scored on the double play groundout.

Nick Trzesniak put the ThunderBolts up for good with an RBI single in the bottom of the fifth. Mike Wadowski tripled home a run in the sixth and Hawke added another RBI double in the seventh. Wes Long capped off the Windy City scoring with a solo home run in the tenth.

SSC Accepts Special Needs Applicants

THURSDAY, MAY 24, 2007 - PAGE 9

A program to help students with autism and other special needs attend college is opening in suburban Chicago and is accepting applications for the 2007-2008 academic year.

College Living Experience (CLE) provides intensive assistance with academic, independent living and social skills to college students with special needs such as Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD), Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), Asperger's Syndrome, non-verbal learning disorders and other learning disabilities as they attend college. CLE already operates programs in Austin, Texas, Denver and Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., and is opening programs in Monterey, Calif., and suburban Washington, D.C., this summer. Students from around the country can enroll at the location of their choice.

Students participating in the Chicago program may attend classes at Oakton Community College in suburban Skokie as well as other colleges and universities in the area. Students will live in apartments near the CLE offices and the student center at, the locations of which will be announced later. CLE professional staff members work closely with students to provide structured tutoring sessions, independent living skills training and social outings. In addition, CLE will assist students who are accepted at any nearby college, university, technical or vocational school.

CLE provides intensive support in three primary areas to complement a student's higher-education goals: Academics: Students attend three 50-minute tutoring sessions conducted by professional tutors. They also attend a weekly course review and study-hall sessions three or four times a week. Independent living: CLE staff work individually with students to introduce apartment living and provide support for the development of life skills. Students receive assistance with establishing and maintaining a checking account, paying monthly bills, shopping, preparing meals, cleaning and managing other daily-living necessities. Social skills: All students enrolled in CLE are paired with a mentor who takes on the role of a big brother or big sister. Students also have the chance to participate in social-skills groups that gather around specific activities, such as bowling or movies. CLE also offers a variety of events each week, such as attending art openings, a local festival or a fishing outing.

"The greatest fear of parents of exceptional children is, 'What will happen to my child when I'm gone?'" Mark Claypool, president and CEO of ESA, said. "Many parents never consider college as an option and they worry their children will not be prepared for independent adulthood. With the support and services of CLE, exceptional students can attend college, earn degrees and achieve the academic and social skills they need to live independently."

The local CLE program will be directed by Judith Gethner, who has a decade of experience as a special needs educational consultant and more than 20 years of business experience. She holds a master's degree in special education from Northeastern Illinois University. Gethner has served on the local boards of Children and Adults with Attention Deficit Disorder (CHADD), the Learning Disabilities Association (LDA) and the Northern Suburban Special Education District Board (NSSD). She is a member of National Council of Jewish Women, and her leadership positions within the synagogue include Sustaining Gift Chairperson, member of the Executive Board of Sisterhood and member of the Marketing Committee. Gethner also does community-based organizing for the United Power for Action and Justice, an advocacy organization that is currently working to organize support for universal healthcare legislation in the state of Illinois. She is the mother of a 20-year-old son with special needs.

CLE is a division of Educational Services of America, the nation's leading national provider of special, alternative and post-secondary educational programs.

"By offering daily tutoring, independent living assistance, social events and access to a staff psychologist, we make sure all the needs of our students are met," Steven Roth, Ed.D., executive director of CLE, said. "We focus on students' needs so they can focus on their dreams."

For more information on CLE, visit www.cleinc.net or contact Patricia Giner, national director of admissions, at 800-486-5058.

Wujcik Wins 300th Game

Brian Wujcik, who literally and figuratively has built his program from the ground, recently won his 300th game as varsity baseball coach at Richards High School.

Wujcik, a Richards graduate, set out in 1992 to build a first-rate baseball facility as well as a winning program at his alma mater. With the help of players, their parents, and coaches, Wujcik started constructing a baseball facility that today rivals any in the Chicago area.

The donation of a new scoreboard by Founders Bank provided the capstone earlier this semester. Over the years, Wujcik and many others have funded and constructed new dugouts, a new press box, new fencing, and a completely reconditioned field.

"It's no coincidence that the consistent record at Richards mirrors the consistency of the coaching staff. We're successful at Richards because the staff has been together so long. Joe Mendez and I have been together for 13 years now, Jeff Kortz has been with us for 10 years (the past 6 at the varsity level) and Kevin Quinn is in his 7th season as pitching coach. I'm blessed to work with three knowledgeable guys who not only share my vision and philosophies, but who are a lot of fun to be around. 300 wins is as much their accomplishment as it is mine," said Wujcik.

Wujcik's all-time record stands at 307-212-4. This season, the Bulldogs have posted records of 24-7-2 overall and 14-2 in conference.

Richards High School Athletic Director Ken Styler (with microphone) and District 218 Superintendent Dr. Kevin Burns present Richards High School baseball coach Brian Wujcik with a baseball signed by the 2007 team commemorating his 300th win as varsity coach.

Thoughts On Health & Nutrition

by
Lucinda K. Lysen, RD, RN, BSN

DAILY SHAPE UP FOR HEALTH

Exercise at the gym is not the only way to burn up calories and lose weight! If you have read one of any number of news reports lately concerning diet and exercise, you have already learned the benefits of some simple moves to get your body in shape. So get off the couch and get your body moving for summer!

1. Straighten up the house! Vacuuming, or even walking your dog, can significantly lower your blood pressure; a study at Indiana University has demonstrated this. Four hours of accumulated activity over the course of the day will do it; running up and down the stairs and mowing the lawn are most beneficial.
2. Squeeze aerobics into your day at the office! Engaging in physical activity during your lunch hour can improve your mood and productivity. "On days that people exercised, they were better able to manage time demands, and were more tolerant of mistakes, regardless of who made them," said researcher Jim McKenna at Leeds Metropolitan University in Britain.
3. Stay active in general--this might lower the risk of Alzheimer's disease. Exercise protects against age-related loss of brain tissue and may affect the expression of genes, which influence the disease, according to a mice study at the University of California. Further studies are needed to determine how much brain tissue and what type, but it is clear that cognition is enhanced with exercise--at any age.
4. Exercise can improve oral health. At Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, experts have found that people who work out significantly reduce their chances of gum disease. It is now becoming widely believed among health practitioners that physical activity reduces stress and inflammation. "Any type of moderate or vigorous exercise such as walking a mile without stopping, bike riding, dancing or yard work--three to five times a week--will work," according to researcher Nabil F. Bissada at the university. He also stated that you need to maintain a good diet and a normal weight to make this possible.
5. Regular exercise fights depression. A half-hour of exercise three to five times weekly can reduce moderate depression by 50%. "The effect of using exercise alone to treat the condition is comparable to the effect of antidepressants," said researcher Dr. Madhukar Trivedi from the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center.

Springtime is the opportunity to get moving! Now is the time!

Knee Replacement

Every year, approximately 400,000 Americans who suffer from osteoarthritis undergo knee replacement surgery. When all other options for treating severe osteoarthritis of the knee have been exhausted, artificial knee joints offer a solution with a high rate of success. But how should you prepare for this major operation, and what can you do afterwards, to protect the new joint and keep it intact for years to come?

The American Arthritis Society has compiled some useful and practical tips for self-care, which are available on the Society's web site. Developed with the help of some of the world's leading knee surgeons, each tip is easy to follow and can be helpful in preparing for your operation.

These and many more suggestions regarding osteoarthritis can be viewed online at www.americanarthritis.org.

Survey Of Cancer Attitudes And Beliefs

If you feel that you are fated for cancer, your belief could turn into a self-fulfilling prophecy. According to a national survey of more than 6,000 U.S. adults published in the May issue of Cancer Epidemiology, Biomarkers & Prevention; a substantial number of American adults hold fatalistic beliefs about cancer and are correspondingly less likely to take basic steps to lower their cancer risk, such as exercising, quitting smoking and eating a healthy diet rich in fruits and vegetables.

The study, which analyzes data from the National Cancer Institute's Health Information National Trends Survey, is the first national survey in almost 20 years to assess Americans' knowledge about and attitudes toward cancer prevention. The findings have implications for cancer education efforts.

"Many Americans seem to feel afraid and helpless in regards to cancer, which may be exacerbated by conflicting news reports and a general lack of education on the causes and prevention of cancer," said Jeff Niederdeppe, Ph.D., professor at the University of Wisconsin, Madison. "They say 'well, there is nothing much you can do about it' and, as our survey shows, they indeed do nothing about it."

The survey asked respondents if they agreed with three statements about cancer. About 47 percent of those surveyed agreed with the statement that "It seems like almost everything causes cancer," while 27 percent agreed that "There's not much people can do to lower their chances of getting cancer." Moreover, 71.5 percent of American adults agreed that "There are so many recommendations about preventing cancer, it's hard to know which ones to follow."

People who maintained at least one of these three beliefs were less likely than others to exercise weekly and eat five daily servings of fruits and vegetables. People who believed that "it's hard to know" what to do were more likely to smoke. All three beliefs, the researchers say, were associated with lower levels of education.

Despite the ready availability of cancer information, the researchers conclude, there has been little progress in changing the belief that "everything causes cancer" in the last 20 years. According to the researchers, it is unclear whether and to what degree media coverage of cancer influences beliefs. While this study did not specifically address the news media's role in enforcing cancer fatalism, Niederdeppe believes that the constantly changing messages people get from the news are often confusing.

"Cancer is a difficult thing to talk about in the space of a single news story," Niederdeppe said. "Science values repetition, while the media values novelty. Those two concepts naturally butt heads, which can confuse people."

If conflicting news accounts of cancer prevention science are the cause of confusion, Niederdeppe says, educators ought to focus on developing simple, straightforward messages in teaching the general public about what they can do to prevent disease.

The mission of the American Association for Cancer Research is to prevent and cure cancer. Founded in 1907, AACR is the world's oldest and largest professional organization dedicated to advancing cancer research. The membership includes nearly 26,000 basic, translational, and clinical researchers; health care professionals; and cancer survivors and advocates in the United States and more than 70 other countries. AACR marshals the full spectrum of expertise from the cancer community to accelerate progress in the prevention, diagnosis and treatment of cancer through high-quality scientific and educational programs. It funds innovative, meritorious research grants. The AACR Annual Meeting attracts more than 17,000 participants who share the latest discoveries and developments in the field. Special Conferences throughout the year present novel data across a wide variety of topics in cancer research, treatment, and patient care. AACR publishes five major peer-reviewed journals: Cancer Research; Clinical Cancer Research; Molecular Cancer Therapeutics; Molecular Cancer Research; and Cancer Epidemiology, Biomarkers & Prevention. Its most recent publication, CR, is a magazine for cancer survivors, patient advocates, their families, physicians, and scientists. It provides a forum for sharing essential, evidence-based information and perspectives on progress in cancer research, survivorship, and advocacy.

Asthma Emergencies

Sixty-four percent of coaches and physical education teachers in the Chicago area have not been trained to handle asthma emergencies putting an estimated 412,000 Cook County children with asthma or asthma symptoms at risk, according to a survey from the Chicago Asthma Consortium.

The American Lung Assn. of Metropolitan Chicago and a coalition of physicians, asthma specialists, and school and park district officials released the 2007 Asthma Action Plan for Chicago calling for more asthma education and asthma emergency training for all gym teachers, volunteer and part-time coaches.

The 206,000 Cook County children diagnosed with asthma is thought to be half of the estimated 412,000 who have asthma symptoms. All Illinois students in kindergarten through tenth grade are required to take physical education classes. Many take to area baseball, football and soccer fields in programs supervised by an estimated 2100 full, part-time or volunteer coaches.

Coaches can obtain free asthma education on-line through Winning With Asthma, a 30-minute web-based program at www.winningwithasthma.org or in person by signing up for asthma training classes at the American Lung Assn. of Metropolitan Chicago, 1440 W. Washington. Call (312) 243-2000 or click on www.lungchicago.org.

ISMS Voices Concern For Illinois Covered Plan

While affirming wholehearted support for universal patient access to medical insurance coverage, the Illinois State Medical Society recently revealed it cannot support the Administration's Illinois Covered initiative without significant change to key provisions. The ISMS announcement, which came after its annual House of Delegates policy session held in late April, is based on the organization's newly-adopted ISMS Principles for Health System Reform.

"We commend Gov. Blagojevich for jump-starting this important debate," said ISMS President Rodney C. Osborn, M.D. "Illinois doctors want a plan that can truly improve health care access for all Illinois residents. We stand ready to work with him to strengthen Illinois Covered toward meeting that goal."

Core concerns voiced by ISMS include the following: Patients should be able to choose from several private and public health insurance options to find one that meets their diverse health care needs and budgets. A single, one-size-fits-all insurance coverage plan, built on a state-designed framework, lacks flexibility and discourages innovation. "We must embrace multiple health insurance options that empower patients to take charge of their health care and insurance costs, such as the ideas contained in the recently-announced recommendations of the Adequate Health Care Task Force," said Dr. Osborn.

While acknowledging the program will require a substantial new funding source to sustain it, ISMS staunchly opposes inclusion of physician services in an Illinois gross receipts tax. Unlike most other businesses, doctors are prevented by federal and state law and by health plan contracts from passing along the cost of these new taxes to consumers. Because both government and private insurers strictly regulate physician reimbursements, doctors alone would be forced to absorb the additional cost of this tax. "Some of our members have crunched the numbers and let us know this tax could put them out of business," said Dr. Osborn. "We also remain concerned about the hidden economic implications of a GRT on all the citizens of Illinois. The GRT will have a predictably negative impact of the growth of business in Illinois, causing a decline in the availability of employer-based health insurance. This will further erode access to health care in the state."

Illinois Covered makes it mandatory that physicians accept the plan as a condition for participating in private sector health insurance plan contracts. This automatic state-controlled tie-in is wholly unacceptable. "Just like patients, doctors should be able to choose participation in Illinois Covered, based on it being a good fit for their patient population and medical practice model," said Dr.

Osborn.

Fair reimbursement is crucial to assure patient access to care. Illinois Covered fee schedules should mirror the reimbursement rates for the private-sector networks it utilizes. In addition, full, fair and timely Medicaid reimbursement must become the norm, rather than the exception, for the state's payment policies to physicians. "Doctors are small employers who must balance their checkbooks and pay their bills on time to keep the doors open for patient care," noted Dr. Osborn. "The state has an obligation to pay fairly and on time for the patient care it has promised to fund, not only for the current Medicaid program, but also for any new programs."

"ISMS believes all these concerns can be successfully resolved," explained Dr. Osborn. "Doing so right away will make the plan stronger, more viable over the long run and ensure patients have real access to care. The practical core of Illinois Covered is getting doctors and patients together to improve health outcomes, so it's vitally important that the details actually support this."

E. Coli Warning

Dr. Eric E. Whitaker, state public health director, issued an alert expanding the recent warning about E.coli O157:H7, a specific strain of E.coli, which can be associated with the consumption of some ground beef products. After the recent recall from a Minnesota company, the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture's Food Safety and Inspection Service has announced that a Michigan company has recalled 129,000 pounds of beef products due to possible contamination.

The beef products were produced between March 1st and April 30th, 2007 and were shipped to foodservice distribution centers and Marketplace stores in Arkansas, Florida, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Missouri, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Illinois. Because these products later became ground beef sold under many different retail brand names, consumers should check with their local retailer to determine whether they may have purchased any of the products subject to recall. The possible contamination of beef products in this recall was discovered by the Michigan Dept. of Community Health as part of an illness investigation.

"We still have no cases in Illinois of anyone becoming sick with the same type of E.coli O157:H7 after eating these recalled ground beef products," said Dr. Whitaker. "But with the expanded recall we advise consumers to be extra careful. People should only eat ground beef patties that have been cooked to a safe internal temperature of 160 degrees F. Anyone who thinks they may have experienced symptoms of illness after eating ground beef are urged to contact their health care provider."

E.coli O157:H7 is a virulent strain of E.coli. It causes diarrhea, often with bloody stools. Although most healthy adults can recover completely within a week, some people can develop a form of kidney failure called Hemolytic Uremic Syndrome (HUS). HUS is most likely to occur in young children and the elderly. The condition can lead to serious kidney damage and even death.

Products subject to recall include boxes of mechanically tenderized steaks and ground beef of varying weights. Labels on the boxes bear the establishment number "Est. 1947A" inside the USDA mark of inspection and a date code (on the top right corner of the label) between "060" and "120." Only products with those date codes are subject to recall. Each box also bears a net weight declaration and the message "Manufactured for Gordon Food Service" or "Distributed by Gordon Food Service." For a detailed list of the recalled beef products, log on to the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture's Food Safety and Inspection Service web site at www.fsis.usda.gov.

Consumers with recalled beef products should return the items to the point of purchase.

Volunteers Participate In Park Lawn Tag Days

During the month of April, Park Lawn volunteers spread throughout the South Metropolitan area to collect donations from complete strangers that will forever remain anonymous and in the process gained interesting observations.

Some people have tagged for 10 years or more and others are brand new to the experience, but no matter how long they have tagged, they all notice certain human characteristics.

Whether it is one dollar or twenty dollars, people will freely give a monetary donation without worrying about their own circumstances. At the end of the day that one dollar adds up to thousands of dollars for an organization.

One local volunteer has collected donations at the same intersection for the past 10 years and truly enjoys every minute because he has noticed several observations.

"I received about 14 'God Bless You' in one day," he said after tagging on a cold day. "You meet so many types of people; it almost seems like a behavior analysis. I have noticed that women are the best givers at my intersection and people with expensive cars provide the smallest amount possible."

All of the volunteers noticed that people are hesitant to donate when it is cold outside because they do not want to roll their windows down. When the weather is sunny and breezy, they are in a better mood and willing to donate five, ten, twenty or more to the non profit organization.

The ages of the tag volunteers range from 12 to 80 years old. They all agree that they meet a lot of interesting people when they are donning the Park Lawn gear.

Volunteers are manned with Park Lawn tags for donors to display their car rear view mirror, a collection bucket, a Park Lawn safety vest and lots of sour licorice to hand out. The licorice is generously provided by the American Licorice Company.

When the day is done and the volunteers drop off the money collected and left over supplies, they have numerous stories to share about all of their observations. They use these stories to recruit other a group of volunteers for future tagging events.

Mike Maty, a volunteer with ten years of experience, said that he tries to relate to people's interest when recruiting more volunteers for his tag team.

"I told my brother, who loves to fish, that tagging is like fishing," Maty said. "When things are slow you feel cold, tired and want to go home. But when you look through the bucket and see a large bill, it's like catching a big one. You want to stay and get some more."

Park Lawn employees also joined in on the fun. Debbie Sample, manager for Park Lawn's Adult Development Training program, said that she was very proud of her departments 100% participation.

"It was a lot of fun because we were competing to receive the most money among each other and it was a good bonding experience as well," Sample said.

Erica Goolsby, another employee of Park Lawn, tagged for the first time this year and she said that it was a fun experience and "it felt good to volunteer my time for a worthy cause."

While different behaviors of donors are noticed by the volunteers, Park Lawn notices that the volunteers themselves demonstrate the best characteristics.

It did not matter if the weather was in the low 30's, like the beginning of April or if a beaming hot sun was out in late April, they stayed out all day to help raise money for individuals with developmental disabilities.

"Our volunteers are amazing and truly inspire me," said Kristen Wells, one of the coordinators of Park Lawn's Tag Days. "They came in from the cold weather wearing layers of clothes and they still have a smile on their face."

All proceeds from Tag Days benefit Park Lawn, a nonprofit agency located in Chicago's southwest suburbs that provides vocational services, supported employment, adult developmental training, and residential services to individuals with developmental disabilities. Mae Parnell Was Honored By Operation Able

An Oak Lawn resident, 65-year-old Mac Parnell, was honored by Operation Able at its 26th annual awards luncheon, Tuesday, May 15th at the Palmer House Hilton Hotel. Parnell, a health education case manager working with HIV/AIDS clients, had 20 years of experience in substance abuse counseling before coming to Haymarket Center.

As a case manager in the HIV/AIDS program, she builds relationships with substance-abuse clients who have HIV/AIDS, continuing to work with them when they leave Haymarket Center and return to their homes and communities. Holding periodic "booster sessions" for these discharged clients, Parnell helps them to reinforce and maintain their sobriety, and find and use services available to them in their communities.

Operation ABLE cited Parnell's work as influential when the AIDS Foundation of Chicago made a substantial special grant to Haymarket Center to provide direct service to this population segment: people living with HIV or AIDS, newly sober and in transition back to living in their communities.

She also is a volunteer mentor at (Stroger) Cook County Hospital, and works with clients on such issues as relationships, health and life skills. She also serves her church as a member of its advisory board on substance abuse.

The Operation Able program recognizes those workers who might be preparing for retirement but who can—and do—continue to contribute to their communities. These workers are, as Operation Able puts it, "...example[s] of talent, dependability and dedication which mature workers bring to the job."

Forensics Team "Speaks Up"

The Moraine Valley Forensics team knows when to "speak up"—and they did just that at the 2007 Phi Rho Pi National Forensics Tournament, taking third place at the tournament April 9-14 in Houston, Texas. The week-long event, hosted by Phi Rho Pi, the national honor society for community college speech, saw more than 500 individuals compete from more than 70 schools in the nation.

Individually, eight students represented Moraine Valley at the national tournament with six students earning medals. Students competing in the event included Eivla Angulano (Blue Island), who earned a bronze in Poetry and a bronze for Informative Speaking; Jalrus Bellamy (Palos Heights); Patrick Cooper (Oak Lawn), who earned a gold in Prose Interpretation, silver in Duo-Interpretation (with Amanda Goodyear), and a silver in Dramatic Interpretation; Amanda Goodyear (Hometown), who earned a gold in Prose Interpretation and a silver in Duo-Interpretation (with Cooper); Jacqueline Lill (Alsip); who earned a bronze in Persuasive Speaking and a bronze in Prose Interpretation; Andy Perez (Palos Heights); Jaclyn Quintana (Alsip); who earned a silver in Speech to Entertain; and Billy Waish (Burbank), who earned a bronze in Oral Interpretation.

This season, the team went undefeated in Illinois competitions, including earning first place at the Illinois State tournament.

"I'm proud of our team's achievements this year," said Krista Appelquist, assistant professor of Communications and one of the team's coaches. "Watching how these students can impact their audiences has been impressive all year, and their hard work and dedication has once again resulted in national success."

John Nash, instructor of Communications and team coach, also agreed. "This year's team really represented Moraine Valley with poise and confidence. I could not have asked for a better group of students."

Quintana, the team's captain, remarked, "We came home from the national tournament drained, but also feeling more accomplished than ever because the members of this team gave their all to this tournament and to each other. You can't ask for more than that."

"The best part of our season wasn't our win-loss record, but the fact that we were a team," Angulano added.

Moraine Valley's forensics (competitive speech) team has quickly become a national force in its seven-year existence. Last year, the team won first place and was awarded a gold medal at the national tournament in Kansas City, and took third in nationals in Philadelphia in 2005. Many of the students have been offered scholarships by forensics programs at Bradley University, Northern Illinois University, and Illinois State University.

Oak Lawn Library Programs

Puzzling over what to do this summer? If you're an Oak Lawn resident or you attend an Oak Lawn school, you can enroll in the Oak Lawn Public Library's annual summer reading program for eight weeks of activities and a treasure trove of prizes. Registration begins Monday, June 5 and the program ends Tuesday, July 31.

The Youth Services Department sponsors two separate programs for children in preschool through fifth grade and students entering sixth through eighth grade. Young reading club members will keep track of how much time they spend reading. The goal is 18 hours. Prizes are awarded each time a participant reaches three hours, up to a limit of six prizes. Bring your child's library card to register at the Youth Services Desk.

Children in preschool through fifth grade, who are Oak Lawn residents or students of Oak Lawn schools, can enroll in "Get a Clue @ Your Library." Activities open to reading club members include a "Guinness Challenge" competition, treasure hunt, weekly "Mysteries at Lunchtime," a variety of theme parties, a magic show, movie viewings, crafts projects and more.

Students entering sixth through eighth grade, who are Oak Lawn residents or students of Oak Lawn schools are invited to join "007: License to Read." Registered members may participate in several interactive activities, including game nights, a window painting project, a junior volunteer group, and Book Buddies, a program offering young adults the opportunity to read one-on-one to younger children while earning service hours.

Patrons high school age and up may register for "Summer Sleuths" at the Readers Advisory Desk. To be eligible to win prizes, members must read five books and submit a brief book review form for each one. This year, participants are invited to enroll in a six-week basic sign language class. There is a limit of 30. Special activities are also planned for first and second year high school students in conjunction with the Youth Services Department.

Be advised that many activities have age restrictions and several have limited enrollment, so early registration is recommended.

For more information, call (708) 422-4990, or visit the library's web site at www.oaklawnlibrary.org. The Oak Lawn Public Library is located at 5300 W. 95th St.

Scholarship Recipients

Six Saint Xavier University students were awarded Tyesa Bowens Memorial Scholarships based on excellent academic work and contributions to the Student Success Program and SXU communities.

The scholarships were awarded to the following students: Kimberly Henderson, a senior majoring in communications from Chicago's West Englewood neighborhood; Robert Pemberton, a senior nursing major originally from San Francisco, Ca.; Krystal Bailey, a senior majoring in communications from Harvey; Dragana Miloradovic (pictured), a sophomore education major from Oak Lawn; Tierra Powell, a sophomore majoring in criminal justice from Chicago's Chatham neighborhood; and Larissa Campos, a sophomore nursing major from Chicago's Garfield Ridge neighborhood.

"These six students have displayed exceptional commitment to their education and have made significant contributions not only in the SSP and SXU communities, but in their local communities as well," said Josiah Fuller, director of the Student Success Program.

The awards were presented at the Student Success Program's annual Spring Awards Ceremony in the Butler Reception Room at Saint Xavier. The University established the scholarship in memory of Tyesa Bowens, a well-liked, successful freshman who was slain in her Matteson home in March 2006 during her second semester at Saint Xavier. She was majoring in biology and had graduated at the top of her class from Fenger Academy High School.

This spring, SSP honored 64 of its students for their academic work. Participants in the program were acknowledged for attaining grade point averages between 3.0 and 3.49 (38 students recognized) and between 3.5 and 3.9 (26 students recognized) out of a possible 4.0 grade point average. The program also honored 47 of its participants who either graduated last December or will graduate in May.

The Student Success Program is a federally funded TRIO program that assists first generation college students, students from lower income families, and students with disabilities. Historically, these groups of students have been at risk for not completing their college degrees.

Governor Blagojevich recently launched a new $15 million pilot mortgage program to help Illinois veterans and active duty personnel afford their own homes. On behalf of the Governor, Housing and Veterans officials announced the program, called the G-I Loan for Heroes, designed to help more than 100 qualified veterans and service men and women secure low-interest mortgages and closing cost assistance. The announcement makes Illinois the first state in the nation to provide significantly below-market interest, 30-year fixed rate mortgages to qualifying former and current service men and women who are working hard to provide for themselves and their families.

The new program offers a low-interest rate first mortgage for 80 percent of the purchase price and an interest-free second mortgage for 20 percent of the purchase price, up to $40,000. Homebuyers under the program will also receive a grant up to $2,500 to help with closing costs and free homeownership counseling, which is compulsory.

Applicants need to contribute $1,000 of their own money toward the down payment on the purchase of a single-family home, condominium or duplex. Income, purchase price limits, and credit qualifications also apply and vary from county to county. To qualify in Cook County, a Veteran or active duty service man or woman with a family of three or more must have a household income of no greater than $83,260 and the purchase price of the home can not exceed $325,890.

Veterans and men and women currently on federal active duty in the Armed Services and the Reserve Forces may qualify for assistance in buying a primary residence even if they owned a home in the past. Only active duty service personnel need to be a first-time homebuyer to qualify for the G-I Loan.

According to figures from the Illinois Department of Veterans' Affairs (IDVA), an average of 900 veterans visit the department's field offices every year looking for assistance to qualify for home loans. Presently the only option they had is to apply for the federal VA loan, which has a zero down payment policy, but offers market interest rates (currently 6.33 per cent). The VA loan is also only available to veterans.

The new G-I Loan for Heroes program is available to current active duty service personnel, federally activated National Guardsmen and Reservists, as well as veterans and offers interest rates as low as 4.75 percent in some cases.

Install Visitor Kiosks

The Northern Illinois Tourism Development Office (NITDO), along with regional partners, the Illinois Tollway and the Illinois Bureau of Tourism, recently unveiled new Visitor Information Kiosks installed at Illinois Tollway Oases throughout the Chicago suburbs and Northern Illinois. This unique partnership will enhance travelers' experiences at the highly visited oases by showcasing some of the great attractions the region has to offer.

"The current 14 Illinois Tourism Information Centers are great tools to capture visitors as they enter the state. Now these new kiosks at the Illinois Tollway Oases will serve additional visitors educating them about some of the great attractions the state has to offer, and helping them to make informed travel decisions," said Bonnie Heimbach, Executive Director of the NITDO.

As travelers cross through the Chicago suburbs and throughout Northern Illinois, visitors to the Illinois Tollway Oases will be greeted by the stand-alone information kiosk featuring brochures, visitor guides, and traveler information from regional destinations and tourist attractions. The kiosks were designed and funded by various regional tourism partners. In addition to the kiosk unveiled at O'Hare Oasis, kiosks have also been installed at the Des Plaines Oasis, Belvidere Oasis and the DeKalb Oasis. In June, a Visitor Information Kiosk will debut at the Hinsdale Oasis.

Stop Gambling Bill

In spite of people's cry for relief from exorbitant gasoline prices and energy bills, legislators have found time to vote on a gambling bill. HB 1124 will legalize video gambling in bars. That may sound harmless to some, but it is not.

Children have grown up playing video games. Adding the element of cash and prizes will make the activity even more attractive to young adults. Many will become addicted to gambling.

HB 1124 legalizes gambling on video games "simulating contests" in bars, restaurants, convenience stores, bowling alleys, and truck stops. HB 1124 defines a bona fide contest as being between two or more individuals. Hundreds of thousands of such "contests" could be played each year in every community statewide.

While HB 1124 states that card games are not included, this type of gambling will expand in increments. Gambling interests will come back each year until video poker is legalized in every community.

HB 1124 will make it impossible to police these establishments to determine if illegal gambling is going on. Gamblers will expect a "payout" on all video machines in bars, convenience stores, bowling alleys, restaurants, and truck stops. Organized crime and money laundering are real concerns.

Video machine gambling is very addictive. Research has shown that gamblers take more risks and gamble longer when they are drinking alcohol.

Call your Senator (217-782-2000) and the Governor (800-642-3112) and ask them to stop this expansion of gambling in every community.

Precautions To Avoid Home Remodeling And Repair Scams

The summer weather prompts many homeowners to consider hiring a contractor for their home repair or remodeling project. However, your home repair project could turn into a nightmare if you fall victim to a scam. After taking your money, con artists may never start or complete the job. Materials and workmanship may be grossly inferior to what was promised. Undisclosed charges for permits, cost overruns, and other fees may significantly increase the total cost of the repairs. The selection of a qualified and reliable home repair contractor can be a difficult task, and consumer complaints about contractors are among the common situations reviewed by both the Better Business Bureau of Chicago & Northern Illinois, Inc. and the Consumer Fraud Division of the Cook County State's Attorney's Office.

"Most home repair and remodeling companies are operated by honest people, but there are some unscrupulous people who prey on trusting consumers," said Richard A. Devine, Cook County State's Attorney. "There are warning signs that a homeowner can look for and steps that they can take to avoid becoming the victim of home repair fraud," said Steve J. Bernas, president & CEO of the Better Business Bureau of Chicago & Northern Illinois, Inc.

The Cook County State's Attorney's Office and the Better Business Bureau recommend the following precautions to avoid disappointment in your dealings with home repair and remodeling contractors:

GET RECOMMENDATIONS AND REFERENCES: Find a reliable contractor through recommendations from local utility companies, your insurance company, local government or building department, or through referrals from satisfied customers. Ask each contractor for references and a written estimate. Contact the references and ask them if they are satisfied with the home repairs provided by the contractor.

CHECK WITH THE BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU: Contact the Better Business Bureau on the web (www.chicago.bbb.org) or by telephone (312/832-0500) and obtain a reliability report about a contractor. A reliability report will disclose if anyone has filed a complaint against the contractor within the last three (3) years and, most importantly, if the contractor has resolved the complaint to the satisfaction of the customer. The BBB can also provide a listing of their members in a particular industry so consumer will know they are dealing with companies who meet the BBB's stringent standards.

RELAX: Be skeptical of any door-to-door salesperson who claims to have just completed a nearby job and offers you a great price because there are leftover materials. Don't feel pressured by a request for an immediate decision or an offer that is good "only if you act now." Compare the estimates of a number of contractors before selecting the most attractive estimate and do not select a contractor solely on the basis of the lowest price or estimate.

CHECK FOR MANDATORY INSURANCE COVERAGE: Under Illinois law, most contractors are required to carry minimum amounts of insurance for property damage, bodily injury, and improper home repair. Unless they maintain a net worth of $1,000,000, contractors must obtain and maintain public liability and property damage insurance in the amount of $100,000 per person and $300,000 per occurrence for bodily injury and $50,000 per occurrence for property damage. "Even if the contractor has provided you with proof of full insurance coverage, as an additional safeguard, confirm that your homeowner's policy covers accidents to persons working on your property," said James Baumhart.

GET IT IN WRITING: Don't rely on oral promises because such promises are difficult to prove without written evidence. Make sure that all of the important promises and representations made to you by the contractor are also incorporated in the contract or estimate. Request copies of any application for a credit check, application for financing, estimate, and sales contract.

GET THE PAMPHLET: By law a contractor must provide customers a copy of the "Home Repair: Know Your Consumer Rights" pamphlet prior to the execution of a home repair contract over $500.00. This is important because the pamphlet sets forth your consumer rights under such contracts and contains lots of helpful consumer information to ensure a smooth transaction.

REVIEW YOUR CONTRACT: Read a contract carefully before signing. Don't sign an incomplete contract or a contract with any blank spaces. In general, only contracts signed at your residence have a three (3) day "cancellation" period. Consider all other contracts to be final.

LIMIT UP FRONT PAYMENTS: Don't pay for the entire job prior to the start of work. Payment of a deposit or advance payment for building materials is customary and fair in the home repair and remodeling industry.

GET LIEN WAIVERS: Find out where the contractor will obtain his materials and whether the contractor plans to use any sub-contractors. You should obtain a lien waiver from the contractor or sub-contractor at the same time that you make a payment for materials and work. A lien waiver constitutes proof of payment and is a defense if the contractor or sub-contractor later files a mechanic's lien against your property for nonpayment.

DOCUMENT ANY DIFFICULTIES WITH THE CONTRACTOR: If problems arise with the contractor, prepare a list and take photographs of the work and materials already furnished to you. Document all of your efforts, including telephone conversations and meetings, to resolve the dispute. Try to acquire as much information from the contractor about his reasons for nonperformance so that this information can be provided later to the Better Business Bureau, a private attorney, or the authorities.

SEND A CERTIFIED DEMAND LETTER: If telephone calls and meetings do not resolve the dispute, you should notify the contractor in writing of the exact nature of your problem. This demand letter should request a refund or completion of the work within a reasonable time period of at least ten (10) business days, and it should be sent by regular and certified mail. Retain a copy of this demand letter and your certified mail receipt for your own records.

If you cannot resolve the dispute on your own, you should file a complaint against the contractor with the Better Business Bureau. A complaint can be initiated by contacting the Better Business Bureau on the web (www.chicago.bbb.org), by telephone (312/832-0500) or by mail (330 North Wabash - Suite 2006, Chicago, IL, 60611). After the receipt of your complaint, the Better Business Bureau will seek an explanation from the contractor. Because the Better Business Bureau is not a government or law enforcement agency, the Bureau cannot force a reply from a contractor. However, most contractors will voluntarily resolve a consumer complaint in order to maintain a satisfactory record with the Bureau. If the company chooses not to address the complaint the BBB's public Reliability Report will be amended to reflect that fact. This empowers future customers to be advised that they have an unsatisfactory record with the BBB.

If you feel that you have been the victim of fraud, the Consumer Fraud Division of the State's Attorney's Office may be able to help you recover your losses, prosecute the person or business responsible for the fraud, and prevent other members of the public from falling victim to the same scheme. You can contact the Consumer Fraud Division at (312) 603-8700.

Your home is probably your most important asset and it deserves to be protected!

List Top Ten Traps Investors Should Avoid

Secretary of State Jesse White released his securities department's annual list of the Top 10 Traps that investors should avoid.

"The path to safe investing is littered with traps that are likely to catch unwary investors. It always pays to remember that any investment that sounds too good to be true, usually is," said White.

Before making any investment, White urged investors to make sure that the salesperson is licensed with his Securities Dept. and the investment is registered. Investors should also be sure to obtain adequate written information that fully explains the investment.

White strongly advised investors to contact his office with any questions about an investment product, broker or adviser, before making an investment. He urged them to visit the office's web site at www.AvoidTheScam.net or to call (800) 628-7937.

The following is an alphabetical listing of the Illinois Secretary of State's Top 10 Traps that investors face:

Affinity Fraud - Some con artists may be members of a particular group or pretend to be members in order to gain trust. Cons often recruit a respected member of a community or religious congregation to promote their schemes by convincing them that a fraudulent investment is legitimate. In many cases, even these leaders become victims of what turns out to be a Ponzi scheme. In a recent case, an Illinois pastor was indicted on 30 counts of securities fraud and theft for luring congregants into a 'Christian' development investment.

Foreign Exchange Trading - Foreign exchange (forex) trading can be legitimate for governments and businesses concerned about fluctuations in international currencies, and it can even be appropriate for some individual investors. But the average investor should be wary when it comes to these complex markets. Forex scams attract customers with sophisticated-sounding offers placed in newspaper advertisements, radio promotions, or on Internet sites.

Internet Fraud - Scammers continue to take advantage of technology to lure investors into "pump-and-dump" stock schemes. The Securities Dept. recently issued an order against an individual who used the Internet to get investors for a purported movie deal. Assets of the individual were seized including a $400,000 home that was paid for in cash.

Investment Seminars - Promoters of unsuitable investments are increasingly seeking potential investors, particularly seniors, by offering seminars, many of them promising a free meal along with "higher returns and little or no risk." Unfortunately, in many of the cases that securities regulators see, it's just the opposite: high risk and no returns.

Oil and Gas Scams - Rising oil and natural gas prices have made a variety of traditional and alternative energy projects attractive to investors. A recent scam in Southern Illinois resulted in investors losing millions. The perpetrators are facing criminal prosecution.

Promissory Note Schemes - Con artists peddling promissory notes promise above market interest rates and safety of principal. They often claim that the investors' monies will be invested in small businesses, real estate ventures, trading programs and other moneymaking deals. In reality, the investors' funds are often spent on the con artist's personal expenses. The Department handles numerous cases involving promissory note fraud, many leading to criminal convictions.

Private Securities Offerings - Con artists are turning increasingly to private securities offerings under Rule 506 Regulation D of the Securities Act of 1933 to attract investors without having to go through the full registration process. Although sometimes legitimate, these offerings are often risky and at times even involve fraud. Generally, private offerings are designed for financially sophisticated investors.

Real Estate Investment Contracts - Despite the recent decline in property values, investments in real estate long have been viewed as a "sure thing," one with little downside risk and the potential for substantial returns. Some real estate investments are securities subject to full regulation under the state and federal securities laws, including registration requirements and antifraud rules. An investment professional lost his license to sell securities because he lured investors into a 'guaranteed safe' real estate deal but instead diverted the money for a speculative investment in a hotel.

Unlicensed Individuals & Unregistered Products - Anyone selling securities or providing investment advice about buying or selling securities must be appropriately licensed. Anyone engaging in these activities without a valid license to do so should be a red alert for investors. Con artists also bypass stringent state registration requirements to pitch viatical settlements, pay telephone and ATM leasing contracts, and other investment contracts with the promise of "limited or no risk" and high returns.

Unsuitable Sales - What might be a suitable investment for one investor might not be right for another. Securities professionals must know their customers' financial situation and refrain from recommending investments that they have reason to believe are unsuitable. For example, variable and equity indexed annuities are often unsuitable for senior citizens because those products are generally long-term investments that limit access to invested funds. Make sure your investments match up with your age, your need for access to money, and your risk tolerance.

March Against Hunger

Staff and volunteers of Faith United Food Pantry and more than 4,000 others will join the march against hunger on Saturday, June 16th at Montrose Harbor. The 22nd Annual Hunger Walk directly benefits participating food pantries, soup kitchens and shelters that are member agencies of the Greater Chicago Food Depository, including Faith United Food Pantry. Funds raised help provide nutritious food to hungry people in our community.

In addition to an approximately 2.5-mile walk, the Hunger Walk features an array of fun activities for the whole family. Festivities include entertainment by the Jesse White Tumblers, choral groups and more as well as face painting, caricature artists, jugglers and stilt walkers. Hunger Walk participants receive an event T-shirt, goodie bag, beverages and snacks.

Every week, nearly 90,000 people turn to the Greater Chicago Food Depository and its network of member agencies, including Faith United Food Pantry, for food assistance. Most agencies are run entirely by volunteers and raise their own operating funds in addition to assistance they receive through the Greater Chicago Food Depository in the form of equipment, grants and training opportunities. The Hunger Walk is a unique fundraiser which helps agencies raise money through an event planned and coordinated by the Greater Chicago Food Depository, Chicago's food bank.

Faith United Food Pantry is seeking walkers and donors for this year's Hunger Walk. To pledge your support, call (773) 568-7612. Registration on the day of the event begins at 8 a.m. and step-off is at 9:30. Free parking is available on a first-come, first-served basis.

"Click It Or Ticket"

The Illinois Dept. of Transportation (IDOT) and Illinois State Police (ISP) are teaming up with more than 300 local police agencies to mount the largest ever nighttime safety belt enforcement effort in Illinois. During the Memorial Day "Click it or Ticket" mobilization, motorists can expect more than 3,600 safety belt enforcement zones statewide, with almost 700 enforcement zones planned for after dark, the time when surveys show more drivers fail to buckle up.

Studies have shown high-risk drivers buckle up less at night. In 2005, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, nearly 60 percent of all motor vehicle occupants killed during the night were unbelted.

The statewide Memorial Day enforcement effort comes as IDOT's Division of Traffic Safety (DTS) and its traffic safety partners across the state are aiming to reach 90 percent safety belt compliance statewide and build on the safest year on Illinois roads in more than 80 years. Traffic fatalities fell below 1,300 for the first time since 1924, with more than 100 fewer people killed on Illinois highways during 2006 than 2005.

Preliminary data shows there were 1,254 traffic deaths on Illinois roadways in 2006, the lowest total since 1,065 deaths recorded in 1924. Since 2003, traffic fatalities have dropped from 1,454 to 1,355 in 2004 and 1,363 in 2005. During that same time frame safety belt usage has increased each year from 76 percent usage in 2003 to 88 percent in 2006.

Illinois is striving to reach 90 percent safety belt compliance - during a statewide annual survey conducted in June - through high visibility enforcement, community education, and paid media. IDOT is calling on communities to join their Click it or Ticket campaign to reach 90 percent safety belt compliance statewide.

Jesse White Receives Award

Illinois Secretary of State Jesse White's office was honored by the International Association of Commercial Administrators (IACA) with an Award of Merit for his Business Services site on the CyberdriveIllinois.com website.

The award, presented May 14th in Seattle, Washington, at IACA's 30th Annual Conference recognized the website for its overall appearance, round-the-clock accessibility, user-friendly design, and compliance with ADA standards.

"This award is recognition that my office is running like a successful business," said White. "My goal is to use technology to better serve the public in a manner that allows them to conduct business 24 hours a day, seven days a week, from the comfort of their offices or homes."

The Illinois Business Services site on CyberdriveIllinois.com accepts online transactions for Uniform Commercial Code (UCC) filings and searches, Certificates of Good Standing for corporations and limited liability companies, and filings of Annual Reports for corporations and limited liability companies.

Within the last year, the Business Services site has seen an exponential increase in online filings. Over 50 percent of all UCC transactions are now filed online, and more than 80 percent of Certificates of Good Standing are purchased through the website.

The website placed third in an international competitive judging process that included government agencies throughout North America, including the United States and Canada.

Do You Really Need A Lawyer?

Sometimes it's obvious. You've been accused of a crime or you are sued for damages in a civil suit, and you become very aware of the urgent need for professional legal help.

Other times, it's less clear. The fact is that legal assistance is often desirable, even essential, in situations which may have nothing to do with crime or a court action.

How do you determine if you need a lawyer? It depends on the issue. If you've received an ordinary parking ticket, you probably don't need legal help. But if you're facing a situation involving a significant amount of money or your personal rights are in jeopardy, it may be wise to seek out professional legal advice.

Common situations where you need a lawyer include the following:

When You Enter into a Contract. Any agreement, oral or written, which involves a consideration - that is, the exchange of something of value in return for some goods or service rendered - may be binding and enforceable. Generally, oral agreements should be avoided. Written agreements should be either prepared by or examined by a lawyer before you sign anything.

When Your Personal Status Changes. Marriage, the birth or adoption of children and moving to a different state may result in new or different legal and personal responsibilities. Your lawyer can help you plan for and meet new obligations, including the preparation of various legal documents which may be required.

When You Make Or Revise A Will or Estate Plan. The planning and drafting of your Will is an important legal matter. Your lawyer can plan your estate in a way that will be most beneficial to you and your heirs. In addition, your lawyer can suggest ways to organize your estate so that substantial savings in taxes and other estate costs are realized.

When You Buy Or Sell Real Estate. Buying and selling real estate is a huge financial transaction for most people. Your lawyer will review all legal documents necessary to the transaction and participate in the closing, in order to avoid legal pitfalls that could lead to losing your home.

When You Are Involved In An Accident. If you are involved in an accident of any kind resulting in personal injury or property damage you should immediately consult with a lawyer. Your lawyer may also be helpful if you believe that a doctor or other professional has committed malpractice.

Whenever Your Personal Rights Are Threatened. The law exists to protect your rights, but often you must take definite action to make those laws work for you. For example, you may need a lawyer if you've been fired from work or have faced discrimination or immigration problems.

When Financial Problems Arise. If you have tax problems or face personal or a business bankruptcy, your attorney can help you wade through the maze of legal issues towards a satisfactory solution.

When Organizing a Business. Your attorney can help with the formation of your business and assist in the ongoing concerns about employment law, workplace safety issues, immigration issues, intellectual property rights and other matters.

When You Are Arrested. If you are arrested for any reason or are accused of or questioned about your involvement in a crime, you should consult with an attorney immediately. If you cannot afford an attorney, one will be provided to you free of charge.

Daley Announces New Zoning Web Page

Cook County Commissioner John P. Daley is informing residents of unincorporated Cook County about a new, convenient web site for obtaining building permits, and information about contractors, who are licensed to work in unincorporated Cook County. On line applications are available for building, electrical, and plumbing permits, as well as detailed information and supporting documents to help explain the county's application process.

The complete text of the Cook County Zoning Ordinance, completely overhauled in 2001, is also available. Future plans are being considered to add the complete text of the Cook County Building Code to the web site.

"This convenient new web site will save residents time and money," said Commissioner Daley. "Some of these tasks used to require a trip downtown to process paperwork. Now, it can all be done from the comfort of your own home."

Governor Announces U Of I's Historic Lincoln Hall Project Will Be "Green"

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently announced that the planned $66.4 million rehabilitation of the University of Illinois' historic Lincoln Hall will be a model "green" project, and will be submitted for an official national designation of projects that place an emphasis on energy-efficient and environmentally-friendly design.

The Lincoln Hall project will be submitted for Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) Gold certification, which would place the project at the forefront of the national movement for sustainable energy practices.

LEED certification rates projects based on their energy and water use efficiency, indoor air quality, the use of recycled and local materials, design innovation, pollution reduction, erosion control, and the overall impact of the project on the surrounding environment. The Lincoln Hall project goals include the latest energy-saving climate control systems that would also improve indoor air quality; special insulation and window treatments to improve the building's energy efficiency while preserving its historic character; lighting systems that would conserve energy and improve the classroom environment; plumbing fixtures that would reduce water usage; and other measures that will be specifically addressed during the design phase of the project. These planned upgrades would not only save energy but also help cut emissions of greenhouse gases and air pollutants.

The State of Illinois has released $3 million for planning the Lincoln Hall renovation, with the balance of state funds, $55.1 million, included in the governor's proposed FY 08 budget. The University of Illinois is contributing $8.3 million to the project.

Lincoln Hall was built in 1911 and has had no major improvements since the west half and theater were added in 1930. The planned $66.4 million construction project will reconfigure existing space for more classrooms and to meet current life safety codes. Instructional space will be concentrated on the first two floors and the backstage area of the theater, which has not been used for 25 years since the relocation of the Theater Dept. to the Krannert Center. The top two floors will be primarily faculty office space. The building will also receive upgrades to its electrical, lighting, heating, ventilation, air-conditioning, and computer network systems, as well as new flooring, ceilings and wall finishes.

Phosphorus Use Bill

Legislation sponsored by state Rep. Kevin Joyce (D-Chicago) to help keep water cleaner and better protect wildlife in Illinois by banning the use of phosphorus cleaning agents passed the Senate recently.

"This legislation is an encouraging step towards making sure future generations are able to drink a glass of water or go fishing and swimming in the Illinois River without fear for their health," Joyce said. "Phosphorus is used in cleaning agents, yet it has managed to make our beautiful waterways dirty and dangerous. By banning the use of phosphorus we are protecting the people of Illinois."

Joyce's legislation creates the Regulation of Phosphorus Detergents Act. The bill prohibits the use, sale or manufacturing of cleaning agents containing more than 0.5 percent phosphorus. Joyce's bill sets a July 1, 2010, compliance deadline. The legislation also provides that the Illinois Pollution Control board may authorize the use of phosphorus in certain products under specific conditions.

Phosphorus has been linked to the lowering of oxygen levels in water. This in turn upsets the ecological balance in bodies of water and can potentially kill fish. Algae accumulation caused by phosphorus also contributes to pollution in Illinois' recreational waterways.

By prohibiting phosphorus and trying to limit future pollution, Joyce's bill also has the potential to save millions of dollars in infrastructure upgrades and operating costs for water reclamation plants in Illinois.

"The benefits of this legislation are clear," Joyce said. "We're saving money, cleaning our rivers and protecting the people of Illinois. We're moving closer to making sure that Illinoisans can look forward to clean, safe waterways for many years to come."

House Bill 819 unanimously passed the Senate and returns to the House for concurrence.

Homeland Security Education Act

U.S. Sens. Dick Durbin (D-IL), Daniel K. Akaka (D-HI) and Thad Cochran (R-MS) recently introduced the Homeland Security Education Act to strengthen instruction in science, math and foreign language in our nation's schools.

Reports show that prior to 9/11, the Intelligence Community was not prepared to handle the challenge of translating the volumes of foreign language counter-terrorism intelligence it had collected. The Intelligence Community faced backlogs in material awaiting translation, including papers providing details on foreign research and development in scientific or technical areas; a shortage of language specialists and language-qualified field officers; and a readiness level of only 30 percent in the most critical foreign languages.

The Homeland Security Education Act provides the framework to enhance our education system ensuring that our nation will have individuals possessing these critical skills in the future by:

- Awarding scholarships to students as an incentive for them to earn undergraduate degrees in science, technology, engineering, math and foreign language studies.
- Awarding scholarships to practicing scientists and engineers and those who are fluent in foreign languages to return to school to obtain their credentials for teaching in elementary or secondary schools.
- Encouraging public-private partnerships to improve science and math curricula; upgrade laboratory facilities; provide scholarships for students to study math, science or engineering at the university level; and establish internship and mentoring opportunities for students in grades K through 12.
- Developing cultural awareness and immersion programs in colleges and universities that combine science, technology and engineering instruction with foreign language to expand international understanding and scientific collaboration.
- Creating language learning pathways to facilitate proficiency in critical foreign languages from kindergarten through graduate school.

The Homeland Security Education Act also establishes programs to increase the number of teachers in the fields of science, math and foreign language through scholarships tied to service agreements and would improve foreign language teacher professional development through partnerships between local education agencies and institutions of higher education to hold summer workshops and provide distance learning.

Internet Safety Education

Joined by educators from Chicago Public Schools (CPS), CPS Board President Rufus Williams and area lawmakers, Attorney General Lisa Madigan recently unveiled new and concentrated measures designed to help protect today's school children from threats not known to school kids of just a few years ago: online predators and other criminals that use the Internet to perpetrate crimes against children.

At a morning news conference in the library and computer lab at Chicago's Drummond Elementary School, Madigan announced two important tools that will help parents and educators monitor how children use the Internet. Senate Bill 1472 calls on schools to provide yearly Internet safety education to students in grades K through 12. In addition, Madigan announced that her office would coordinate the distribution to schools throughout the state educational videos that promote Internet safety.

Introduced into the General Assembly last month, SB 1472, the Internet Safety Education Act, sponsored by Sen. Dan Kotowski and Rep. David Miller, encourages Illinois schools to adopt an age-appropriate Internet safety curriculum. Intended to serve as a tool to assist education, SB 1472 identifies several key topics for instruction including safe and responsible use of the Internet, online predators, identity theft, cyber-bullying and harassment, and illegal downloading.

Madigan also announced that her office will coordinate the distribution of Think Before You Post, a new public service advertising (PSA) campaign created by NCMEC and the U.S. Dept. of Justice in cooperation with the Ad Council. The PSAs are designed to raise awareness about the prevalence of online sexual exploitation and to help parents, guardians and teens better protect themselves from online predators.

Approximately 34 percent of children ages 10 to 17 post their real names, telephone numbers, home addresses or the names of their schools online where anyone could see, according to a recent study conducted by University of New Hampshire researchers for NCMEC.

Madigan commended Superintendent Arne Duncan and the Chicago Public Schools for partnering with her office in making the Think Before You Post PSA available to over 500 grammar and high schools throughout the city of Chicago.

Madigan used the occasion to stress the ever-changing virtual world and how online predators have new mediums to reach potential victims and perpetrate crimes against children.

According to a 2005 report by the Pew Internet and American Life Project, 87 percent of teens between the ages of 12 and 17 are online.

In 2006, 55 percent of teens reported use of social networking web site of which 48 percent reported visiting such web sites at least daily.

According to NCMEC, approximately 13 percent of youth received a sexual solicitation or approach over the Internet within the preceding year.

Minimize Risks Of Water Illness When Swimming

As swimming pools, water parks and beaches prepare to open for the season during the Memorial Day weekend, Dr. Eric E. Whitaker, Illinois Dept. of Public Health (IDPH) Director, is encouraging healthy swimming behaviors to prevent water illnesses during National Recreational Water Illness Prevention Week.

Outbreaks of recreational water illnesses continue to occur in the United States each year. Sixty-two percent of these outbreaks are related to the chlorine-resistant pathogen, Cryptosporidium, ("Crypto") which is introduced into the pool by swimmers who are ill with diarrhea and spread to other swimmers when they swallow the contaminated water, according to Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. These outbreaks underscore the continuing need to educate people about recreational water illness prevention to ensure a healthy swimming experience.

Awareness of recreational water illnesses (RWIs) and healthy swimming behaviors play an important role in stopping transmission of RWIs. Germs on and in swimmers' bodies end up in the water and can make other people sick. Even healthy swimmers can get sick from RWIs, but the young, elderly, pregnant women and immunosuppressed persons are especially at risk.

Specific actions you can take to promote healthy swimming include:

- Do not swim when you have diarrhea or have had it in the past 2 weeks.
- Do not swallow the water or get water in your mouth.
- Shower before swimming (children too!).
- Wash your hands after using the toilet or changing diapers.
- Take children on bathroom breaks or change diapers.
- Change children's diapers in a bathroom, not at poolside.

There are also things you can look at to prevent recreational water illness. You should notice:

- Clean and clear pool water; you should be able to clearly see any painted stripes and the bottom of the pool.
- Smooth pool sides; tiles should not be sticky or slippery.
- No odor; a well chlorinated pool has little odor. A strong chemical smell indicates a maintenance problem.
- Pool equipment working; pool pumps and filtration systems make noise and you should hear them running.

In order to minimize these risks, the Illinois Dept. of Public Health requires the state's 3,500 licensed swimming facilities to meet water quality and safety standards, including engineering design standards that apply to pools, spas, beaches, water supplies, bather preparation areas, and water treatment systems. The Department enforces these rules and regulations through plan approvals and inspections.

The preschool programs—Learn As You Grow I, Learn As You Grow II, Play School and Prep School—are offered at the Oak View Center, 4625 W. 110th St., and the Little White Building in Lake Shore Park, 96th St. and East Shore Dr., and are taught by qualified instructors.

The programs, for children ages 3 and 4, offer a balance of structured and free-play activities that are ideal for the young child: story time, singing, art and holiday celebrations. The programs for children ages 4 and 5 are the stepping-stones to kindergarten, emphasizing all readiness skills (numbers, colors, letters, shapes, printing). The programs will run September 2007 through May 2008.

For more information or to schedule a preschool visit, call (708) 857-2200.

Merit Scholar Finalists

Brother Rice High School seniors Ryan Fiehart (left) of Oak Lawn and Patrick Vail of Orland Park are congratulated by assistant principal Ed Maloney on being chosen 2007 National Merit Scholar Finalists. Fiehart and Vail were named Semifinalists in the fall. Semi-finalists represent less than one percent of U.S. high school seniors, includes the highest scoring entrants in each state.

To become a finalist, a semifinalist must have an outstanding academic record throughout high school, be endorsed and recommended by the school principal, and earn SAT scores that confirm the student's earlier qualifying test performance. The semifinalist and a school official must submit a detailed scholarship application, which includes the student's self-descriptive essay and information about the semifinalist's participation and leadership in school and community activities. Approximately 15,000 semifinalists advanced to the finalist level and it is from this group that all Merit Scholarship winners will be chosen this spring.

Fiehart has a grade point average of 4.03 and is ranked 43 out of 254 in his class. Vail has a GPA of 4.92 and has been ranked #1 in his class for four years.

Moraine Valley's New Student Trustee

As William Obuchowski of Oak Lawn sees it, he has the summer session of 2006. "It's been a completely a great opportunity ahead of him while serving as difference place. I had a second chance. I knew people Moraine Valley Community College's student trustee from high school who already earned a bachelor's for 2007-08.

Obuchowski, a 2002 graduate of Oak Lawn Community High School, looks forward to working with the Board of Trustees and the administration while representing the student view. "I didn't want to miss out on a life experience—getting a corporate and management perspective on how a college or business operates," he said.

One experience he will be involved in is representing the student perspective with the college's new building program. "I want to make sure student needs are taken in consideration which I believe they are," Obuchowski, who is in the Honors Program, said. He also wants to be sure the students' voice is heard on other topics such as parking, but to have that voice students have to become more involved—more connected to their college experience. He knows of what he speaks. Obuchowski, who wants to pursue a degree in engineering, is a staff writer for the Glacier, the student newspaper; a member of the Student Government Association; treasurer of the Ski Club; and a member of the Honors Program Student Association.

His involvement in college organizations and clubs was not always the case with him. "I came here for a semester after graduating from high school, and I was not terribly motivated," he said. He didn't return until ents and sister all have attended Moraine Valley. When his father was at the college, there were only two buildings. Now there are eight buildings with another under construction and three on the drawing boards. Obuchowski can understand Moraine Valley's attraction. "It's cost effective and convenient. It's also easy to do what you want here. You have opportunities to excel and get involved. There are wonderful flexible learning opportunities which are great if you work," said Obuchowski, who has worked the past five years at Arch Top Mouldings in Hickory Hills.

He hasn't decided on where he will transfer to earn his bachelor's degree after next school year, but he knows he will be ready. "I feel I will be prepared for engineering school. I will have been taught what I need to know," Obuchowski said.

degree, and I saw I had no room to move up at my job without furthering my education. I aspired for more," Obuchowski said. The second time at Moraine Valley he felt he was in the right place. "I appreciated and really understood the value of education. I made more friends and felt connected, and my time here opened up more opportunities."

Like many Moraine Valley students, there is an Obuchowski family history at the college. His parents and sister all have attended Moraine Valley. When his father was at the college, there were only two buildings. Now there are eight buildings with another under construction and three on the drawing boards. Obuchowski can understand Moraine Valley's attraction. "It's cost effective and convenient. It's also easy to do what you want here. You have opportunities to excel and get involved. There are wonderful flexible learning opportunities which are great if you work," said Obuchowski, who has worked the past five years at Arch Top Mouldings in Hickory Hills.

He hasn't decided on where he will transfer to earn his bachelor's degree after next school year, but he knows he will be ready. "I feel I will be prepared for engineering school. I will have been taught what I need to know," Obuchowski said.

Chess Team Wins Conference

After winning their third conference title in the past five years in April, the Richards High School chess team set its sights a little higher this month. Traveling to Kansas City for the national high school chess tournament, Coach Manuel Montes felt his players were ready to possibly bring home a trophy or two.

The Bulldogs made the trip more than memorable, placing three in the top 25 players out of 362 competitors. Jim Nowak placed eighth, Jeff Wycislak 10th, and Joe Sinopole 25th.

"They exceeded my expectations. The program has grown the past several years. We've had some notable individual achievements at the national level, but never this many at one time," said Montes, who built the Richards chess program from scratch into a consistent winner. During the regular season, Richards won the South Suburban Conference title by posting a record of 8-1.

Shriners Opened To The Public

Shriners Hospitals for Children - Chicago invites the public to join in a celebration of the best in medical care for children at its annual Open House on Sunday, June 3, at the hospital, 2211 N. Oak Park Ave. in Chicago, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. The hospital will provide tours of the facilities (including the operating rooms), a free picnic lunch, entertainment, games and activities for the kids (including model railroads, pet therapy animals, medical play and medical art, and demonstrations of adapted sports). Current and former patients especially are encouraged to attend; Shriners Hospitals for Children - Chicago is one of the few hospitals in the US with a formal alumni association. The program ends with a parade on the hospital grounds.

A new feature this year will be the Illinois Child Identification Program (IL CHiP), starting at 10 am that day. Parents will be offered the opportunity to have volunteers record identifying information about their children in case of loss or abduction. All information is coded onto a CD-ROM, which the parent holds until the need for the information arises; then it can be decoded by the police to assist in finding the child. Parents can reserve a spot by emailing felowsquare@gmail.com, but walk-ins may be accepted if time permits.

For information, contact Elise Wachspress, (773) 385-5420, ewachspress@shrinersnet.org.

Letter To The Editor

Chunky Peanut Politicians

Blessed are the politicians that mean what they say and say what they mean.

Former-Pres. Jimmy Carter said of Pres. George W. Bush that he was "the worst president in American history," or was it "among the worst presidents ever," or was it "The worst American president, ever, in the field of world affairs." Regardless of his precise words, Carter did not spew out lukewarm or hard-to-understand words. I'm confident he said what he meant and he meant what he said. (And of course he was right when he said it.)

And when Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL) compared the treatment of detainees at the U.S. military base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, to Nazis, Soviet gulags and Cambodia's Pol Pot, he meant what he said and said what he meant. And I understood him despite his later recantation.

Then along comes the after-thought police, the statesmanship sentries, the reporters with tape recorders and politicians become struck by "I better tone it down" second-thoughts.

I meant to say... he meant to say... What he really said...

Oh, baloney.

When a politician speaks his mind in plain and understandable English (the national language), let the words ring forth. Inscribe them on Liberty Bells, the Black Hills of South Dakota and in-your-face bumper stickers. Let him "dis" this or that.

Don't take the words back. Don't dilute their beauty, their simplicity, their heart-felt "genuinity" and insight.

Applaud uninhibited fulsome speech when you get a chance to hear it raw and first draft.

Why I wouldn't give you a handful of peanuts for a few paragraphs of talk like: "In some respects, the policies of the Bush Administration have been inimical to the world's perception of America, internationally. Although some observers may have thought that the U.S. would have supported preservation of the anti-ballistic missile treaty, banned the use of phosphorous weapons, favored the Kyoto Treaty, supported the International Criminal Court, or given the search for weapons of mass destruction a greater chance for peace - these matters upon which reasonable minds can differ. And Democrats and Republicans differ even intra-party."

Malarkey.

Pols should say what they mean and point their finger directly at their target close-up.

Carter pointed his finger at Bush, not his administration. Pres. Carter said, "I think as far as the adverse impact on the nation [the U.S.] around the world, this administration has been the worst in history."

Oh, Carter did turn down the rhetoric right out of the box. He spoke of policies not personalities, administrations not individuals. There goes Carter, again: weak, mincing his words like he was facing re-election instead of enjoying the safety of retirement, a peanut pension, plus a lifetime government presidential stipend. If he's not giving away our Panama Canal, he's assuaging his criticism of the man holding the reins of power.

Come on Jimmy - stop holding back. Tell him like you believe it is. Tell him like Sunday school class is adjourned. Hit him in the Iraq, hit him in the Middle East, hit him in his Guantanamo Bay and right in the nose, too.

Stop apologizing for being right! Get Playboy off your mind and hit 'em again, harder, harder, Carter.

Emerald Ash Borer Awareness Week

Governor Rod R. Blagojevich proclaimed May 20-26 as Emerald Ash Borer Awareness Week in Illinois to help make sure people know how to prevent the spread of the tree-killing beetle. The Emerald Ash Borer (EAB) is only capable of flying short distances on its own, so limiting the movement of firewood and other potentially-infested wood products is the single most important step individuals can take to prevent the spread of this destructive pest and save the ash trees.

"Trees enhance our state's landscape and contribute to the quality of life in communities all over Illinois. The emerald ash borer has already killed more than 20 million ash trees since it arrived in North America just five years ago and now is threatening to destroy millions of ash trees here in Illinois. It's important for people who live here and who may travel here to know what they can do to help stop the destruction," Gov. Blagojevich said.

The emerald ash borer is a small, metallic-green insect from Asia that was first discovered in the United States near Detroit, MI in 2002. It likely was transported here in wooden shipping pallets or packing materials. The first beetle detection in Illinois occurred last June in a rural Kane County subdivision west of St. Charles. Subsequent finds were made in the northern Cook County communities of Wilmette, Evanston, Winnetka and, most recently, Skokie.

The Illinois Management and Science Advisory Panel, a team of experts appointed by the governor that includes representatives from the USDA Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, USDA Forest Service, City of Chicago Bureau of Forestry, Illinois Department of Natural Resources, University of Illinois Cooperative Extension and Morton Arboretum, is coordinating the state's response to the beetle.

"Our strategy to eradicate this pest has three components," Agriculture Director Chuck Hartke said. "The first component is a quarantine to stop the movement of ash wood and ash nursery products out of infested areas. The second involves the removal of infested trees to reduce the population of the ash borer and minimize its potential spread while the third, a comprehensive survey of ash trees in northeastern Illinois to determine the exact extent of the infestation, is completed."

Areas under quarantine include all of Kane County and parts of northern Cook, western DuPage, northern Kendall and eastern DeKalb counties. More than 400 infested trees were removed this spring at no expense to homeowners as part of the population reduction strategy. An additional 1,000 trees in the region have been surveyed.

"Memorial Day is the traditional start of the travel and tourism season," Sam Flood, acting director of the Illinois Department of Natural Resources, said. "As campers and picnickers prepare for their family outings, we'd like them to remember that it's okay to pack food and equipment, but not firewood. All firewood should be purchased locally from vendors at your destination and then burned before you leave to prevent new infestations of emerald ash borer."

The emerald ash borer is difficult to detect, especially in newly-infested trees. Citizens should watch for metallic-green beetles about half the diameter of a penny on or near ash trees that are showing signs of disease or stress. Other signs of infestation in ash trees include D-shaped holes in the bark of the trunk or branches and shoots growing from its base. Anyone who suspects a tree has been infested is urged to contact their county Extension office. For more information, visit www.IllinoisEAB.com on the internet.

Prevent Cuts In Medicaid Payments To Hospitals

This week, Congress approved an emergency supplemental spending bill that included a provision to place a one-year moratorium on a Medicaid rule that would have cut up to $623 million in federal funding from Illinois' Medicaid program. U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL) and U.S. Rep. Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) released the following statements on their successful efforts to include this provision in the final supplemental war bill.

"With passage of this emergency spending bill, Cook County Stroger Hospital and other hospitals throughout the country are one step closer to protecting their critical Medicaid funds. This is money that helps hospitals provide basic services to the uninsured and those with limited insurance," said Durbin.

"This provision ensures that hospitals and providers can continue to provide the most vulnerable and uninsured people of Illinois with the critical health care services they need," said Emanuel.

On Jan. 18th, the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) proposed a rule that would limit payments to government health care providers and alter state financing mechanisms. This proposed rule would impact more than 57 million Americans and 2 million Illinoisans who rely on the Medicaid program, as well as health care providers who deliver essential services to them.

Illinois House Approves Teen Driver Laws

Legislation proposed by Secretary of State Jesse White to improve teen driving laws with the aim of reducing traffic crashes and fatalities involving young drivers was approved by the Illinois House of Representatives. The bill now moves to the governor's office for his approval.

Senate Bill 172, sponsored in the House by State Representative John D'Amico (D-Chicago), will improve the Illinois Graduated Driver Licensing (GDL) Program that governs drivers up to the age of 21. Several recent studies have shown that comprehensive GDL programs greatly reduce traffic crashes and fatalities involving teen drivers. The legislation is based on recommendations made by White's Teen Driver Safety Task Force, composed of legislators, traffic safety experts, law enforcement officials, educators, judges and victim advocates.

Senate Bill 172 includes the following nine provisions: (1) Triples the permit phase from 3 to 9 months. (2) Changes the nighttime driving restriction from 11 p.m. to 10 p.m. on weekdays and from midnight to 11 p.m. on weekends. Also extends the nighttime restriction to include 17 year-olds. Allows exemptions for work and school-sanctioned activities. (3) Doubles the period - from 6 to 12 months - that restricts a new driver to a maximum of one unrelated teen passenger. Allows an exemption for siblings. (4) Requires student drivers to complete a minimum of six hours of actual, on-the-street driving with a certified driver education instructor. (5) Implements a true GDL system that requires new drivers to earn their way from one stage to the next. (6) Requires drivers under age 18 who are ticketed for traffic violations to appear before a judge with a parent or guardian to receive court supervision. Requires the attendance of traffic school as a requisite for court supervision for drivers under age 21. (7) Allows for ticketing passengers age 15 to 20 that violate the passenger restriction law. (8) Establishes a stricter law in which the driver's licenses of those under age 21 would be suspended for each additional conviction following a driver's initial suspension for two moving violations in a 24-month period. (9) Establishes tough, new penalties that include license revocation and vehicle impoundment for drivers involved in street racing.

Durbin Pushes Legislation To Pressure Iran To Dismantle Nuclear Weapons Program

U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) joined Senator Gordon Smith (R-OR) recently in introducing legislation to strengthen sanctions against Iran until that country dismantles all nuclear enrichment and reprocessing programs.

"Iran's leaders face a choice between the peaceful development of nuclear power for their citizens or the dangerous development of nuclear weapons," said Durbin. "This legislation provides pressure and incentives to help them choose the path to peace and nuclear non-proliferation."

The Iran Counter-Proliferation Act of 2007:
Tightens economic sanctions on Iran.

Addresses Russia's role in exporting nuclear and military technology to Iran by prohibiting U.S. entry into a nuclear cooperation agreement with Russia until the President has verified that this cooperation has ceased.

Encourages the peaceful development of nuclear power by authorizing $50 million in contributions to the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) to establish an international nuclear fuel bank that would be available to countries that are in full compliance with IAEA safeguards and do not operate uranium enrichment or spent-fuel reprocessing facilities.

Reiterates the requirement to produce a National Intelligence Estimate on Iran mandated under last year's Defense Authorization bill.

The IAEA is the world's center of cooperation in the nuclear field. It was set up as the world's "Atoms for Peace" organization in 1957 within the United Nations family. The Agency works with its Member States and multiple partners worldwide to promote safe, secure and peaceful nuclear technologies.

Legal Rights Brochure

Many of the legal rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender persons are explained in a new brochure published by the Illinois State Bar Association (ISBA).

The free brochure explains protections granted under the Illinois Human Rights Act, which, since January 1, 2006, includes "sexual orientation." The law now extends protections against discrimination in employment, real estate transactions, financial credit and public accommodations to lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender persons.

Other issues covered in the brochure are same-sex marriage and adoption, opportunities to register as same-sex partners, and domestic violence protections. It also covers work-related issues including domestic partner benefits granted by employers and sexual harassment at work.

The brochure contains information about what actions to take if a person is the victim of a hate crime, as well as the various governmental bodies where a complaint based on sexual harassment or discrimination can be lodged.

For further information about law-related issues, contact an Illinois State Bar Association-member lawyer in your area or visit www.isbalawyers.com.

CAGW Calls For Reform Of Sugar Program

Citizens Against Government Waste (CAGW) President Tom Schatz has issued the following statement:

On behalf of its 1.2 million members and supporters, CAGW calls for reform of the sugar program in the 2007 farm bill and applauds the efforts of the congressional Sugar Reform Caucus.

The current U.S. sugar program, which escaped any reform in past farm bills, includes government-set price floors, government-enforced marketing quotas, and strict limits on imports. It distorts markets, hampers trade liberalization, costs consumers, and will become increasingly costly to taxpayers in the years ahead.

The program keeps U.S. sugar prices at least twice the world level. It also encourages opposition to trade agreements, even when the agreements are clearly in the national interest and benefit most other U.S. agricultural producers.

The sugar program's defenders claim that the program has no taxpayer cost and that it is necessary to keep small sugar farmers in business. However, the Congressional Budget Office forecasts that the government will be forced to purchase surplus domestic supplies, costing taxpayers $1.375 billion over the next 10 years. Nobody should be allowed to get by with calling the sugar program a "no net cost" program.

The sugar program has always been costly for U.S. consumers - the Government Accountability Office (GAO) estimates that the sugar program increases the price of sugar and sugar-containing products by $1.9 billion annually.

And who does it help? GAO found that nearly 60 percent of all sugar program benefits go to just the wealthiest one percent of sugar farmers. The sugar program is an unconscionable transfer of wealth from those least able to pay - low-income consumers of sugar and sugar-containing foods - to a small group of growers and processors, most of whom are large corporations or wealthy individuals.

Finally, the sugar program has almost wiped out the U.S. sugar cane refining industry and has forced candy manufacturers to move their operations abroad, destroying hundreds of thousands of jobs for American workers.

It is well past time to end the archaic sugar program.

All Points Southwest

By THOMAS E. GAVIN

All Points hears that Illinois Secretary of State Jesse White's legislation making it a crime to falsify one's military service in order to receive special license plates was approved by the state Senate and now awaits the governor's signature.

Under White's proposal (HB 362) people who falsely claim to be military service personnel or falsely claim to have received military honors in order to receive a military license plate will face a Class A misdemeanor, punishable by up to one year in jail and up to $2,500 in fines, the minimum fine being $1,000.

The funds collected from the fines will be deposited into the Illinois Military Family Relief Fund.

Currently the license plates that are available to service personnel include Disabled Veterans, POW, National Guard, Armed Forces Reserves, Purple Heart, Retired Armed Forces, Pearl Harbor and Golf Star. There is no extra charge for a vanity or personalized plate in these categories.

In addition, people who provide false information on their vehicle title or registration in order to obtain a license plate will also face a Class A misdemeanor with a minimum $500 fine.

Cook County Board President Todd Stroger is urging County residents to take advantage of the Cook County Department of Environmental Control's Radon Awareness Program. This program was developed to educate the public about the dangers of radon gas and to provide information on testing and mitigation, if necessary. While supplies last, the County's Department of Environmental Control, along with the State of Illinois, is providing vouchers for free radon detectors to area residents.

Radon, a colorless, odorless, radioactive gas comes from the decay of naturally occurring uranium in the earth and can accumulate indoors to dangerous levels if unchecked. Radon can be found in various concentrations practically anywhere on earth, but when concentrations rise indoors, the health risks involved become a concern. Exposure to radon gas is the second leading cause of lung cancer in the United States.

The EPA and the Surgeon General recommend testing all homes below the 3rd floor for radon. It is the only way to know for sure if the levels are sufficiently low and that your family is safe from the long-term effects of radon.

To obtain a voucher for a free radon testing kit or for more information on radon, contact the Cook County Department of Environmental Control's Radon Hotline at (708) 865-6177.

Girl Scout Councils Announce Appointment Of New CEO

Seven regional Girl Scout councils realigning into one new council to be known as Girl Scouts of Greater Chicago and Northwest Indiana has appointed its first chief executive officer.

Brooke M. Wiseman will assume her leadership role as CEO on June 11, facilitating the final months of transition as the local councils merge together. Then she will oversee the operations of the new council as it launches on Oct. 1.

"My passion for the Girl Scout organization was ignited when I was a child, growing up as a Girl Scout in northern Indiana. That, coupled with my years as a CEO in the area, has solidified my commitment to ensuring that Girl Scouting fulfills its mission and builds the next generation of women leaders," said Wiseman.

Girl Scouts of Greater Chicago and Northwest Indiana will serve girls and adult volunteers who live and work throughout the Illinois counties of Cook, DuPage, Grundy, Kankakee, Lake, and Will; and the Indiana counties of Jasper, Lake, Newton, and Porter. The council will launch with approximately 100,000 current girl members ages 5-17, making it the largest Girl Scout council in the country.

"Appointing a CEO with the vision and expertise to carry us through this exciting and transformative phase was absolutely critical," said Alice Watrobka, volunteer co-chair of the Council Realignment Committee, a group of 21 volunteers and staff representing the seven existing councils.

According to Watrobka, "Brooke is well-qualified to keep the best interests of our girl and adult members at the forefront during this exciting time of growth for our organization. She is poised to serve as an advocate on behalf of girls from across this area, a region of great diversity, and to ensure that they have every opportunity to develop their leadership skills."

Wiseman has been a pivotal part of the greater Chicago area non-profit landscape for 25 years, and a life-long proponent of the rewards of a career in non-profit management. She has been CEO of Girl Scouts of Chicago since 1992, and was previously executive director of Girl Scouts of DuPage County Council for seven years. She also has served as executive director of Permian Basin Girl Scout Council in Odessa, Texas, and program director for Michigan Capital Girl Scout Council in Lansing, Michigan.

She earned her Bachelor of Science degree from Ball State University in Indiana, a Master's degree in Communications from Michigan State University, and a Certificate in Non-Profit Management from Case Western University. She also completed the national requirements to be designated a certified Girl Scout CEO.

Wiseman is past national president of the Association of Girl Scout Executive Staff and past national chair of the Certified Girl Scout CEO Committee. She is currently involved in numerous organizations including the Economic Club of Chicago, the Union League Club Board of Directors, the Chicago Council on Global Affairs - President's Circle, Leadership Greater Chicago Fellows Association, the Chicago Alliance for Collaborative Effort, and the Junior League of Chicago Advisory Board.

Her past affiliations included involvement with Chicago Women in Philanthropy, Leadership America, and the Chicago Council of the United Way of Metropolitan Chicago, and she was a City of Chicago delegate to the President's Summit for America's Future.

In 2001 she received a Human Relations Award from the Chicago Commission on Human Relations. She also has been recognized as one of the "100 Women Making a Difference" by Today's Chicago Woman magazine, and is a member of Who's Who in America and Who's Who in American Women.

The seven legacy councils that will become Girl Scouts of Greater Chicago and Northwest Indiana on Oct. 1 include: Girl Scouts of the Calumet Council, Inc.; Girl Scouts of Chicago; Drifting Dunes Girl Scout Council, Inc.; Girl Scouts - Illinois Crossroads, Inc.; Girl Scouts - Prairie Winds, Inc.; Girl Scouts of South Cook County, Inc.; and Girl Scouts of Trailways Council, Inc.

"With combined resources, we can create a more consistent Girl Scout experience for girls who live anywhere in the city, the suburbs or rural areas. Together we can focus on increasing our local direct services and offering more innovative program opportunities for girls of all ages," said Wiseman.

For the past two years, girls and adults across the country have been voicing their opinions and sharing ideas about how to implement structural and programmatic organizational changes to ensure that today's girls receive a consistent and rewarding Girl Scout experience no matter where they live.

Part of that work has focused on developing new Girl Scout council structures nationwide that would encourage efficient use of resources. It also focused on enriching program opportunities for girls that focus on the core values expressed in the organization's mission to build girls of courage, confidence, and character, who make the world a better place.

For more information, visit Girl Scouts of Greater Chicago and Northwest Indiana's transitional Web site at www.gsmetrochicago.org or call (312) 416-2500.

Support Troop Funding

Congressman Dan Lipinski joined a bipartisan majority in the House of Representatives in passing H.R. 2206, a supplemental appropriations bill which contains urgently needed funding for U.S. troops while requiring the Iraqi government to meet benchmarks in reconciliation in order to receive reconstruction aid.

"This is not a perfect bill, but it is a turning point for America's policy on Iraq," said Lipinski. "With this bill we are providing the necessary funding for our brave troops in harm's way and we are also - for the first time - not giving the President a blank check. But we must work to further force the President to put pressure on the Iraqi government to take responsibility for political reconciliation and security in Iraq so that American troops can begin to safely re-deploy soon."

"Today's supplemental, which for the first time sets benchmarks for success in Iraq, passed because it gained broad bipartisan support," said Lipinski. "With the President holding veto power, it is clear that Democrats in Congress need Republican support in order to put meaningful pressure on the Administration."

Congressman Lipinski has been working with over 30 members of Congress from both sides of the aisle to craft legislation that would require the implementation of the Iraq Study Group's recommendations. This bill would set a number of reconciliation milestones for the Iraqi government to meet while requiring the U.S. to engage in a diplomatic offensive with leaders in Iraq and the Middle East to achieve peace and secure reconstruction aid. This legislation would also set a goal of early next year for U.S. troops to transition from full-scale military operations to training Iraqi security forces.

"In the coming weeks and months, I will continue to work with my colleagues in Congress to apply meaningful pressure on the President and the Iraqi government to achieve stability in Iraq and bring our troops home," said Lipinski. "I hope today's supplemental proves to be the first step in this process."

This Summer, Crack The Case

Imagine entering a crime scene and being the one responsible for noticing and collecting every trace of evidence. The pressure's on: your analysis of the evidence must be scientifically sound to crack the case.

You've seen the hit television crime drama, CSI: Crime Scene Investigation on CBS. Now, beginning May 25, the Museum of Science and Industry in Chicago will host the world premiere of CSI: The Experience, an immersive, interactive forensic science exhibit related to the TV show. The bilingual exhibit (English and Spanish) will run through Sept. 3rd.

In CSI: The Experience, guests will play the role of crime scene investigator, learning scientific principles and real investigative techniques as they try to solve one of three crime scene mysteries. Two state-of-the-art crime labs will help guests piece together the evidence. With input from investigators from the television show, along with their real-life forensic science counterparts, guests will formulate a hypothesis, validate their findings based on scientific evidence and try to crack the case.

From DNA and fingerprint analysis to forensic anthropology and toxicology, visitors will be captivated by hands-on science in a multi-media environment with dazzling special effects—direct from the CSI television series. A video introduction by cast members from the TV show will welcome guests into the exhibit, lead them through the experience, and then evaluate their crime-solving savvy as they exit.

"This exhibit blends science, technology and innovation into one phenomenal experience that guests will enjoy and learn from," said David Mosena, president and CEO of the Museum of Science and Industry. "It's also our hope that in experiencing this exhibit, children will discover the many different and vital careers that exist within the field of science, and become excited about them."

"With the launch of this exciting new exhibit, we're extending the CSI brand beyond entertainment and licensed merchandise into an engaging learning experience," commented Elizabeth Kalodner, executive vice president and general manager of CBS Consumer Products.

The National Science Foundation (NSF) provided $2.4 million to the Fort Worth Museum of Science and History to develop the exhibit for a national tour of science museums, as well as an online learning adventure. According to Sandra Welch, NSF's program officer for informal science education, this unique project will advance science learning in museums across the country in an exciting new way. "The show CSI has inspired its millions of fans to become interested in forensic science. Recognizing the role the show plays in society, we think this connection with the exhibit will help draw many people into a high quality science learning experience."

The exhibit's "investigators" will enter one of three different crime scenes where they will identify evidence and record findings on a special investigation card. The crime scenes vary in intensity, with the mildest being the presentation of skeletal remains discovered in a remote desert.

In "A House Collided" a car has run through the living room window of a house in a quiet suburb. In the driver's seat is a man with his seatbelt on; he is slumped over. The windshield is shattered and the car door is shut. In the living room, there are muddy shoeprints, drops of blood and a stain near a sofa. A pizza box is open with pepperoni pizza spilled on the floor. A beer bottle is by the car door, and a hand print of blood (or is it pizza sauce?) is found on the car hood.

In "Who Got Served?" a young woman has been found dead in an alley behind an old Las Vegas motel. She is sprawled beneath a dumpster overflowing with trash and is wearing a waitress outfit with a nametag that reads "Penny." There is a tire tread across her abdomen, and tossed nearby is a photo of her, which has been ripped in half. No other injuries are visible. Amongst the trash are a handbag and a cell phone.

In "No Bones About It!" a hiker has stumbled across what looks like a human skull sticking out of the ground. It is partially buried by silt and debris. Other bones are scattered underneath the dirt. The skull has a visible hole in it; and among the remains, there are still tattered remnants of a coat and what appears to be a backpack.

After exiting the crime scenes, guests will refer to a large wall of crime scene photos and clues they may have missed. They will then analyze evidence in two highly interactive lab areas, each featuring multiple stations that allow for various evidence testing.

Guests who are investigating "A House Collided" will compare fingerprints of the victim to the evidence, examine blood spatter patterns, observe the shoes of the victim and tracks found in the room, compare fibers on the victim's clothes with fibers in the room, analyze the victim's blood-alcohol level, compare DNA of the victim with evidence and eventually discover the cause of death.

For "Who Got Served?" the investigation will include reviewing evidence within a cell phone, examining the contents of the handbag, inspecting the purse and headshot for fingerprints, establishing the time of death, reviewing DNA samples, testing powder from the handbag at the scene, and discovering the cause of death.

Sleuths working on "No Bones About It!" will analyze the bullet from the found skull, analyze hairs found with the body, examine a seed found in a pocket of the jacket, study a DNA sample from a tooth, test the DNA of an animal's hair, examine a femur bone to establish the height of the victim, compare dental records to the victim and discover the cause of death.

At the end of the exhibit, guests will present their findings in a re-creation of the office of Gil Grissom—the enigmatic CSI head investigator. They will answer a series of multiple choice questions, based on their scientific findings, on touch screens located in this area. After completing these questions, a case summary is generated and guests can match their results to those of expert crime scene investigators!

CSI: The Experience was developed by the Fort Worth Museum of Science and History with support from CBS Consumer Products, the cast and crew of the television show, and the National Science Foundation. This exhibit, geared toward guests ages 12 and up, requires a ticket with a specified entry time. Tickets, which include Museum general admission, are $19 for adults, $17.50 for seniors and $14 for children 3-11. There is a discount for City of Chicago residents. Advance tickets are on sale now at www.msichicago.org or by calling (773) 684-1414. Groups of 20 or more are eligible for a discount when they book in advance.

Illinois State Fair Announces Its 2007 Theme

"Celebrate and Educate" has been chosen as the theme of the 2007 Illinois State Fair and Twilight Parade. Agriculture Director Chuck Hartke and State Fair Manager Amy Bliefnick announced the selection on behalf of Governor Rod R. Blagojevich on April 24th during a fairgrounds press conference to discuss preparations for this year's event.

In addition to the information available in the tents of state agencies, fairgoers can learn about fire safety in the Illinois State Fire Marshal's Firehouse Museum or about the fair's illustrious 155-year history in the Illinois State Fair Museum. Conservation World offers a wide array of free shows and hands-on activities that educate visitors about outdoor recreational opportunities and the state's natural preserves. Hometown Pride introduces fairgoers to different communities throughout Illinois, and Campus Town allows students and their parents to learn about the educational offerings at state colleges and universities.

With 366 acres of attractions, the fair is Illinois' premiere summer festival. Whether riding the Giant Slide, watching world-class harness racing and motor sports, visiting the famous Butter Cow or sipping a lemonade shake-up and eating a corn dog while strolling through exhibits featuring the handiwork of Illinois artists and craftsmen, there's plenty to see and do.

Dancers Support Beverly Arts Center

Nearly 100 dancers from throughout Chicagoland performed in "Bringin' It From the Streets II" on Friday, May 11, raising funds to support the not-for-profit Beverly Arts Center (BAC), 2407 W. 111th St. (111th and south Western), Chicago. The show nearly sold out the 400-seat theater.

Organized and produced by BAC dance instructor Chris Nasadowski, 19, the show featured dancers from Hip Hop ConnXion Ti-3, Culture Shock Chicago, MADD Rhythms, Hip Hop ConnXion Elite, Hip Hop Force, Reanimation, Midnight Angelz, Nonstop Dance Productions, 214, Corpo, Chicago Onyx Dance Alliance and Corpo performing hip hop, breakdance, modern, tap, jazz and partner dances.

Nasadowski, who lives in Evergreen Park, got his start dancing at the Beverly Arts Center just a few years ago, and now teaches hip hop at the Center. He has performed with groups such as Culture Shock Chicago, Chicago Dance Crash and Prevail. He has performed with local recording artists, and has traveled to perform San Diego, Washington DC, and other US cities. Last year, Nasadowski organized "Bringin' It From the Streets" to raise funds for the Stand Up for Kids Chicago, an organization that helps homeless youth. This year, proceeds will benefit the BAC.

"This performance brings so much energy and inspiration into the Beverly Arts Center," said BAC Executive Director Mike Nix. "The dancers are so talented and creative; the audience is young and exuberant; and Chris Nasadowski does a tremendous job producing, organizing and promoting the show. This is a fundraiser that works on every level: It brings in funds, introduces new audience to the Center, and showcases young talent."

The Beverly Arts Center, built in 2002, is a state-of-the-art, multi-cultural, multi-discipline regional fine arts center that provides fine arts education, outreach, entertainment and programming.

"The BAC is a beautiful venue," he said. "I just want to do my part to make sure it continues for a long time. What better way to show your support for the fine arts and the BAC than by coming to a night of fun, clean music and talented dancers."

For more information on the Beverly Arts Center, call (773) 445-3838 or visit www.beverlyartscenter.org. School of the Arts classes, including hip-hop dance with Chris Nasadowski, begin the week of June 18.

VALUE OF A HUNTER: During his or her lifetime, an average American hunter spends $17,726.59 on hunting equipment. When licenses, and lodging, food and fuel, magazines and meat processing, plus other expenses are included, the average lifetime total spent on hunting jumps to $96,017.92.

These figures were calculated as part of 2006 National Shooting Sports Foundation-commissioned research. The study looked at hunters' total expenditures from age 16 to 75. (Source: NSSF)

FLY FISHING TRIP OF A LIFETIME: Palos Park sportsman Al Sorenson spent three days stream fly fishing for SteelHead trout on the Salmon River, Oswego County, New York.

Al Sorenson (right) and fly-fishing guide Walt Geryk with a fine SteelHead trout

Al fished with Orvis Endorsed fly fishing guide Walt Geryk. Sorenson said Geryk taught him the finer points of fly fishing including 'reading the water,' fly selection, and proper use of the equipment. Before I lost the use of my shoulder and of course the ability to fly fish, I had a lot of trouble mastering the art of roll casting, a method of fly-fishing in tight places. Sorenson said Geryk had him roll casting in short order with no problems, and if I get the use of my shoulder back he will teach me how to do it.

The fishing was done under less than ideal conditions in early May. High and fast water due to heavy rains and snow melt, but they still managed to tie into many feisty SteelHead, the best fly of the trip turned out to be the Wooley Bugger.

Sorenson recommends this trip, regardless of your fly fishing ability, accommodations were great, and Geryk is a "top-notch guide," instructor, and a great guy to be on the water with. HAZARDS IN YOUR BACKYARD: Every year, natural hazards occur in the United States that can result in lives lost and cost billions of dollars in the form of disaster aid, disrupted commerce and destroyed public and private property.

To help educate the public about the threat of natural hazards, the U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) has launched a new web site and seven easy-to-understand fact sheets on earthquakes, floods, hurricanes, landslides, tsunamis, volcanoes, and wildfires.

The hazards web site highlights resources and information available from the USGS and provides links to the individual hazards web pages for more detailed information. The web site and fact sheets can be accessed at <http://www.usgs.gov/hazards/>.

LAKE MICHIGAN CHINOOK FISHING: For the fifth straight year, anglers enjoyed fantastic Chinook fishing on Lake Michigan, reeling in the second highest number of fish in 40 years, according to recently analyzed angler surveys.

"The fishery that's out there is world class," says Brad Eggold, the DNR fisheries supervisor for southern Lake Michigan. "Anglers caught nearly 400,000 Chinook again, which is phenomenal, and the fish are bigger, which is an encouraging sign."

"The word is getting out that you can go 1 to 2 miles out on Lake Michigan and catch an 18-20 lb. Chinook," Eggold says. "We saw more anglers fishing Lake Michigan and targeting Chinook in 2006. (Great Lakes Basin Report)"

NEW LEGISLATIVE SESSIONS, SAME ANTI-HUNTING THREATS: New sessions are beginning in state and federal lawmaking bodies, but sportsmen can bet on one thing - with the sessions will come attacks to eliminate outdoor sports.

The U.S. Sportsmen's Alliance is sorting through thousands of bills to make sure that the sportsmen's community is prepared to fight those that impact sportsmen's rights. Based on trends the USSA has seen, sportsmen will likely find themselves defending dozens of issues in states from coast to coast. One of the easiest ways to make sure you are up to date on important issues is to join the USSA's free e-mail Network for weekly e-mail updates and news. Visit www.ussportsmen.org to register today.

Players Earn Honors, Sign Contracts

The South Suburban College Men's Baseball Team finished its season last weekend in Iowa with a 9-6 loss to Iowa Western, the eventual Midwest Champs. The Bulldogs, however, ended the 2007 season with another NJCAA Division I Region IV Championship and a record of 41-19. The SSC Baseball Team has now earned the Regional trophy for the fourth consecutive year, and five out of the last six.

Head Coach Steve Ruzich was presented with his sixth Regional Coach of the Year Award. Also included in his tenure are four Sectional titles and two trips to the JUCO World Series. His career record with the Bulldogs is now 778 - 415, with a .652 winning percentage.

"We had a great year with a pretty young team," said Coach Ruzich, whose team battled injuries all season long. "I am really proud of the way our players came together and played so well after a slow start."

Three of those players earned All-Region honors including: Ryan Goodman, RHP, Lake Central High School; James Williams, RHP, Bloom Trail High School; and Chris King, 1B, Lockport High School. Of those players, Goodman earned a scholarship to play for Wright State, Williams signed a letter of intent with St. Xavier University, and King is currently undecided while being heavily recruited.

In addition, Billy Murphy, a RHP out of Lake Central High School earned a scholarship to play for IU Southeast. Brett Summers, a RHP also out of Lake Central High, was drafted in the 28th Round by the Chicago Cubs in 2006 but has opted to play for Indiana State University.

The Bulldogs' starting center fielder for the past two years, David Berres of Mt. Carmel High School, has signed a contract with the Atlanta Braves and will begin his professional career at the highly regarded Braves' Single-A affiliate in Danneville, VA. Berres, who was picked in Round 30 by the Braves in 2006, was sidelined near the end of the regular season with a thumb injury. The Braves are flying him out to Atlanta to begin rehabilitation before he heads to Virginia.

Fifteen players under Ruzich's coaching at SSC have now signed professional baseball contracts including Rob Mackowiak of the Chicago White Sox, and 145 players have continued on to play for four-year college programs.

Shepard Athletes Sign With Colleges

Shepard High School announced that 11 student-athletes will continue their playing careers in college starting next fall.

Varsity athletes who will play in college include Ashlee Anton (softball), DePauw University; Dana Eppley (track) St. Xavier University; Kayla Gilbert, (track), St. Xavier; Charnele Harris (basketball and volleyball), Elmhurst College; John Moriarty (football), Valparaiso University; Kyle Rathbun (baseball), Benedictine University; Mike Recchla (baseball), Eastern Illinois University; Wes Sewell (cross country), Moraine Valley; and, Tim Storrs (baseball), Oakton Community College.

Urban Fishing Clinics

Youngsters can learn to fish and enjoy their time outdoors this summer by attending a free Illinois Dept. of Natural Resources (IDNR) Urban Fishing Clinic scheduled for 40 locations throughout the state. The IDNR also provides fishing opportunities to anglers of all ages through the popular Access to Fishing Initiative in which fishing gear can be borrowed at dozens of locations statewide.

The free Urban Fishing Program clinics are targeted toward children ages 16 and younger, but anyone interested in learning basic fishing techniques may attend.

Fishing clinic instructors present information on fish and other aquatic life, rules and regulations for fishing, as well as basic instruction on baiting a hook, tying a knot, casting, and how to handle and return fish to the water. As part of each clinic, participants are provided with rods, reels, bait and tackle for 90 minutes of catch-and-release fishing.

Urban Fishing Clinics are presented on weekdays during the late spring and summer months. In addition to the scheduled clinics, fishing clinics can also be arranged for scouts, seniors, civic clubs and groups with special needs.

The IDNR Access to Fishing program provides loaner fishing gear to anglers of all ages. The loan program provides the opportunity to borrow rods, reels and tackle packs. Participating loaner locations include many public libraries, park and forest preserve districts, bait shops, recreation departments and other locations. A list of sites offering access to fishing gear is available by checking the web site at www.ifishillinois.org or by phoning the IDNR Urban Fishing Program at (217) 782-6424.

Thoughts On Health & Nutrition

YOUR SKIN CANCER PREVENTION PLAN IN THE SUN

Memorial Day has passed and we are on our way to summer! Which means...lots of sunshine and the possibility of sunburn. Statistics show that skin cancer is now the most common cancer in our country. Over a million Americans are diagnosed with skin cancer each year. And it is usually caused by direct exposure of your skin to the sun! Skin cancer is also the most preventable of all cancers. Protecting your skin daily, rather than just when you are at the beach or pool, can make all the difference. People often say "I don't lay out in the sun, so I don't have to worry about skin cancer." But during daylight hours, you are exposed to sun everywhere-- rain or shine. It can even come through the window of your car and your office! Over time, such bits of exposure add up.

Melanoma, the deadliest form of skin cancer, is the leading cancer among women ages 25 to 29 (current and former sun-worshippers) and is rising faster than all other cancers, according to SkinCancerNet, a division of the American Academy of Dermatology. Most skin cancer is easily detected, fortunately. It can be visualized by the trained eye of a dermatologist, and if caught early, it can be removed and cured.

WEAR YOUR SUNSCREEN

Dermatologists recommend wearing sunscreen every day of the year and reapplying it every two hours if you are outside. Fair-skinned people are at highest risk for damage, but Hispanics, Asians and African-Americans should wear sunscreen daily as well because they can still get skin cancer. Hats, sunglasses, and dark, tightly knit clothing will act as shields if worn correctly.

THERE ARE BENEFITS TO SUN EXPOSURE

Even as sunlight raises the risk of skin cancer, however, small doses can help prevent other cancers. It's a good source of vitamin D, which may play a role in preventing prostate cancer in men and lymphoma and colon cancers in both sexes. Several years ago, the University of California at San Diego published a review of over 60 articles which showed that getting 1000 International Units (IU) of vitamin D3 daily may reduce the risk of colon, breast, and ovarian cancer by half. Vitamin D3 is the most readily absorbed form of the vitamin.

Cereal, fish, and dairy products are high in vitamin D. Add them to a daily supplement containing 400 to 800 IU of vitamin D3, and wear sunscreen, according to dermatologists, with an SPF of 30 or more that contains Parsol 1789, titanium dioxide, or zinc oxide, and you will be ensured of protection against both UVA and UVB light, which can both contribute to skin cancer.

FINAL ADVICE

Read the label on the back of your sunscreen bottle to confirm ingredients. Check the expiration date of the bottle as well, especially if you are using last summer's purchase! An expired product will not protect you against harmful rays or sunburn!

Visit a board-certified dermatologist yearly for a check-up. To get a list of dermatologists in your area, check with your local hospital.

Medications To Improve Health Could Be Detrimental To Oral Health

With the coming of warmer weather, millions of allergy sufferers will reach into their medicine cabinets for relief. They'll join the millions more who treat or manage a range of diseases with medications. From antihistamines to blood pressure regulators, many medications can cause side effects that negatively affect oral health.

"Modern medicines do some truly amazing things," said Max Anderson, DDS, a national oral health advisor for Delta Dental Plan Association. "However, it's important to make sure that all of the health professionals in your life, including your dentist, know about the medications you're taking so they can help you manage any side effects."

Xerostomia, known commonly as dry mouth, is listed as a side effect on more than 400 medications. Without adequate saliva flow, bacteria, plaque and the by-products they produce can accumulate in the mouth and make a person more vulnerable to gum disease and tooth decay.

Another effect of medications is gingival enlargement, a condition in which the gums become swollen and begin to grow over the teeth. Eventually, this overgrowth of gum tissue can cause a severe periodontal infection. Calcium channel blockers, sometimes used to control high blood pressure and other health issues, are just one category of medications that can cause overgrowth of gums. Monitoring and early intervention from dental and health professionals can reduce the likelihood of gingival enlargement in at-risk patients.

Oral health can be affected by other medication side effects. Some oral contraceptives and blood pressure control medications have been linked to oral sores and inflammation. One of the agents used in tetracycline, a medication used for acne treatment, can discolor teeth and the underlying bone. A number of medications, ranging from certain antibiotics to ibuprofen, can produce lesions or ulcers in the mouth that often disappear after a patient stops taking the medication.

Many cough drops, liquid medications and antacid tablets contain sugars and can leave behind a sticky residue on teeth, making them more susceptible to decay. Sugar in medications can be particularly problematic for children on long-term therapies for chronic medical conditions. Unable to swallow pills, many children receive medications in liquid form, often sweetened to make them more palatable.

Drugs affecting the central nervous system can negatively affect oral health. When patients experience side effects such as fatigue, lethargy and motor impairment, it becomes more difficult for them to take care of their own oral health. In fact, adults, taking antidepressants and antihypertensives were found to have elevated levels of plaque and the clinical signs of gingivitis.

"It's important to tell your dentist about any prescription or non-prescription drugs you are using. They can help monitor your oral health and suggest ways to combat any of the possible side effects," said Dr. Anderson.

13th Annual Fitness Day

The Illinois Dept. of Public Health (IDPH), along with the Illinois Dept. of Human Services (IDHS), held its 13th annual Fitness Day on May 16th to encourage employees who spend most of their day in the workplace to be more physically active. Fitness Day is part of National Employee Health & Fitness Day held every third Wednesday in May.

"Adults who work full-time, especially those who spend most of their time behind a desk, get very little physical activity throughout the day. But without exercise and a proper diet, we face health consequences such as heart disease, diabetes, cancer, asthma and obesity," said Illinois Dept. of Public Health Director Dr. Eric E. Whitaker. "I want to encourage everyone, employers and employees alike, to make physical activity a priority in their lives."

The most recent physical activity statistics for Illinois show that more than half, 64 percent, of working Illinoisans mostly sit or stand during the workday. When asked if they get any exercise, 25 percent said no and 52 percent said they don't think they get enough exercise.

As part of Fitness Day, Dr. Whitaker is challenging all Illinois state agencies to be a part of the 3rd Annual Summer Physical Activity Challenge to help increase physical activity in the workplace. Participating employees will spend 12 weeks tracking either the number of steps or minutes of physical activity they accumulate on a daily basis. Twelve state agencies participated in the 2006 challenge and all together employees recorded more than 267 million steps and more than 1.5 million minutes of physical activity.

"Physical fitness is important to our overall health and well-being, so I am encouraging DHS staff to set an example by participating in this year's challenge," said IDHS Secretary Carol L. Adams, Ph.D. "Even though we work all day, there are still opportunities to get out from behind the desk and start walking; whether it is on a break or during the lunch hour everyone can find time to walk for a few minutes every day."

The importance of promoting work site wellness is recognized and listed as a National Goal in the federal document Healthy People 2010, which is the roadmap created by the U.S. Dept. of Health and Human Services to improve our nation's health. Research from the Harvard University School of Public Health finds that moderate exercise, accumulated throughout the day, can lower risk of Type 2 diabetes by nearly 50 percent. A National Health Institute study shows increased physical activity was associated with a reduced risk for breast cancer in postmenopausal women and a Health Professionals Follow-up Study finds that regular vigorous activity could slow the progression of prostate cancer.

This year's Fitness Day included a volleyball tournament, one-mile and two-mile walk, Dance, Dance Revolution and a washers game.

American Cancer Society Patient Navigation Services

Every day in Illinois, approximately 167 people will discover they have cancer. A diagnosis and subsequent battle against cancer requires that patients and families maneuver through a complex maze to access quality care, information and support services. Oftentimes, people feel as if they are battling the disease as well as "the system."

The American Cancer Society's Patient Navigation Services (PNS) provides comprehensive resources for any cancer-related concern, from medical or health care issues to insurance questions to requests for specific support or simple reassurance.

The Illinois Division's Patient Navigation Services has become a model for other Society divisions nationwide. Strategic expansion of the program into major Chicago hospitals and metropolitan health centers has driven the number of new patients served to more than 10,000.

Below are the services PNS provides to Illinois cancer patients and their families:

Comprehensive Navigation Centers and Patient Resource Centers – a place where cancer patients and their families can meet face-to-face with a social worker to discuss questions and concerns about their diagnosis; i.e. insurance support, clinical trials, financial assistance, family counseling and treatment options.

Road to Recovery – provides cancer patients with transportation to and from treatments.

Look Good...Feel Better – helps women focus on restoring their inner and outer beauty by working with a licensed cosmetologist to help them cope with the side effects of chemotherapy and radiation treatments.

Support for Recovery – matches newly diagnosed patients with cancer survivors to help them cope with their diagnosis, treatment and recovery.

Reach to Recovery – similar to Support to Recovery, this program pairs breast cancer survivors with patients.

Wig Bank – supplies patients with free wigs, turbans, hats or prostheses.

Man to Man – one-on-one survivor-patient sessions for men facing prostate cancer.

Special Friends – pairs medical residents with young cancer patients and their siblings to provide a friend that understands the medical situation.

The Society's comprehensive Web site, www.cancer.org, provides a wealth of cancer-related information and the toll-free number, (800) ACS-2345, is staffed around the clock by Cancer Information Specialists.

Yearly Health Exams A Must

Every two minutes a woman is diagnosed with breast cancer and one out of every 70 women will develop ovarian cancer within their lifetime. Many of these women can live long, healthy lives if the cancer is detected early enough.

In the U.S., breast cancer is the most common form of cancer and the second leading cause of cancer-related deaths among women. African-American women have the highest rate of death from breast cancer.

Schedule yearly exams with your doctor. A doctor who sees a patient on a regular basis can make the best recommendations for optimal health.

Women who are sexually active or are over the age of 21 should have a yearly Pap test and clinical breast exam. In addition, women over age 40 should have a mammogram annually. Talk to your doctor about a testing schedule that is right for you, especially if breast, ovarian or cervical cancer is in your family history. It is also important to perform a Breast Self Exam (BSE) each month around the same time.

Eat healthy, well-balanced meals. Consider portion size, especially when eating out. Drink six to eight glasses of water each day.

Engage in regular exercise. Exercise doesn't have to be an aerobics class; it can include washing the car, dancing, gardening, biking and walking.

Limit the amount of alcohol. Try to limit alcohol intake to no more than one drink per day.

The CCDPH Breast and Cervical Cancer Program provides mammography screenings, Pap smears and clinical breast exams for financially eligible suburban Cook County women. Women 35 years and older are eligible for cervical cancer screening services through CCDPH; women age 40 and over are eligible for both cervical and breast cancer screenings (mammography) through CCDPH. For more information on income guidelines and eligibility requirements, call (708) 450-5041.

For general information on health services, contact CCDPH at (708) 492-2000. Visit www.cookcountypublichealth.org. TDD for speech/hearing impaired is (708) 492-2002.

Dr. Riba's Sedation

Permit To Be Revoked

The Illinois Dept. of Financial and Professional Regulation (IDFPR) on May 24th issued its final order on the matter of the dental, controlled substance, and specialty licenses, as well as the sedation permit of Hicham Riba, D.D.S. Daniel E. Bluthardt, Director of the Division of Professional Regulation, signed an order indefinitely suspending the general dentistry license of Dr. Riba for a minimum of 18 months, the pediatric dentistry specialty license for at least three years, controlled substance license for at least five years and revoked the permit for Dr. Riba to sedate patients. The terms of these suspensions will be effective from the date of the summary suspension issued on Sept. 29, 2006. Director Bluthardt also ordered Dr. Riba to pay a fine of $10,000, the maximum allowed under the Dental Practice Act.

The Board of Dentistry had recommended a six-month suspension of Riba's general dentistry license, retroactive to the date of the initial summary suspension. Bluthardt instead accepted the recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) for a longer suspension of 18 months.

Bluthardt argues in his order that he is extending the suspension of his general dentistry license beyond the recommendations of the Board due to Riba's failure to ensure his staff was appropriately trained, his inaccurate record keeping, and his willingness to exceed the scope of his sedation permit. In addition to the order signed, Bluthardt filed a report with the Secretary of State and with the Board of Dentistry providing his reasons for disagreement with the Board's recommendations.

Ticks And Disease Warning

Dr. Eric E. Whitaker, state public health director, is warning residents to take precautions against ticks and the disease they carry after an increased number of reports from the public to the Illinois Dept. of Public Health (IDPH).

Ticks live in and near wooded areas, tall grass and brush and, if infected, can spread various diseases, including ehrlichiosis, Lyme disease, Rocky Mountain spotted fever and tularemia. The ticks, often no bigger than a pin head, become active and can spread disease any time of the year when the temperature is 40 degrees Fahrenheit or more at ground level. Ticks, which have sticky pads on their feet, wait in ankle-high grass and other low vegetation for a human, a dog or another animal to pass by. Peak months for tick-borne diseases are June and July.

The best way to protect against tick-borne illnesses is to avoid tick bites by taking the following precautions:

Check your clothing often for ticks climbing toward open skin. Wear white or light-colored, long-sleeved shirts and long pants so the tiny ticks are easier to see.

Tuck long pants into your socks and boots. Wear a head covering or hat for added protection.

Apply insect repellent containing DEET (30 percent or less) to exposed skin (except the face). Be sure to wash treated skin after coming indoors. If you do cover up, use repellents for clothing containing permethrin to treat clothes (especially pants, socks and shoes) while in locations where ticks may be common. Follow label directions; do not misuse or over-use repellents.

Always supervise children in the use of repellents.

Walk in the center of trails so weeds do not brush against you.

"Tick Checks" are an important method of preventing tick-borne diseases. In areas where ticks may be present, be sure and check yourself, children and other family members every two to three hours for ticks. Most ticks seldom attach quickly and rarely transmit tick-borne diseases until they have been attached for four or more hours.

If you let your pets outdoors, check them often for ticks. Infected ticks also can transmit disease to them. (Check with your veterinarian about preventive measures against tick-borne diseases.) You are at risk from ticks that "hitch a ride" on your pets but fall off in your home before they feed.

Remove any tick promptly. Do not try to burn the tick with a match or cover it with petroleum jelly or nail polish. Do not use bare hands. The best way to remove a tick is to grasp it with fine-point tweezers as close to the skin as possible and gently, but firmly, pull it straight out. Do not twist or jerk the tick. If tweezers are not available, grasp the tick with a piece of cloth or whatever can be used as a barrier between your fingers and the tick. You may want to put the tick in a jar of rubbing alcohol labeled with the date and location of the bite in case you seek medical attention and your physician wishes to have the tick identified.

Wash the bite area and your hands thoroughly with soap and water, and apply an antiseptic to the bite site.

Keep your grass mowed and keep weeds cut around your home.

Know the symptoms of tick-borne disease and consult with your physician if you have a rash or unexplained fever with flu-like illness (without a cough) during the month following a tick bite – these can be symptoms of a tick-borne disease.

Donate Blood This June

To maintain an adequate blood supply, Heartland Blood Centers, an independent medical organization serving 35 hospitals in a 12-county region in Illinois and Indiana, urges all area residents to donate the gift of life this June at local blood drives and Heartland centers.

As a thank you for sharing your good health during the critical summer months, Heartland would like to once again treat you to ice cream! Heartland's center locations and select blood drives will be giving all donors in July and August a coupon for free ice cream.

Your summertime donation is extra special to us because about 26% of our blood supply is collected from high school and college students and when they are away for the summer, Heartland relies heavily on community members to continue donating to ensure an adequate supply for patients in need. Heartland greatly appreciates your generosity to give the gift of life during this busy season.

To be a blood donor, individuals must be at least 17 years old or 16 with written parental permission, weigh at least 110 pounds, be symptom-free of cold, flu and allergies, and be in general good health. Donors who have traveled outside the United States within the past 12 months should contact Heartland at 1-800-7TO-GIVE to determine eligibility.

On Sunday, June 3rd from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. a blood draw will be held at St. Paul Lutheran Church, 4660 W. 94th St. To schedule an appointment, call Christopher at (708) 448-6144. All donors will receive a coupon for a free quart of Oberweis ice cream.

On June 11th from 4 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. a blood draw will be held at the Calvin Christian Reformed Church, 101st and Central. To schedule an appointment, call (708) 342-9771. All donors will receive a coupon for a free quart of Oberweis ice cream.

"Light The Way Home" For Missing Children

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich, along with members of the Illinois AMBER Alert Task Force, joined people throughout the state in observing May 25th, Missing Children's Day in Illinois.

In Illinois, an estimated 38,000 children are reported missing annually, with roughly 95% quickly located and returned safely home. Today, there are still slightly more than 2,000 children missing across the state.

May 25th has been observed as National Missing Children's Day since it was first proclaimed by President Ronald Reagan in 1983. This year, the 25th National Missing Children's Day highlighted a new campaign, "Take 25," to assist parents and others to teach children to be alert to potential threats and provide simple preventive steps that children can take to stay safe. "Take25" encourages families to take 25 minutes to talk with their children about safety and abduction prevention. A new web site, <http://www.take25.org>, has been established for the campaign that provides 25 safety tips and other information for parents, guardians, educators and the public.

"We know that teaching children about safety works. It is important that parents and others take the time to talk to their children about these issues. The new campaign is designed to provide information to make it easy for parents and others to teach their children about safety," said Ernie Allen, President and CEO of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. "There is no better way to mark the 25th Missing Children's Day than to launch an initiative designed to empower children and help keep them safe."

"A missing child is every parent's worst nightmare, and IDOT always stands ready and able to help in any way," said IDOT Acting Secretary Milt Sees. "IDOT is able to quickly communicate with thousands of motorists through our statewide system of dynamic message boards and we are very proud to play a part in the AMBER Alert system."

Veterans And Soldiers News

By Lori Taylor Ph: 708.388.2425

The American Legion and VFW members and their auxiliaries have been seen throughout the month of May on the street corners and at storefronts holding bouquets of poppies and soliciting funds for their annual poppy drive. You have probably read this poem many times, but I feel it is appropriate during this time of remembering those who died for our freedom.

In 1915, during the First World War, Lt. John McCrae witnessed the killing of his friend Lt. Alexis Helmer. In memory of his friend and all who died during the First World War he wrote "In Flanders Fields."

In Flanders Fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the Dead. Short days ago
We live, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders Fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe:
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders Fields.

Tammy Duckworth, Director of Veterans' Affairs, was recently honored in Washington, D.C. with the Hubert H. Humphrey Civil Rights Award. This is the civil rights community's highest honor. She was given the award for her long-standing public service, outstanding leadership and dedication to serving the country. Did you hear it on the news Monday night that she is considering running for Congress again?

She was one of the three recipients of the award; the other two were President Bill Clinton and Scholar John Hope Franklin.

In 1965, Tom Lonze was a combat squad leader for the U.S. Marine Corps. That same year, Curtis Colin was a forward air controller for the U.S. Air Force, locating strike targets. Both men served in Da Nang during the Vietnam War.

They did not know one another then, but Lonze depended on Colin for air support, which very well may have saved his life, and Colin knew the Marines were counting on him.

Today, the two men work side by side as Veterans Employment Representatives for the Illinois Department of Employment Security at the Pilsen Workforce Center operated by Mayor Daley's Office of Workforce Development (MOWD) at 1657 S. Blue Island. Both men say their shared history provides each with a sense of mutual respect in working with each other and for helping fellow veterans of all ages.

Thanks to Colin and Lonze, 1,172 are currently registered to obtain employment assistance services through the Illinois Department of Employment Security's Illinois Skills Match program. Approximately 9 percent are women. Thousands more have received employment services.

Chicago is home to approximately 117,000 veterans, according to the Chicago Commission on Human Relations, which opened a Veterans Resource Center last February at 10 S. Kedzie. In the same building, MOWD operates the Garfield Workforce Center under the guidance of Center Director Leigh Diflavy, a Vietnam vet and Veterans Employment Specialist.

The number of Pilsen Center sign-ups constantly changes as veterans obtain employment or as new veterans register, but Lonze estimates that 125 to 150 veterans seek services there each month.

In addition to providing career counseling to veterans, all of the centers teach basic job readiness and job search, resume writing, and interviewing skills. Beyond that, Colin and Lonze promote a special brand of self-promotion. "We teach them how to build a 30-second commercial on themselves," said Colin. "We encourage them to talk about their strengths in the military and as an employee. We teach them to talk about raises they received, promotions and why. We also teach them how to deal with the question that trips everyone up: 'Why do you think we should hire you?'"

To find out about employment services for veterans and/or to visit the nearest Chicago Workforce Center location, call (312) 746-7777. To register for support services provided by the City of Chicago Veterans Resource Center, call (312) 743-0703.

If you don't live near one of these centers, or are from the suburbs, I am sure if you call them they will direct you to the proper place to seek help.

Good-bye until next week. God bless you and your family and God bless America.

Rep. Murtha Named Porker Of The Month

Citizens Against Government Waste (CAGW) named Representative John Murtha (D-Pa.) the May Porker of the Month for throwing a temper tantrum and threatening his colleagues over a challenge to a $23 million pet project in the Intelligence Authorization Act for fiscal year 2008.

Rep. Murtha became infuriated by Rep. Mike Rogers' (R-Mich.) motion to challenge his earmark for the National Drug Intelligence Center (NDIC) in Johnstown, Pa. According to The Politico, Rep. Murtha, who is not on the Intelligence Committee but does chair the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee, confronted Rep. Rogers on the floor of the House and threatened to remove both any of his earmark requests in the defense appropriations bill and any other earmark "now and forever." Rep. Rogers responded, "This is not the way we do things here - and is that supposed to make me afraid of you?" To which Rep. Murtha arrogantly replied, "That's the way I do it!"

Rep. Murtha also assailed Rep. Todd Tiahrt (R-Kan.) for voting with Rep. Rogers against the NDIC during the Intelligence Committee markup of the bill. Rep. Murtha threatened a Boeing project in Rep. Tiahrt's district.

Rep. Rogers submitted a resolution charging that Rep. Murtha violated a House rule which forbids members from blocking earmarks based on how a colleague votes. The resolution seeks a formal reprimand from the House. Rep. Rogers said, "This is exactly why Americans are disgusted with out of control federal spending. In order to restore the faith of the American people in Congress, we must do better. We can't allow members to be threatened and intimidated when they stand up for hard-working taxpayers' money."

The Hill reported that Rep. Murtha also skirted the rules by submitting his required earmark certification late. The deadline was March 23, but Rep. Murtha's letter was only sent on May 1, the day before the bill mark up.

The Murtha outburst exemplifies how earmarks corrupt the legislative process. The NDIC, which is funded through the Drug Enforcement Administration, was cited last year by the House Government Reform Committee as "an expensive and duplicative use of scarce federal drug enforcement resources." CAGW's 2007 Prime Cuts and the President's budget both recommended that the NDIC should be eliminated. But it will probably be funded, not based on merit, but out of fear of Rep. Murtha's power as an appropriations cardinal.

Rep. Murtha sees Congress as a place where threats and power plays control spending decisions. While pushing the pork-filled 2006 defense appropriations bill through the House last year, Rep. Murtha unleashed his money-hungry wrath upon his colleagues, "If you vote against this bill, you won't have any input at all the next time." The congressman barrels through legislation while inserting whatever he can to serve himself and his district. Since 2005, Rep. Murtha has obtained a total of $26,877,250 in pork.

Rep. Murtha claims that when submitting an earmark he asks, "Is this worthwhile not only to your district but to the country?" However, it is difficult to ascertain what the country gets out of pork projects such as the $194,000 he secured for the construction of a new community center in Green County, Pa. in 2005.

For filling important intelligence and defense bills with pork and threatening anyone that challenges his authority and arrogance, CAGW names Rep. John Murtha its May 2007 Porker of the Month.

Citizens Against Government Waste is the nation's largest nonpartisan, nonprofit organization dedicated to eliminating waste, fraud, abuse, and mismanagement in government. Porker of the Month is a dubious honor given to lawmakers, government officials, and political candidates who have shown a blatant disregard for the interests of taxpayers.

Welcome Relay For Life Participants

Fifteen years ago, the first American Cancer Society Relay For Life event was held in Illinois. For those involved in Relay For Life it is more than just an event, it is an experience - a life-affirming opportunity to share hope with cancer survivors, caregivers and other supporters in the fight against cancer.

While participants in the American Cancer Society Relay For Life of Tinley Park applaud the successes made over the last 15 years, they are also busy getting ready to welcome teams, cancer survivors, community supporters and the general public to this year's event that is being held from 2 p.m. on June 2nd until 6 a.m. on June 3rd at Tinley Park High School.

Relay For Life brings together the community in the fight against cancer. Armed with comfortable shoes and an array of supplies needed for their overnighter, young and old alike will use the illuminated path to guide their feet and hearts as they walk around the clock. Throughout the night, teams of local businesses, schools, churches, community groups and families designate at least one team member at a time to walk or run on the track.

Relay For Life starts with local cancer survivors uniting to walk the first lap of the event. Then, the survivors are joined by family, friends and co-workers who have helped them through their battle with cancer.

A Luminaria Ceremony will be held after dark to honor cancer survivors and those who have lost their battle against cancer. Luminaria, bags filled with sand and a candle that bear the names of those being honored, line the track and continue to burn throughout the night to remind participants of the incredible importance of their contributions. Luminaria are available for purchase on-line at www.acsevents.org/relay/il/tinleypark or by calling Marshawn Brown at (708) 633-7770.

According to the Illinois Department of Public Health, more than 61,000 Illinois residents, or 168 Illinoisans a day, will be diagnosed with cancer this year and approximately 26,000 will die from the disease. In Cook County alone, more than 121,000 will be diagnosed and nearly 53,000 will die from cancer. Lung cancer is the leading cause of cancer related death in Illinois, followed by colon and rectal cancer.

As the American Cancer Society's signature fundraiser, Relay For Life helps fund programs such as Road to Recovery, a program that provides cancer patients with transportation to and from treatments; Look Good...Feel Better, which focuses on the inner and outer beauty of women going through chemotherapy and radiation treatments; Wig Bank, that offers free wigs, turbans and other head gear; Support for Recovery, which matches newly diagnosed patients with cancer survivors to help them cope with their diagnosis, treatment and recovery. Relay For Life also helps support the Society's Patient Navigation Services, which offers a place where cancer patients and their families can meet face-to-face with a social worker to discuss questions and concerns about diagnosis including subjects such as insurance support, clinical trials, financial assistance, family counseling and treatment.

For 15 years, Relay For Life of Illinois has been celebrating cancer survivors while honoring those in the community who lost their battle with cancer. For more information on how to get involved in Relay For Life, contact the American Cancer Society at (708) 633-7770 or visit www.acsevents.org/relay/il/tinleypark.

The American Cancer Society is dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem by saving lives, diminishing suffering and preventing cancer through research, education, advocacy and service. The Illinois Division has more than 120,000 volunteers and staff fighting cancer in the state. For the most up-to-date cancer related information and to join the fight against cancer, call 1-800-ACS-2345 or visit www.cancer.org.

Plans To Disenfranchise Chicago Local School Councils

An analysis released recently by South Side United Local School Council Federation indicates that the Chicago Board of Education's attack on Local School Council authority eliminates the voice of the largest concentration of African American, Latino and Asian elected officials in the nation. Outside Chicago, the state's 900 school boards are 93% white, the analysis shows.

"Research proves that an effective LSC is one component of those Chicago elementary schools that have substantially raised achievement," said Eben Credit, co-chair of South Side United and a member of the Julian High School Local School Council. "A recent study indicates that 83% of principals believe that LSCs contribute to school improvement. But it appears that the Chicago Board's slogan is 'If it ain't broke, break it'."

Arthur Berman and Miguel del Valle, two former chairs of the Illinois Senate Education Committee, have come out against any changes in the current system. City Clerk del Valle is opposing the plan to disenfranchise the parents and neighbors who voted for our current LSC members, even though del Valle was appointed by the mayor and ran for office as part of his team," said Eric Outten of South Side United.

Chicago's LSCs include about 2,150 African Americans, 1,250 Latinos, and 400 Asians who oversee schools serving nearly 400,000 students. "The proposals that the mayor and Board of Education have been shopping around with legislators would critically weaken the links between the schools and communities when we need everyone to work together to improve our schools and radically decrease violence," said Outten.

"Our analysis, which uses data from the Illinois Assn. of School Boards, indicates that in the rest of Illinois, the 900 school boards are made up of about 5,600 whites, but only 160 African Americans, 90 Latinos, and 130 Asians and others," said Outten. "The tiny number of African American, Latino, and Asian school board members in the rest of the state is far lower than the student enrollment by race and ethnic group in these school districts," said Outten.

"In 1988, the Chicago Board appointed all the principals," said Al Rogers, another

South Side United member, "and the school system was considered one of the worst in the nation." More recently, the Central Board has assumed control in schools placed on probation, but the achievement gains of these schools are small and achievement remains very low. Clearly, these schools need help, but the central administration hasn't helped them. In contrast, the schools with the most active LSCs have tended to choose effective principals and have shown the greatest achievement gains."

"We think that a major reason that the Board wants control of principal selection is to be able to dish out 560 four-year principal contracts that are worth more than $500,000 each in salary and benefits," said Rogers, who is also a member of the Morrill Elementary School LSC and Gage Park High School LSC. "Why would you hand more control over to the School Board and mayor, when three of the mayor's closest aides have just been convicted of rigging the hiring process at City Hall?"

"The new Chief of Staff for the Board Chair, Steve Washington, has said that the Board wants to put the Central Board in the driver's seat in selecting principals and will do it in the remaining days of the General Assembly, if they think they can pull it off," said Rogers. "The Chicago Board won't try to abolish LSCs. If they think they can get away with it, they will make small critical changes that gut our authority, like having the LSC submit three names of principal candidates, with the central administration making the final decision. Or the Board will have an LSC's principal renewal decisions they don't like reviewed by one of the school system's 'independent hearing officers.' However, the catch is that the 'independent hearing officers' are not independent. They are paid consultants to the Board's law department and never go against what the Board wants."

"South Side United is a coalition of active LSC members, parents and educators dedicated to improving schools on the south side through local leadership and educational improvement," said Marianne Bly, co-chair of South Side United and a member of the LSCs at Gallistel Language Academy and Washington High School.

Madigan's Bill To Combat Internet Child Pornography Passes House Committee

Attorney General Lisa Madigan recently said Illinois is well on its way to becoming the first state to establish a database that her office and other law enforcement could employ to track down and prosecute child pornographers.

Senate Bill 697, sponsored by Sen. A.J. Wilhelmi (D-Joliet) and Rep. Esther Golar (D-Chicago), was passed unanimously by the Illinois House of Representatives Judiciary Committee.

Senate Bill 697 features five key components:

It requires persons convicted of child exploitation offenses to provide their Internet Protocol (IP) addresses to law enforcement upon conviction.

It requires persons convicted of child exploitation offenses to register their IP addresses as part of the information provided to the sex offender registry.

It also requires that offenders on parole or monitored supervised release must consent to law enforcement searches of any computers, personal digital assistants (PDAs), cellular phones and other devices that are under their control and are capable of accessing the Internet or storing electronic files. Under the provisions of SB 697, these searches are authorized only to allow law enforcement to verify the offender's IP address and ensure compliance with other parole conditions.

SB 697 establishes the Illinois Cyber-Crime Location Database (ICLD) and authorizes the Attorney General to collect, store and use IP addresses to investigate and prosecute child pornographers.

SB 697 creates the offense of aggravated child pornography for those who possess, manufacture or distribute child pornography involving children under the age of 13.

The measure now moves to the full House for passage.

An IP address consists of a unique string of numbers assigned by an Internet provider to identify a particular Internet Account's entry point onto the Internet for the exchange of data. When an Internet user sends content via the Internet, that content carries with it the user's IP address. As a result, law enforcement investigators who obtain child pornography transmitted via the Internet may be able to determine the IP address used to send that pornography and follow the IP address directly to the specific Internet Account used to download or exchange the child pornography.

Help Consumers Fight High Gas Prices

With soaring gas prices squeezing many household budgets, AAA is helping consumers with tips on how to save gas.

When fuel prices rise to new record levels, motorists have an understandable interest in finding out why, and need information on what they can do to stay within the family budget, according to AAA.

To help consumers make better decisions regarding their fuel consumption AAA began posting localized, up-to-date fuel information on the Internet in 2000, and now has two Web sites devoted to fuel issues as well as other online tools for consumers.

Perhaps the best known site is AAA's Daily Fuel Gauge Report, www.aaafuelgaugereport.com. That site — a natural extension of the reports AAA has issued in some form since the 1970s — averages prices paid at 100,000 gas stations across the country and posts national, state and local averages daily for each of the major grades of gasoline.

AAA Fuel Cost Calculator, www.aaafuelcostcalculator.com, helps users understand and budget for the amount of fuel they are likely to use on a long-distance trip. After entering the trip's origin and destination, and the type of vehicle being driven, the site calculates the miles driven, the amount of fuel that will be used and the cost. It also can tell motorists the difference in fuel costs for various vehicles, helping them to determine which vehicle is most cost-effective to drive.

Earlier this year, AAA enhanced its online trip-planning tool, TripTik Travel Planner found at www.AAA.com, with location and fuel pricing information for more than 100,000 U.S. gas stations. Using the planner, travelers can note the locations of convenient fuel stops along their vacation-driving route.

AAA provides fuel-saving tips and advice to consumers through many local AAA club Web sites, www.AAA.com, as well as on its AAA Exchange site, www.AAA.com/publicaffairs, which includes fuel conservation information in a downloadable brochure titled AAA Gas Watcher's Guide."

Some tips from the guide include:

- Stick to a routine maintenance schedule. Keeping tires inflated, moving components properly lubricated and ignition and emission systems operating properly will help ensure maximum fuel efficiency and extend the life of your vehicle.
- If you own more than one vehicle, use the more energy-conserving vehicle as often as possible.
- Consolidate trips and errands to cut down on driving time and miles traveled. When possible, combine them with your daily commute.
- If you are going somewhere new, get a map first from an online source such as AAA TripTik, www.AAA.com. Getting lost wastes gas as well as time.
- Comparison shop by phone or online if possible before heading out on the road.
- Slow down. For most vehicles, fuel economy drops off significantly when traveling more than 60 miles per hour. As a rule of thumb, you can assume that each 5 mph you drive over 60 mph is like paying an additional 20 cents per gallon for gas.
- Avoid quick starts and sudden stops. They waste fuel, are harder on vehicle components and increase the odds of a traffic crash.
- Lighten your vehicle by cleaning out the trunk, cargo areas and passenger compartments. A heavier vehicle uses more fuel.
- Keep your eyes open for low fuel prices but don't waste gas driving to a distant filling station to save a few cents.

Fraudulent Use Of Name In Harmful Phishing Emails

The Better Business Bureau System would like to warn all businesses across the United States of renewed fraudulent Phishing emails using the BBB name and false BBB e-mail addresses to entice recipients to access potentially damaging hyperlinks and download viruses through attachments.

The attacks have not affected the computer system of any BBB nor have any of their data been compromised. As with most other Phishing attacks, the perpetrators have attempted to pose as a respected business to gain the confidence of Phishing victims in attempt to make them open and download potentially harmful documents and viruses. The BBB is working with authorities to thwart these malicious attacks.

President & CEO Steve J. Bernas reminds, "That a genuine e-mail from us will contain a first initial and last name of the person sending it along with Chicago.bbb.org." In addition, Bernas said, "The last scam of this type used the address of (any numerals) @bbb.org and had a Trojan Dropper with an executable file (.exe) in an attempt to open back-doors in the computers of the people who tried to open the file. Our BBB never sends .exe files. Most computer viruses are spread via .exe files and therefore should be suspected and not opened. The BBB Task Force is still attempting to determine which doors and for what purpose this was being done."

All recipients are advised that any e-mail from the consumer-complaints or (numerals) @bbb.org address is not coming from the BBB and should be considered counterfeit. The BBB strongly encourages recipients of any such message to delete the message immediately. To date, the Phishing attack has primarily affected businesses — recipients have accessed the counterfeit message through a business e-mail account.

The U.S. Secret Service's Electronic Crimes Task Force (ECTF), is active on the investigation, and is pursuing IP addresses used. Please continue to directly report instances of the Phishing attack to Special Agent Casey Stumpf, U.S. Secret Service/ECTF at (202) 406-8800.

If you have received an email which you deem may be illegitimate, do not open or download its attachments. Instead, forward any such email directly to the BBB at info@chicago.bbb.org so that further action may be taken.

The Phishing e-mail return address of (any numerals) does not exist and is being "spoofed." Spoofing occurs when an e-mail address is altered to appear as if the message originated from a legitimate source. This is a common practice for both spam e-mail and Phishing operations. The BBB does not use any departments in their addresses. It will always be from a BBB location, such as Chicago.bbb.org. It will never include a descriptive word before bbb.org, such as operations.bbb.org or complaint@bbb.org.

Phishing is a term coined by computer hackers, who use e-mail to fish the Internet hoping to "hook" recipients into giving their logins, passwords and/or other sensitive information. In all these scams, the Phisher first impersonates a legitimate company. In a typical scam, the phisher instructs recipients to click on a convenient link to receive or provide information that can then be used by phishers to access the recipient's sensitive personal or business information. For more information about Phishing and for tips to avert other scams, visit www.chicago.bbb.org

Large Number Of Identity Theft Is Relative Or Friend

In more than 60 percent of identity theft cases, a person's identity is stolen by a friend, relative or acquaintance, an unprecedented study by a Saint Xavier University professor has found.

Performing a kind of financial CSI, University researchers analyzed a sampling of nearly 30,000 "cold cases" of identity theft that occurred between 2000 and 2006 and were provided by the Chicago Police Department.

The Institute for Fraud Prevention funded the study, which was directed by William Kresse, assistant professor in Saint Xavier University's Graham School of Management and director of its graduate program in financial fraud examination and management. Kathleen Watland, assistant professor in the Graham School of Management, was also a researcher on the study.

"This has been a fascinating view into the mind of the identity thief," Kresse said. "While some results were expected, many were quite surprising."

Among the study's findings:

One in six identity theft cases were the result of a purse snatching, pick-pocketing, burglary or robbery. In less than 5 percent of the cases, the identity was stolen through the mail; Identity theft is an equal opportunity crime — it occurs fairly evenly across income levels; and The most popular use (more than 25 percent) of a victim's stolen identity was to acquire a credit card or to perpetrate some other credit card fraud. Kresse noted that acquiring a cell phone is an easy way for identity thieves and con artists to establish credibility to perpetrate other frauds.

Despite living in the age of high tech, computers and the Internet were used in less than 5 percent of the cases studied to steal a victim's identity.

"In spite of technological advances, we still find old-school methods to be preferred for identity theft," said John Lucki, a sergeant in the Chicago Police Department's financial crimes investigations section. Lucki assisted in researching the study and teaches in Saint Xavier's financial fraud examination and management program, which he helped design. "Information management, protection and security are the keys to protecting your financial identity, whether as an individual consumer or a business entity."

Victims of identity theft are usually younger adults, especially those between the ages of 20 and 44; and Women and African Americans are overrepresented as victims of identity theft. Hispanics, senior citizens, children and teenagers are underrepresented as victims of identity theft.

Saint Xavier University's financial fraud examination and management program is the country's only classroom-based MBA program in financial fraud examination and identity theft. The program combines elements of law enforcement, law, accounting and general business education.

After a nationwide search, the U.S. Air Force Office of Special Investigations chose Saint Xavier's program to train its special agents to detect procurement fraud. The Chicago Police Department, the second largest police force in the country, has also chosen Saint Xavier's program to train its officers in financial fraud and identity theft.

Kresse is chair of the higher education committee of the Association of Certified Fraud Examiners (ACFE), and international organization. He is also an attorney, a certified public accountant, a certified fraud examiner and certified forensic accountant, and a consultant in the areas of tax, probate, real estate, commercial litigation, criminal appeals, estate planning, and small business. He is an arbitrator with the Circuit Court of the Cook County Arbitration Program, and an election attorney for the Chicago Board of Election Commissioners.

Letter To The Editor

Editor:

In theory, an earlier Presidential Primary in Illinois will boost voter interest, registrations and turnout. However, as election administrators, we see the need to set earlier candidate-filing deadlines so that there is sufficient time to prepare the balloting apparatus.

In 2006, Illinois introduced Early Voting for those who want to cast ballots when and where they want, starting 22 days before the election. That year, Illinois also introduced Grace Period Voting, for those who need to register after the traditional cutoff, starting 28 days before the election. These were welcome reforms, but they essentially moved the election process ahead by a month without a change in the candidate-filing schedule.

What few have noticed is that if we move our primary to Feb. 5, 2008, Illinoisans will be casting ballots through Early Voting on Jan. 14th and Grace Period Voting on Jan. 9th - all weeks ahead of the Iowa caucus!

With more attention focused on Illinois as a high-profile election, we cannot afford a timetable that forces a last-minute scramble to program and test election equipment. The Presidential primary ballot is one of the longest and most complex. One court case could affect ballots across multiple counties or the entire state.

Additionally, this schedule needs to be fair to other electoral participants. For Grace Period and Early Voting to be viable options, the voters, civic groups and editorial boards need time to know who is on the ballot and where the candidates stand. Last-minute changes threaten to disenfranchise voters who use the Grace Period or Early Voting options.

Our concern is that candidates currently would file for office in November. In order to print absentee ballots by late December and settle the other ballots by early January, there would be little more than a month to handle any objections and court cases - all during weeks that include Thanksgiving, Hanukkah, Christmas and

New Year's Day. This is unfair to the many participants and increases the probability of balloting crises in our state.

We share the enthusiasm for moving Illinois into a mix of states that are likely to decide our presidential nominations. With the whole world watching, though, we need to adjust the front-end of the election schedule to better accommodate Grace Period Voting and Early Voting. That starts by changing state laws to set the deadlines 28 days earlier; nominating petitions by Oct. 8th and objections by Oct. 16th.

Sincerely,

Langdon D. Neal, Chairman, Chicago Board of Election Commissioners; David D. Orr, Cook County Clerk; Robert T. Saar, Executive Director, DuPage County Election Commission; Willard R. Helander, Lake County Clerk; Katherine C. Schultz, McHenry County Clerk; Carole A. Holtz, Executive Director, Aurora Election Commission

International School Lunch Program

U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) held a meeting with actress Drew Barrymore, marathon world record holder Paul Tergat, World Food Program's Executive Director, Josette Sheeran, and Representatives Jim McGovern (D-MA) and Jo Ann Emerson (R-MO), to discuss the McGovern-Dole International Food for Education and Child Nutrition Program and future efforts for the program's expansion. This program, named for former Senators George McGovern and Bob Dole, provides school lunches to children in impoverished countries. In March Durbin introduced a bill to reauthorize the McGovern-Dole program and provide it with additional funding so that it is restored to its original level of $300 million by 2012. Additional steps to increase funding for the program are being looked at as part of upcoming legislation.

"Millions of children around the world go hungry every day," Durbin said. "This program works to bring children to school and provide them with a nutritious meal, but we can do more. I'm happy to join Drew Barrymore and my friend Paul Tergat, as they bring attention to this vital program. I hope that their support of children around the world will spur us in Congress to provide the funding necessary to help as many children as we can."

The McGovern-Dole program provides donations of U.S. agricultural commodities and financial and technical assistance for school feeding and child nutrition in low-income, food deficit countries. The key objectives of the program are to reduce hunger and improve literacy, increase access to primary education, especially for girls, and to improve the health and learning capacity of pre-school children. Since McGovern-Dole became law in 2000, the program has provided meals to 26 million children in 41 countries and has boosted school attendance by 14 percent overall and by 17 percent for girls. The program has had a markedly positive effect on educational attainment and long-term development outcomes.

The Senate and House bills will ensure that minimum funding levels be provided each year and will allow the program to reach significantly more children. Increased resources will also ensure multi-year commitments that are necessary in building self-sustaining school feeding programs.

Barrymore became acquainted with the program during a recent trip to Africa. After seeing how important this program is to children around the world, she joined the Friends of the World Food Program as its celebrity partner. She spent the day on the Hill meeting with Members of Congress and urging the support of an expanded McGovern-Dole program.

One person who has participated in international school feeding programs is Paul Tergat, the current world record holder in the marathon. He ran the 26.2 mile race in 2:04:55. When he was a child living in Kenya, he received free lunches through a World Food Program. Without the program, Tergat says his parents were too poor and he would not have been able to go to school.

Do You Really Need A Lawyer?

Sometimes it's obvious. You've been accused of a crime or you are sued for damages in a civil suit, and you become very aware of the urgent need for professional legal help.

Other times, it's less clear. The fact is that legal assistance is often desirable, even essential, in situations which may have nothing to do with crime or a court action.

How do you determine if you need a lawyer? It depends on the issue. If you've received an ordinary parking ticket, you probably don't need legal help. But if you're facing a situation involving a significant amount of money or your personal rights are in jeopardy, it may be wise to seek out professional legal advice.

Common situations where you need a lawyer include the following:

When You Enter into a Contract. Any agreement, oral or written, which involves a consideration - that is, the exchange of something of value in return for some goods or service rendered - may be binding and enforceable. Generally, oral agreements should be avoided. Written agreements should be either prepared by or examined by a lawyer before you sign anything.

When Your Personal Status Changes. Marriage, the birth or adoption of children and moving to a different state may result in new or different legal and personal responsibilities. Your lawyer can help you plan for an meet new obligations, including the preparation of various legal documents which may be required.

When You Make Or Revise A Will or Estate Plan. The planning and drafting of your Will is an important legal matter. Your lawyer can plan your estate in a way that will be most beneficial to you and your heirs. In addition, your lawyer can suggest ways to organize your estate so that substantial savings in taxes and other estate costs are realized.

When You Buy Or Sell Real Estate. Buying and selling real estate is a huge financial transaction for most people. Your lawyer will review all legal documents necessary to the transaction and participate in the closing, in order to avoid legal pitfalls that could lead to losing your home.

When You Are Involved In An Accident. If you are involved in an accident of any kind resulting in personal injury or property damage you should immediately consult with a lawyer. Your lawyer may also be helpful if you believe that a doctor or other professional has committed malpractice.

Whenever Your Personal Rights Are Threatened. The law exists to protect your rights, but often you must take definite action to make those laws work for you. For example, you may need a lawyer if you've been fired from work or have faced discrimination or immigration problems.

When Financial Problems Arise. If you have tax problems or face personal or a business bankruptcy, your attorney can help you wade through the maze of legal issues towards a satisfactory solution.

When Organizing a Business. Your attorney can help with the formation of your business and assist in the ongoing concerns about employment law, workplace safety issues, immigration issues, intellectual property rights and other matters.

When You Are Arrested. If you are arrested for any reason or are accused of or questioned about your involvement in a crime, you should consult with an attorney immediately. If you cannot afford an attorney, one will be provided to you free of charge.

Daley Announces New Zoning Web Page

Cook County Commissioner John P. Daley is informing residents of unincorporated Cook County about a new, convenient web site for obtaining building permits, and information about contractors, who are licensed to work in unincorporated Cook County. On line applications are available for building, electrical, and plumbing permits, as well as detailed information and supporting documents to help explain the county's application process.

The complete text of the Cook County Zoning Ordinance, completely overhauled in 2001, is also available. Future plans are being considered to add the complete text of the Cook County Building Code to the web site.

"This convenient new web site will save residents time and money," said Commissioner Daley. "Some of these tasks used to require a trip downtown to process paperwork. Now, it can all be done from the comfort of your own home."

Governor Announces U Of I's Historic Lincoln Hall Project Will Be "Green"

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently announced that the planned $66.4 million rehabilitation of the University of Illinois' historic Lincoln Hall will be a model "green" project, and will be submitted for an official national designation of projects that place an emphasis on energy-efficient and environmentally-friendly design.

The Lincoln Hall project will be submitted for Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) Gold certification, which would place the project at the forefront of the national movement for sustainable energy practices.

LEED certification rates projects based on their energy and water use efficiency, indoor air quality, the use of recycled and local materials, design innovation, pollution reduction, erosion control, and the overall impact of the project on the surrounding environment. The Lincoln Hall project goals include the latest energy-saving climate control systems that would also improve indoor air quality; special insulation and window treatments to improve the building's energy efficiency while preserving its historic character; lighting systems that would conserve energy and improve the classroom environment; plumbing fixtures that would reduce water usage; and other measures that will be specifically addressed during the design phase of the project. These planned upgrades would not only save energy but also help cut emissions of greenhouse gases and air pollutants.

The State of Illinois has released $3 million for planning the Lincoln Hall renovation, with the balance of state funds, $55.1 million, included in the governor's proposed FY 08 budget. The University of Illinois is contributing $8.3 million to the project.

Lincoln Hall was built in 1911 and has had no major improvements since the west hall and theater were added in 1930. The planned $66.4 million construction project will reconfigure existing space for more classrooms and to meet current life safety codes. Instructional space will be concentrated on the first two floors and the backstage area of the theater, which has not been used for 25 years since the relocation of the Theater Dept. to the Krannert Center. The top two floors will be primarily faculty office space. The building will also receive upgrades to its electrical, lighting, heating, ventilation, air-conditioning, and computer network systems, as well as new flooring, ceilings and wall finishes.

Phosphorus Use Bill

Legislation sponsored by state Rep. Kevin Joyce (D-Chicago) to help keep water cleaner and better protect life in Illinois by banning the use of phosphorus cleaning agents passed the Senate recently.

"This legislation is an encouraging step towards making sure future generations are able to drink a glass of water or go fishing and swimming in the Illinois River without fear for their health," Joyce said. "Phosphorus is used in cleaning agents, yet it has managed to make our beautiful waterways dirty and dangerous. By banning the use of phosphorus we are protecting the people of Illinois."

Joyce's legislation creates the Regulation of Phosphorus Detergents Act. The bill prohibits the use, sale or manufacturing of cleaning agents containing more than 0.5 percent phosphorus. Joyce's bill sets a July 1, 2010, compliance deadline. The legislation also provides that the Illinois Pollution Control board may authorize the use of phosphorus in certain products under specific conditions.

Phosphorus has been linked to the lowering of oxygen levels in water. This in turn upsets the ecological balance in bodies of water and can potentially kill fish. Algae accumulation caused by phosphorus also contributes to pollution in Illinois' recreational waterways.

By prohibiting phosphorus and trying to limit future pollution, Joyce's bill also has the potential to save millions of dollars in infrastructure upgrades and operating costs for water reclamation plants in Illinois.

"The benefits of this legislation are clear," Joyce said. "We're saving money, cleaning our rivers and protecting the people of Illinois. We're moving closer to making sure that Illinoisans can look forward to clean, safe waterways for many years to come."

House Bill 819 unanimously passed the Senate and returns to the House for concurrence.

Homeland Security Education Act

U.S. Sens. Dick Durbin (D-IL), Daniel K. Akaka (D-HI) and Thad Cochran (R-MS) recently introduced the Homeland Security Education Act to strengthen instruction in science, math and foreign language in our nation's schools.

Reports show that prior to 9/11, the Intelligence Community was not prepared to handle the challenge of translating the volumes of foreign language counter-terrorism intelligence it had collected. The Intelligence Community faced backlogs in material awaiting translation, including papers providing details on foreign research and development in scientific or technical areas; a shortage of language specialists and language-qualified field officers; and a readiness level of only 30 percent in the most critical foreign languages.

The Homeland Security Education Act provides the framework to enhance our education system ensuring that our nation will have individuals possessing these critical skills in the future by:

- Awarding scholarships to students as an incentive for them to earn undergraduate degrees in science, technology, engineering, math and foreign language studies.
- Awarding scholarships to practicing scientists and engineers and those who are fluent in foreign languages to return to school to obtain their credentials for teaching in elementary or secondary schools.
- Encouraging public-private partnerships to improve science and math curricula; upgrade laboratory facilities; provide scholarships for students to study math, science or engineering at the university level; and establish internship and mentoring opportunities for students in grades K through 12.
- Developing cultural awareness and immersion programs in colleges and universities that combine science, technology and engineering instruction with foreign language to expand international understanding and scientific collaboration.
- Creating language learning pathways to facilitate proficiency in critical foreign languages from kindergarten through graduate school.

The Homeland Security Education Act also establishes programs to increase the number of teachers in the fields of science, math and foreign language through scholarships tied to service agreements and would improve foreign language teacher professional development through partnerships between local education agencies and institutions of higher education to hold summer workshops and provide distance learning.

Internet Safety Education

Joined by educators from Chicago Public Schools (CPS), CPS Board President Rufus Williams and area lawmakers, Attorney General Lisa Madigan recently unveiled new and concentrated measures designed to help protect today's school children from threats not known to school kids of just a few years ago: online predators and other criminals that use the Internet to perpetrate crimes against children.

At a morning news conference in the library and computer lab at Chicago's Drummond Elementary School, Madigan announced two important tools that will help parents and educators monitor how children use the Internet. Senate Bill 1472 calls on schools to provide yearly Internet safety education to students in grades K through 12. In addition, Madigan announced that her office would coordinate the distribution to schools throughout the state educational videos that promote Internet safety.

Introduced into the General Assembly last month, SB 1472, the Internet Safety Education Act, sponsored by Sen. Dan Kotowski and Rep. David Miller, encourages Illinois schools to adopt an age-appropriate Internet safety curriculum. Intended to serve as a tool to assist education, SB 1472 identifies several key topics for instruction including safe and responsible use of the Internet, online predators, identity theft, cyber-bullying and harassment, and illegal downloading.

Madigan also announced that her office will coordinate the distribution of Think Before You Post, a new public service advertising (PSA) campaign created by NCMEC and the U.S. Dept. of Justice in cooperation with the Ad Council. The PSAs are designed to raise awareness about the prevalence of online sexual exploitation and to help parents, guardians and teens better protect themselves from online predators.

Approximately 34 percent of children ages 10 to 17 post their real names, telephone numbers, home addresses or the names of their schools online where anyone could see, according to a recent study conducted by University of New Hampshire researchers for NCMEC.

Madigan commended Superintendent Arne Duncan and the Chicago Public Schools for partnering with her office in making the Think Before You Post PSA available to over 500 grammar and high schools throughout the city of Chicago.

Madigan used the occasion to stress the ever-changing virtual world and how online predators have new mediums to reach potential victims and perpetrate crimes against children.

According to a 2005 report by the Pew Internet and American Life Project, 87 percent of teens between the ages of 12 and 17 are online.

In 2006, 55 percent of teens reported use of social networking web site of which 48 percent reported visiting such web sites at least daily.

According to NCMEC, approximately 13 percent of youth received a sexual solicitation or approach over the Internet within the preceding year.

Keeping Bones Safe For Life

It's never too early to think about bone loss. The good news is that, partly thanks to the large number of television ads on the topic, along with improved methods of detecting early-stage bone loss, more people today are paying attention to their bone health. And it's a good thing. The National Osteoporosis Foundation reports that an estimated 44 million Americans, or more than half (55 percent) of those 50 years of age or older, are at risk for osteoporosis. And it's not just women who are at risk. Although women are four times more likely than men to develop the disease, men also suffer from osteoporosis.

Once a woman reaches menopause, at about the age of 51, she can lose up to 30 percent of her skeleton within three years. So says noted expert Warren Levy, Ph.D., president and CEO of Unigene Laboratories, one of the companies on the forefront of the search for effective new drugs that can treat osteoporosis.

Dr. Levy and other experts recommend the following to prevent bone loss:

- After menopause, undergo a bone scan every one to two years.
- Check your family's osteoporosis history to see if you may be at risk.
- Incorporate sufficient doses of calcium and vitamin D into your daily diet, including dairy products and dark-green vegetables.
- Avoid smoking and the excessive consumption of alcohol and caffeine.
- Start - or continue - a weight-bearing exercise program.

"The longer we live, the more important bone health becomes. Fortunately, if osteoporosis does develop, there are treatments available," says Dr. Levy.

Both the American Assn. of Endontists (endontists are the specialists who perform root canals) and the Food and Drug Administration recently issued warnings that there may be a link between bisphosphonates - a class of drugs commonly used to treat osteoporosis - and jaw decay. Bisphosphonates, however, are not the only method of treatment available.

Dr. Levy advises that alternative osteoporosis drugs exist; for example, nasal calcitonin products, which have a long history of safety and efficacy. Calcitonin is a naturally occurring hormone that helps the body regulate calcium levels. It is found in products such as Fortical. Calcitonin-based products have been used to treat osteoporosis for more than 30 years with very few side effects and can be taken by patients with any other medication. This is an important feature for elderly patients. Nasal calcitonin products have been shown to decrease fracture risk by 40 to 60 percent and also help maintain proper bone density.

According to professionals, the benefits afforded by any osteoporosis drug stop unless you continue to take it, so it will need to be taken for life. "Be sure that whatever you are taking is not only effective but also safe for long-term use," Dr. Levy advises.

Janik Named To IHSA All-State Academic Team

St. Rita High School Senior Andrew Janik (pictured) of Oak Lawn recently was one of only 26 high school seniors named to the Illinois High School Association (IHSA) 2006-07 All-State Academic Team.

"Selection for the All-State Academic Team is a tremendous recognition of a student's academic performance, and also of the student's demonstration of character and citizenship," said IHSA Executive Director Marty Hickman. "Competition for this recognition is intense and selection certainly recognizes team members as truly outstanding young people."

Nominations for 400 seniors were submitted. To be eligible for consideration for selection, a student in an IHSA member school must have a minimum Grade Point Average (GPA) of at least 3.5 on a 4.0 scale after the seventh semester. As St. Rita's Salutatorian for the Class of 2007, Janik has accumulated many additional achievements that include the Presidential Education Award, Illinois Merit Recognition Scholarship, the Catholic Heritage Award, and scholarships from six universities, one of them being the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign College of Business Honors Scholarship, where he will attend next fall. He has been on St. Rita's Gold Honor Roll his entire high school career and currently maintains a 4.70 cumulative grade point average. Athletically, Janik membered St. Rita's Golf Team and Soccer Team, where he received numerous accolades and awards.

All-Nighter Raises Over $313,000

Thousands of students put up their feet after walking this past weekend to raise more than $313,195 as part of the American Cancer Society Relay For Life celebrations at Oak Lawn Community High School and Relay For Life of District 230 at Carl Sandburg High School in Orland Park. Students Oak Lawn Community High School raised $62,150 and District 230, students from Sandburg, Stagg and Andrew High Schools event raised $251,045.

More than 470 students from Oak Lawn Community High School and 1,800 students from District 230 participated in the overnight events, each of whom designated at least one team member at a time to walk or run on a track throughout the event. A special Luminaria ceremony, held during both of the American Cancer Society Relay For Life events remembered those lost to cancer and honored those who have survived. Over 1,600 people were honored with Luminaria bags that were placed around the tracks all night long.

"The students and communities really demonstrated a tremendous amount of spirit and generosity this weekend," said Tim Bergman, representative from the American Cancer Society for the Relay for Life of District 230. "With more than 125 cancer survivors at our side, we walked around the clock in honor of them and memory of those in our community who lost their battle with cancer."

According to the Illinois Department of Public Health, more than 61,000 Illinois residents will be diagnosed with cancer this year and approximately 26,000 will die from the disease.

"The money raised at Relay For Life celebrations will help fund American Cancer Society programs that educate our community on early detection and treatments, advocate local health issues and fund research to, one day, find a cure for this disease," said Bergman.

Relay For Life also helps fund programs such as the Society's Patient Navigation Services, which is designed to fill a critical void in health care and social services by acting as a full-service navigator to anyone touched by cancer.

The American Cancer Society is dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem by saving lives, diminishing suffering and preventing cancer through research, education, advocacy and service. The Illinois Division has more than 120,000 volunteers and staff fighting cancer in the state. For the most up-to-date cancer related information and to join the fight against cancer, call 1-800-ACS-2345 or visit www.cancer.org.

Education Caucus Announces Initiatives

The Illinois General Assembly's Education Caucus has announced its support of three legislative priorities for this legislative session. These initiatives involve streamlining education programs, ensuring a faster turnaround of statewide testing results, and improving special education programs. Senator Ed Maloney (D-Chicago) and Representative Bob Pritchard (R-Sycamore), co-chairs of the education caucus, announced these priorities following the caucus meeting.

"The education caucus was formed to raise the awareness of the importance of the future of education in Illinois and examine issues affecting education. The caucus feels that the passage of these priorities is the best means to ensure all students have access to a quality education," said Maloney.

Over 80 percent of the 81 member caucus agreed to endorse the bills. The initiatives the caucus is endorsing are HB 1648, which creates a P-20 Council that will work to align educational programs from pre-K through grade 20; HB 1652, which will require reporting state test results or scores in the same year tests are given, in order to ensure more effective curriculum changes; and HJR 24, which creates a task force to study special education funding, one of the most expensive programs in education.

"It was a very productive meeting and there is clearly bi-partisan support in the caucus to increase funds for education and to prioritize the needs of the educational community," said Maloney.

Rep. Pritchard added "supporting these bills is the first step for the caucus in studying and advocating for important initiatives. Our working groups focus on the issues and advance ideas through consensus."

The legislation has passed the House and now awaits Senate approval.

The education caucus was created in January 2007 with the goal of forming a stronger voice for education at all levels in the Illinois General Assembly. It is a bi-partisan coalition of members from both the Senate and House of Representatives who believe improving the quality of education should be a priority in Illinois.

New Exhibit

Attention Chicagoans! Do you remember the "Bobs," "Aladdin's Castle," or even the "Rotor"? Do the words "Sans Souci," "Joyland," or "Luna Park" bring back memories of your first kiss or cotton candy? If any of the previously mentioned items make you pause and reflect on happier times, the Chicago Public Library happily takes you back in time with the opening of a new exhibition entitled, Fun For All! Chicago's Amusement Parks.

Fun For All is a creative collection of artifacts, photographs, documents, postcards and other memorabilia that chronicle the fascination, history and variety of Chicago's amusement parks: from the 1893 Worlds Fair to Chutes Park to Riverview Park to Kiddieland to Funtown. Fun For All is a celebration of Chicago's amusement parks. The exhibit presents descriptive sections on the 1893 Columbian Exposition (World's Fair); Chicago's early neighborhood amusement parks; and an entire wing of memorabilia from Chicago's Riverview Park, including more than 15 models of the rides and attractions that made Riverview Park a fun-time frolic for friends and family.

The exhibition will be on display June 16, through Sept. 14 in Exhibit Hall, 9th Floor at the Harold Washington Library Center.

Brother Rice Seniors Connect With Alumni

Seventy-eight of the 135 Brother Rice High School seniors, representing more than half of the Class of 2007, who purchased STAT (Seniors Today Alumni Tomorrow) polo shirts gather in front of the school.

The Hon. Thomas Fr. Carmody Jr., Presiding Judge of the Bridgeview Courthouse and a 1969 Brother Rice graduate, presented the idea of STAT to the Brother Rice Alumni Association in 2003. Since then, participation has shown increased momentum each year as the special privilege of wearing the shirts on Mondays in lieu of a shirt and tie is a noticeable display of unity with alumni.

Madigan Reaches Agreement With ChoicePoint

Attorney General Lisa Madigan recently joined the attorneys general of 43 other states to announce a settlement with ChoicePoint, Inc. to resolve allegations that the company failed to adequately maintain the privacy and security of consumers' personally identifiable information that was in its control.

ChoicePoint, a Georgia-based company, is a provider of identification and credential verification services to businesses, government and non-profit organizations. Among its business activities, ChoicePoint collects, maintains and distributes consumers' personally identifiable information. In February 2005, ChoicePoint announced that criminals, posing as legitimate businesses, gained access to consumers' personally identifiable information. In the wake of these crimes, ChoicePoint mailed more than 145,000 notices to consumers across the country whose information may have been viewed or acquired by the criminals.

Madigan said ChoicePoint would make significant and ongoing changes in the way that it credentials new customers who have access to personally identifiable information.

For the first time, the data broker has agreed to safeguard publicly available information using the same credential methods as it uses to safeguard financial information that is protected by law. Certain sensitive publicly available information, including Social Security numbers, will now receive greater protection.

As part of the settlement, ChoicePoint will follow newly enacted procedures designed to verify the legitimacy of a customer applying for access to personal information. ChoicePoint will closely evaluate customer applications at a number of different stages before granting access to the information it maintains. These steps will help to ensure that personal information does not fall into the wrong hands.

ChoicePoint will pay $500,000 to the various states. To help recoup the cost of leading this investigation over a period of two years, Madigan said Illinois would receive $90,000 as its share of the settlement.

In January 2006, ChoicePoint settled its case with the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) and paid $5 million into a pool to be used to reimburse eligible consumers. Consumers pay file claims pursuant to the FTC Order to recover out-of-pocket expenses for identity theft that resulted from the ChoicePoint breach. If consumers meet the eligibility requirements, they can submit the claim form for consideration. The deadline to submit a claim form to the FTC is June 22nd. More information is available at <http://www.ftc.gov/bcp/online/cases/choice-point/index.shtml>.

Sheriff's Police Raid Alsip Flea Market

An undercover investigation into the sale of illegally produced designer gym shoes led to a weekend raid of an Alsip flea market, the confiscation of more than 2,000 pairs and the arrest of 10 people, the Office of Cook County Sheriff Thomas J. Dart announced.

Cook County Sheriff's Police Special Operations officers raided the Swap-O-Rama Flea Market, 4350 W. 129th St. in Alsip, on Saturday, June 2nd about 10:30 a.m. seizing 2,476 pairs of counterfeit Nike gym shoes from 10 separate vendors. The seized shoes, for both men and women, were being sold in a variety of styles. Additionally, officers confiscated shoes from two booths that were abandoned shortly after the raid began.

Cook County Sheriff's Police Special Operations officers initiated an investigation at the flea market in early May following numerous complaints of counterfeit shoes being sold there. Undercover Special Operations officers made several purchases of the gym shoes, paying between $60 and $70 per pair for counterfeit shoes that, if legitimate, normally retailed for $125 and higher.

The following vendors were taken into custody during the raid and each charged with one count of counterfeiting trademarks. Their bond was set at $1,000. They are: Christian Lane, 18740 Maple Lane, Country Club Hills, 125 pairs seized; Jeffrey Hudson, 6003 S. Artesian, Chicago, 86 pairs; Awni Daoud AlQuar, 5619 W. 87th Pl., Oak Lawn, 197 pairs seized; Keenan M. Mayo, 7634 S. Marshfield, Chicago, 125 pairs seized; Paul N. Ebelechukwu, 8212 S. Shore Drive, Chicago, 169 pairs seized; Darrell Stewart, 12212 S. Lowe, Chicago, 964 pairs seized; Valeria Walker, 19821 Park Ave., Lynwood, 109 pairs seized; Majed NR Shoman, 8346 W. 95th St., Hickory Hills, 39 pairs seized; Marcus I. Vazant, 901 E. 104th, Chicago, 73 pairs seized; Randle Scroggins, 550 S. Nelson, Kankakee, 354 pairs seized.

All offenders are slated to appear in 5th District Circuit Court in Bridgeview on July 16th in Room 105 at 10:30 a.m.

Letter To The Editor

Dear editor,

The Humane Society of the United States would like to thank and congratulate U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-ILL.) for passing legislation in the U.S. Senate to protect the food supply for people and their pets.

Following the massive pet food recall, Senator Durbin introduced the Human and Pet Food Safety Act (S. 1274), which would require the Food and Drug Administration to set processing and ingredient standards for pet food, strengthen labeling requirements, establish an early warning system and mandatory recall authority for contaminated human and pet food products, improve oversight of foreign foods, and take other steps to help prevent needless deaths and illnesses. The Senate swiftly approved, by a vote of 94 to 0, similar legislation that Senator Durbin offered as an amendment to a broad bill regarding the Food and Drug Administration.

Two-thirds of American households have pets, and these members of our families deserve safe and unadulterated food, as do people. We are grateful to Senator Durbin for working to ensure food safety for all, and we urge the full Congress to quickly pass this legislation.

Sincerely,

Michael Markarian

A Life Preserver For Drowning Trees

Are your trees drowning? Heavy winter snows and a wetter-than-normal spring in much of the country have left many trees sitting in soil saturated with water. Too much water sitting at the base of a tree can cause myriad problems. A traditional life preserver might not be the answer for these leafy giants, but a little knowledge – and knowing where to seek assistance – can help trees survive spring thaw.

Too much water can be as bad for trees as too little water. While some trees are suited to survive occasional floods, most are not. In addition, as a tree becomes older, its ability to adapt to abrupt environmental changes decreases.

"Trees must maintain a proper water balance," says Tchukki Andersen, staff arborist with the Tree Care Industry Association. "Although most trees can withstand moisture conditions from very dry to very wet for short periods of time, continued extremes can cause serious problems, depending on the tree species," Andersen explains. Some species – such as some oaks, pines and junipers – have adapted to survive drier conditions. Trees that grow along rivers (such as willows, poplars, cottonwoods and sycamores) and trees that grow in or around swamps and ponds (such as red maples, gums and pond cypress) can also grow in wet conditions.

Flood injury occurs when soil becomes saturated with water. There doesn't need to be an actual flood to cause flood injury.

Flood injury is usually expressed through changes in the foliage. One symptom in particular, chlorosis, is commonly caused by flood injuries. Chlorosis is the yellowing of leaves caused by a decrease in the amount of chlorophyll (green pigment) in the leaves. This symptom can look like a symptom of a disease but is often caused by non-disease problems, such as excessive water. A professional arborist can determine if chlorosis is caused by a pest (which can be controlled), or by water damage.

When flood conditions are prolonged, root dieback occurs. During root dieback, soil is so saturated that there is not enough oxygen available to the tree roots. Without the proper balance of oxygen and carbon dioxide, roots can't survive. Eventually the tree is not able to absorb adequate moisture, despite the flood condition. The tree will exhibit symptoms similar to leaf scorch, where a tree's leaves turn brown and die due to a lack of moisture in the leaves.

Symptoms of flood injury, in the order that they develop on the foliage, are:

- slight wilting or drooping of the foliage;
- yellowing and browning (necrosis) of leaf edges; and
- browning in the center of the leaf.

The symptoms usually start at the top of the tree or on the ends of branches, and spread throughout the entire crown. The symptoms are often more severe on the side of the tree facing the prevailing winds.

The best prevention for this problem is to avoid planting flood-intolerant trees in areas that are frequently flooded. There are a variety of wetland trees and shrubs that can be planted instead.

There are not many practical short-term solutions other than improving drainage. Whenever changes in drainage are made, the impact to all the affected landscape and landscape plants needs to be considered. Avoid creating problems for flood-tolerant plants by providing drainage for intolerant plants.

If you are unsure about your tree's health, consult a professional arborist who will treat the causes of tree health problems. Homeowners who would like a professional arborist to assess their trees should contact the Tree Care Industry Association (TCIA), a 69-year-old public and professional resource on trees and arboriculture. It has more than 2,000 member companies who recognize stringent safety and performance standards and who are required to carry liability insurance. TCIA has the nation's only Accreditation program that helps consumers find tree care companies that have been inspected and accredited based on: adherence to industry standards for quality and safety; maintenance of trained, professional staff; and dedication to ethics and quality in business practices. An easy way to find a tree care service provider in your area is to use the "Locate Your Local TCIA Member Companies" program. You can use this service by calling 1-800-733-2622 or by doing a ZIP code search at www.treecaretips.org.

Devastating Fire Doesn't Stop Service To Customers

Before 7 a.m. on Monday, May 14th, the day after a five-alarm fire burned for 10 hours and sent towering clouds of black smoke into the air, Fox Home Center in Alsip was back in business. Although the store and offices were destroyed, the office and salespeople were working out of a mobile office and picnic tables at the site.

"Employees came to work early on Monday – some even came Sunday evening – and have helped get the makeshift operations working and serving customers," says Rod Laird, who co-founded the business with his late brother Jack in 1961. "Some former employees have stopped by with offers to help, including several who just picked up brooms and started cleaning up."

Even vendors, customers and neighbors have brought donuts and good wishes, and the 115 Bourbon Street restaurant in nearby Merrionette Park surprised employees with a full buffet lunch. And one customer came in during the week to buy a composite deck and railing system because she had liked dealing with her salesman and wanted to support a business that showed concern for its employees.

Laird especially wants to thank the 20 fire departments and special units that were on the scene battling the flames, as well as the honesty of a fireman who noticed a cash register drawer had opened and picked up the contents and handed them to a member of the family. Furthermore, the fire departments were able to save the north building where products are manufactured, as well as most of the cedar and other deck and fence materials. The large outdoor display of sample decks, fences, play sets and storage sheds also remains.

Customers, vendors and even business neighbors are amazed that the lumberyard and the sales center were open for business and making deliveries at 6:30 a.m. Monday morning. "This was only possible due to the hard work of the 47 employees, many of whom have worked here for over 25 years," according to Laird.

In spite of competition from the big box stores that have come and gone, Fox Home Center has remained due to its knowledgeable and attentive staff; expansion into moulding; its expertise in kitchen design; and expansion into the manufacturing of low maintenance vinyl fencing, railings, pergolas and arbors offered in a variety of colors.

Fox Home Center plans to rebuild and remain an "institution" in the south suburbs. For further information, contact Mike or John Laird at (708) 636-3500.

Citizens Against Government Waste Releases Report On Biogenics

Citizens Against Government Waste (CAGW) recently released its report Biogenics: What They Are, Why They Are Important, and Their Economic Value to Taxpayers and Consumers. The report estimates that if the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) was provided with the appropriate statutory framework to approve generic forms of biotech drugs for the marketplace, these drugs could save taxpayers and consumers $43.2 billion between 2011 and 2020.

"Biogenics hold great promise for taxpayers and consumers," stated Tom Schatz, president of CAGW. "Biotech therapies have improved the lives of millions of Americans. Unfortunately, they can be very expensive. Some can even cost an individual $10,000 per year. But a thriving biogeneric industry would encourage competition, bring down prices, and stimulate more research."

Many biotech drugs are losing, or have lost, their patent protection, but most biotech drugs are regulated differently by the FDA than chemically-based drugs. Therefore, a generic drug company could not follow the abbreviated approval process under the Hatch-Waxman Act to produce a biogeneric drug.

"The FDA believes they need a statutory framework to allow them to approve a biogeneric for the marketplace. Legislation has been introduced that would create such a pathway and it should be considered by Congress," remarked Schatz.

CAGW has long supported a vibrant generic drug market and has resisted attempts by brand name companies to use the government to create roadblocks and interfere with the marketplace in order to restrict patients' access to generic drugs.

"Regrettably, the biotech industry is putting up a fight to stop an abbreviated approval process from being developed. Some members of Congress are actively looking to force price controls on both the biotech and pharmaceutical industries to obtain lower prices. This would not get less expensive therapies in the marketplace, and it would destroy our nation's vital pharmaceutical industry, just as price controls have done in Europe. The best approach is the creation of an accelerated pathway to bring biogenics to the market that protects patients while balancing the financial needs of brand name and generic drug companies, just as Hatch-Waxman has done," concluded Schatz.

Citizens Against Government Waste is a non-partisan, nonprofit organization dedicated to eliminating waste, fraud, mismanagement and abuse in government.

Durbin Urges Agriculture Committees To Strengthen Food Stamp Program

Recently, U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL) sent a letter to the leadership of both the Senate and House Agriculture Committees urging them to strengthen nutrition programs, most notably the Food Stamp Program, in the upcoming reauthorization of the Farm Bill. Durbin was joined by members of the Illinois congressional delegation in sending the letter to Senate Chairman Tom Harkin (D-IA) and Ranking Member Sen. Saxby Chambliss (R-GA) and the House Chairman Collin Peterson (D-MN) and Ranking Member Bob Goodlatte (R-VA).

Noting the impact of the Food Stamp Program in Illinois, Durbin and the others wrote: "The Food Stamp Program is an essential part of the safety net for individuals struggling to meet their most basic needs...The program is critical to Illinois, where more than 1.2 million people rely on food stamps every month. In 2006, the program generated more than $1.5 billion into the state's economy, benefiting farmers, grocers, small businesses, and communities throughout our state."

The letter takes note of three areas where the program can be strengthened and asks the committee specifically to:

*Adjust the food stamp benefit levels, which are currently at $1.14 per person per meal in Illinois.

*Review current eligibility restrictions, which currently exclude legal immigrant adults and unemployed childless adults.

*Streamline and simplify program rules in order to ease barriers to participation, which currently prevent eligible households from accessing nutritional assistance.

Signatories to the letter include Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL), Reps. Jerry Costello (D-IL), Danny Davis (D-IL), Jesse Jackson Jr. (D-IL), Daniel Lipinski (D-IL), Bobby Rush (D-IL), Jan Schakowsky (D-IL), Rahm Emanuel (D-IL) and Phil Hare (D-IL).

All Points Southwest

By THOMAS E. GAVIN

Governor Rod Blagojevich has certainly got his hands full trying to craft a multi-billion dollar State budget which members of his Democratic party and Republican party faithful must pass with a three-fifths super majority. Since both the House and Senate have moved into overtime sessions, rumors of compromise are rampant. One can only hope that cooler heads will prevail and our elected officials will construct a budget that addresses the critical needs of the elderly and poor, non or under insured, and hospital, energy and educational questions that compound by the week. We will comment as the budget process unfolds.

Prior to the budget nightmare, Gov. Blagojevich signed a variety of legislative initiatives designed to improve our lives. We will relay a few of them now.

Equine lovers will appreciate legislation which bans the slaughter of horses in Illinois for human consumption. House Bill 1711 bans importing or exporting horse meat if any horse meat will be used for human consumption.

"It's past time to stop slaughtering horses in Illinois and sending their meat overseas. I'm proud to sign this law that finally puts an end to this practice," Gov. Blagojevich said.

The Governor announced his support for this legislation, sponsored by State Rep. Robert Molaro (D-Chicago) and State Senator John Cullerton (D-Chicago), after hearing from advocates in April. Violations of the new state law are punishable by up to 30 days in jail and a fine of $1,500.

"There is no domestic market for horse meat and, therefore, no need for this practice to continue in Illinois," Agriculture Director Chuck Hartke said. "Meat from the slaughtered horses is being shipped overseas to places like Belgium, France and Japan."

Illinois is home to the sole remaining horse slaughterhouse in the United States, Cavel International in DeKalb.

Likewise, the Governor has awarded $2.7 million for the purchase of 52 ramp and lift equipped vehicles that will help elderly persons and persons with disabilities to 28 local government and social service agencies in Northeastern Illinois. To date, $11.4 million from IDOT (Illinois Dept. of Transportation) has been awarded to 146 agencies statewide.

The funding is allocated based on a competitive application process by IDOT's Division of Public and Intermodal Transportation, which is responsible for supporting public and specialized transportation efforts throughout the state.

Almost $1.4 million of the funding comes directly from the state, with the remainder coming from federal matching grants.

The following local agencies received an award in IDOT District 1: Catholic Charities of Archdiocese of Chicago (1), $52,873; City of Country Club Hills (1), $81,747; Misericordia Home (1), $46,866; Park Lawn School & Activity Center (2), $85,437; Roseland Community Hospital Association (1), $46,866; and South Suburban Training & Rehab. Services (1), $52,873.

Moving to an equally important area of interest, All Points has been contacted by Dr. Mary Hession, Coordinator of The Literacy Zone, a reading tutorial program for students in grades two through five, which is available this summer through Governors State University's Graduate Program in Reading.

"This is a one-on-one program that brings students experiencing reading problems together with teachers who have the skills to help them," stated Dr. Hession. "We have a tremendous response to this program. It is very gratifying to see how our students' reading skills improve."

Students meet on campus with certified, experienced teachers enrolled in the Master of Arts Reading Program at GSU. Morning and afternoon sessions meet Monday through Thursday, from July 9th through July 30th. Morning sessions are from 9 to 11 a.m. Afternoon sessions are from 1 to 3 p.m. Enrollment is limited.

There is a $100 registration fee. However, $30 will be refunded to the parents/guardians of those students who complete the program with good attendance and return all Literacy Zone materials. The fee also includes daily snacks and a pizza party on the last day. For information call (708) 534-4129 or email m-hession@govst.edu.

On Saturday, June 16th, Drs. James Sylora and Paul Y. Song will present "Options for Prostate Conditions" during a special program for men, from 7:30 to 11:30 a.m., held in Café 95 at Little Company of Mary Hospital and Health Care Centers. The event includes comprehensive blood testing to detect diabetes, gout, kidney and liver disorders, and blood cholesterol levels. Screenings for height, weight, oximetry and blood pressure, a colon cancer kit to take home, and a continental breakfast are included. There is a modest fee of $50, considering the actual value of the tests is $350. Reservations are required, and space is limited. Call (708) 423-5774 for information.

Registrations are winding up for the 26th annual MS Bike Tour, a cycling event to help raise money to find a cure for multiple sclerosis. Presented by the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, Greater Illinois Chapter, the MS Bike Tour is a two-day cycling adventure along Illinois' most picturesque farm roads. The event starts on the road June 23rd and 24th as the tour winds its way through DeKalb County.

Riders can opt for a 35, 75 or 100-mile route for each day of cycling. Visit www.rideforms.org to register for the ride and check out route maps, tips for riding, lists of the weekend's festivities and more. As Illinois' largest bicycling charity fundraiser, money raised at the MS Bike Tour supports local MS research and programs serving an estimated 20,000 people in Illinois living with multiple sclerosis. For information call (312) 421-4500.

Catholic Charities will celebrate their 10th Annual Golf Invitational and its 90th Anniversary year with over 500 friends at Cog Hill in Lemont on Wednesday, July 25th at 10 a.m. This is one of the largest golfing events in Chicagoland.

Giannoulas: Commit New Revenue To Pension Debt

Illinois State Treasurer Alexi Giannoulas' office will introduce legislation that guarantees all money generated from his office's unclaimed property division will go toward paying down the state's unfunded pension liability.

Currently, unclaimed property revenue offsets the state's annual pension contribution that comes from general revenue funds and other sources.

Giannoulas wrote the legislation after his office transferred a record $333 million to the state for pension purposes in April.

The state expected a transfer of just $187 million from unclaimed property. Instead of using the $146 million windfall to pay down unfunded pension liability, the state is holding onto the money to offset its scheduled pension payment next year.

Under Giannoulas' legislation, state officials must commit this year's property windfall to pay down the state's $40 billion unfunded pension liability.

In addition, the legislation requires all future revenue generated from unclaimed property to go toward unfunded pension liability instead of offsetting the state's annual payment to the pension system.

Giannoulas used a credit card analogy to explain the change. He compared the state's $40 billion in unfunded pension liability to a high credit card balance and the state's annual pension contribution to a minimum monthly payment.

"Currently, unclaimed property funds are used to pay a portion of the minimum monthly credit card payment. If there is a windfall in unclaimed property, the state still only makes the minimum monthly payment — just a greater amount of it comes from unclaimed property funds," he said.

"Our proposal says that from now on the state will still have to make the minimum monthly payment on its own, and then whatever money is generated in unclaimed property will be used to pay down the outstanding balance. Unclaimed property revenue will go above and beyond the state's payment, not in lieu of it," he added.

Noting that Illinois has the largest unfunded pension liability of any state in the nation, State Sen. Deania Demuzio (D-Carlinville) and State Rep. Robert Molaro (D-Chicago) have announced their support for Giannoulas' efforts.

"Unclaimed property revenue should supplement the state's annual payment, not supplant it," Demuzio said. "We should stop pre-sweeping this money and allocate it all to the state's suffocating, unfunded pension liability."

Molaro is sponsoring the bill that would require the state to abide by Giannoulas' initiative.

"Whatever comes out of unclaimed property should go free and clear to pension liability," he said. "We always want some debt reduction; this measure just adds discipline to our budget process."

Ralph Martire, executive director of the bipartisan Center for Tax and Budget Accountability, also supports Giannoulas' efforts.

"Illinois has the worst unfunded pension liability in the nation," Martire said. "The Treasurer's proposal is a common sense utilization of unclaimed property to pay the state's biggest bill and be responsible stewards of the taxpayers' money."

If the Treasurer's Office put $146 million toward the unfunded pension liability this year and $88.5 million toward the liability each year through 2045 (Illinois law requires the pension funds to be 90 percent funded by 2045) the office will have paid down $3.3 billion in pension debt.

That $3.3 billion is worth much more if you think about how much it would cost the state if that money was not used, Giannoulas said, returning to his credit card analogy.

"If the state skips a pension payment, its debt increases rapidly," Giannoulas said. "Without our $3.3 billion contribution, the state's debt continues to increase and the hole continues to grow deeper. However, with our $3.3 billion the state will save $20 billion in future payments."

The Treasurer's Office generates revenue from the Unclaimed Property Trust Fund, the account which holds all the lost, forgotten or abandoned cash and property collected by the office each year.

The Treasurer's Office recovered an unprecedented amount of cash and stock in recent months from insurance companies undergoing demutualization, the process of converting a mutual company to a stock company.

Last year, demutualization contributed to a record $84 million that the Treasurer's Office returned to 48,438 people and businesses who claimed money that the state owed them.

Once the demutualization process is complete, unclaimed property revenue is expected to return to typical levels. Since 2000, the median transfer was $88.5 million.

The Treasurer's Office retains all funds received under the Unclaimed Property Act in a trust fund. On April 15 and October 15 of each year, the Treasurer's Office deposits any money in excess of $2.5 million into the state's pension fund.

The $2.5 million balance is maintained to pay claims to Illinois residents who seek to recover their unclaimed property. Assets can be claimed at any time.

Past transfers from unclaimed property to the pensions fund are as follows: FY 00, $80.2 million; FY 01, $84.3 million; FY 02, $83 million; FY 03 $89 million; FY 04, $114 million; FY 05, $88.6 million; FY 06, $119.6 million and FY 07, $333 million.

Amusement Park Exhibit Makes Summer Debut

Attention, Chicagoans! Do you remember the "Bobs," "Aladdin's Castle" or even the "Rotor"? Do the words "Sans Souci," "Joyland" or "Luna Park" bring back memories of your first kiss or cotton candy? If any of the previously mentioned items make you pause and reflect on happier times, the Chicago Public Library happily takes you back in time with the opening of a new exhibition entitled FUN FOR ALL! Chicago's Amusement Parks.

Fun for All is a creative collection of artifacts, photographs, documents, postcards and other memorabilia that chronicle the fascination, history and variety of Chicago's amusement parks: from the 1893 World's Fair to Chutes Park, Riverview Park to Kiddieland to Funtown. Fun for All is a celebration of Chicago's amusement parks. The exhibit presents descriptive sections on the 1893 Columbian Exposition (World's Fair); Chicago's early neighborhood amusement parks; and an entire wing of memorabilia from Chicago's Riverview Park, including more than 15 models of the rides and attractions that made Riverview Park a fun-time frolic for friends and family.

The exhibition will be on display from June 16, 2007 through Sept. 14, 2008 in the Special Collections Exhibit Hall, 9th floor, at the Harold Washington Library Center, 400 S. State St.

Chicago was a leader in the development of amusement parks in the United States. The Midway Plaisance at the 1893 World's Fair inspired the concept of the modern amusement park: an enclosed space with an admission fee that featured entertainment, most notably rides.

The most famous ride on the Midway Plaisance was undoubtedly the Ferris Wheel, created by George Ferris. More than a million and a half visitors paid to ride the Ferris Wheel, which rose 264 feet into the air with 36 passenger cars. Just one car on the giant wheel could hold 60 people. Two complete revolutions of the wheel took 20 minutes and afforded passengers spectacular views of the Midway Plaisance, the Exposition grounds, Lake Michigan and the Chicago skyline.

In the years after the Fair closed, Chicago saw amusement parks open (and close) across the city. The first known modern amusement park in Chicago opened in July 1894. Inspired by the Midway Plaisance example of an enclosed area for amusements with an admission charge, noted swimmer and showman Paul Boyton opened Chutes Park at Cottage Grove Ave. and 63rd St. Boyton's Water Chutes was the first major shoot-the-chutes ride in the United States. It later moved to Kedzie and Jackson on Chicago's west side.

Chutes Park was followed by the '49 Mining Camp (61st St. & Cottage Grove); Ferris Wheel Park (Clark & Wrightwood); Sans Souci (60th St. & Cottage Grove); White City (63rd St. & South Parkway - now Martin Luther King Drive); and Luna Park (52nd St. & Halsted). Joyland Park, the only early Chicago Park owned by African Americans, opened in the 1920s in Bronzeville. Joyland contributed to the vitality of the Bronzeville neighborhood before closing later in the decade.

Chicago's most famous amusement park was Riverview, which opened in 1904 and ran until 1967. Located at Western and Belmont, it offered a wide range of amusements: baseball, Mardi Gras parades, a velodrome for bicyclists, historic reenactments of national events, roller skating, games of chance and live music, among other attractions. But Riverview was best known for its rides, from the Pair-O-Chutes to the Jetstream roller coaster. Most legendary was the Bobs roller coaster, which thrilled riders from its opening in 1924 until the Park closed in 1967.

In the post-World War II era, Funtown at 1711 E. 95th St. was the best known amusement park to open in Chicago. Originally called Kiddytown, it was one of many amusement parks designed primarily for children that thrived mid-century, especially in the suburbs. The most well known is Kiddieland in Melrose Park.

Although in 1908 nearly 500,000 Chicagoans flocked to the Windy City's amusement parks every summer weekend in search of inexpensive fun, the heyday of amusement parks was over by the second half of the 20th century. The tremendous growth of Chicago's suburbs and the birth of the modern, suburban theme park pulled away visitors. Nevertheless, historians continue to record the story of the city's parks and Chicagoans continue to trade stories about their experiences. Riverview especially has been the setting for plays and novels; the topic of research; and a landmark for decades in the collective memory of Chicagoans.

Island Rendezvous

In the Midwest, among the first interactions between Native people and an outside culture were commercial in nature. French-Canadian voyageurs, using the Great Lakes and river systems, accessed the nation's interior to trade with the inhabitants. For more than 200 years, these rugged traders bartered manufactured goods that the native peoples could not make themselves for beaver pelts, highly sought in Europe for their fashion value and known to the voyageurs as "soft brown gold."

The Forest Preserve District of Will County offers an insight into this time with its annual Island Rendezvous, a free, two-day festival to be held on Saturday, June 9th from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, June 10th from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

This year's Rendezvous features the reopening of Isle a la Cache Museum, completely renovated with expanded viewing space, all new exhibits, and a diorama depicting a pond and beaver lodge. The museum is devoted to the fur trade of the mid-18th century. Guided tours will be offered at 12:30, 1:30, 2:30 and 3:30 p.m. on June 9th and at 11:30 a.m. and 12:30, 1:30 and 2:30 p.m. on June 10th. The official ribbon cutting for the renovated museum will be at 12 noon on June 9th.

At the Island Rendezvous, dozens of historical reenactors will portray French, English and Native Americans of the mid-18th century. A voyageur encampment will permit the public to watch period crafts being made.

Highlights of the Rendezvous include a paddle dance, a "trader training" for children to test brains and brawn, and Native American storytellers.

On Saturday only, two Native American presenters will be featured at the Isle a la Cache amphitheater.

Celtic, French and period music will be performed live both days. A schedule of events and a map of the site will be available at the Forest Preserve's information tent. Other Forest Preserve District of Will County information will also be available.

The Island Rendezvous is free of charge, but vendors will be on hand with clothing, jewelry, tools and other crafts from the period that can be purchased. Food will also be available for sale.

The Island Rendezvous is a perfect family program - colorful, educational and inexpensive. Parking is free of charge.

Isle a la Cache Museum is located at 501 E. 135th St. (Romeo Road), 0.5 mile east of Route 53, in Romeoville. For information, call the Forest Preserve District of Will County's public information office at (815) 727-8700 between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday or Isle a la Cache Museum at (815) 886-1467.

Traditional Barn Dance

Bring your dancing shoes down to Garfield Farm Museum on Saturday, June 16, from 6 to 9 p.m. for a traditional Barn Dance. Live music and calling will be provided by the Warrenville Folk Music Society starting at 7 p.m. Dancers of all ages and abilities are welcome. Bring a picnic dinner and enjoy a historic evening down on the farm. Light refreshments will be available for a small fee. Admission is $8 for adults and $3 for children under 13. Donations will be accepted to help save and restore the farm's oldest barn which was recently struck by lightning, the historic 1842 wheat barn.

Large community dances were an everyday part of life in rural America. They provided an opportunity to socialize with neighbors, conduct business deals, court and arrange marriages, or simply relax after a hard day's work on the farm. Traditional dance forms such as contra, line and circle dances allowed each participant to dance with everyone else. They were paced so the dancer could converse with each new partner.

Rich and poor, town and country, would come together for an evening of socializing and entertainment. Because of the mingling of all ages and social sectors, everyone was expected to be on their best behavior. Polite manners were to everyone's benefit. Besides making the evening more enjoyable, they could have a positive effect on a person's future. The young man who was polite on the dance floor might be recognized and acknowledged on the street the next day by his pretty dance partner, perhaps opening the door for courtship. A child who behaved at dances might earn the good praises of his parents. Well-mannered and elegant couples might earn the respect of their neighbors, superiors and the community in general.

Just like the job interview for adults or the first day at a new school for children today, dances were the place people wanted to make a good impression. They were the place where people created public images and forged reputations.

Today, as our friends and families are spread out across the country, our sense of community is often fractured. Garfield Farm Museum's barn dances are a chance to find that community spirit while enjoying a wonderful evening of picnic, refreshments, history and graceful dancing. You may meet someone from 50 or more miles away and leave as new friends.

For more information call the museum at (630) 584-8485, or email at info@garfieldfarm.org. Garfield Farm Museum is located 5 miles west of Geneva, IL off IL Rt. 38 on Garfield Road. The 370-acre site is a historically intact former 1840s farm and teamster inn being restored as an 1840s working farm museum by volunteers and donors from around the country.

Aaron Kanadet Will

Entertain At Aglow Meeting

The Oak Lawn Chapter of Aglow International will meet on Thursday, June 14th at Mama Luigi's Restaurant, 7500 S. Harlem in Bridgeview.

Aaron Kanadet will be the entertainment for June's meeting. Instead of a speaker, it will be an evening of mystery and intrigue. Aaron is a magician who just recently completed another training course. We know there is no such thing as real "magic," but you will be puzzled by the way cards seem to disappear, reappear, and change.

Aaron just graduated from Oak Lawn Hometown Middle School and is a member of the First Christian Reform Church Puppet Ministry. He is a lifelong member of Oak Lawn Community Church where he was a member of the Youth Choir and now is a member of the Chancel Choir.

He is a member of Boy Scout Troop #652 where he is the Chaplain Aide. Aaron plays the drums and when he starts Oak Lawn Community High School in September, he will be joining the band. He has intentions of playing football also.

Bring some friends and see what appears (or disappears)...I wonder...

FISH VIRUS FOUND IN WISCONSIN AND MICHIGAN INLAND WATERS: Surprise reports on May 11th that a new viral fish disease likely killed fish in the Lake Winnebago system is spurring Wisconsin fisheries officials to expand the reach of emergency rules aimed at preventing viral hemorrhagic septicemia, or VHS from spreading to new waters.

And on May 16th, Michigan officials confirmed the presence of VHS in Clare County's Budd Lake with a "very large" die-off of black crappie, bluegill and muskie. Fish collected from Budd Lake were taken to Michigan State University for testing. The DNR learned last week that the fish from Budd Lake tested positive for VHS. This is the first time that the virus has been found in inland waters in Michigan.

Wisconsin DNR officials are deeply concerned. The Lake Winnebago system is home to a $234 million fishery and the world's largest lake sturgeon population. Movement of boats from one body of water to another is a likely path for spreading the virus. There is concern the threat will impact the $2.3 billion sport fishing industry, which supports more than 26,000 jobs.

VHS is not a health threat to people who handle infected fish or want to eat their catch, but it can kill more than 25 fish species. Boaters and anglers on all Wisconsin and Michigan waters must take steps that will help prevent the spread of VHS to other waters. (Great Lakes Basin Report)

SOMETHING NEW IN MOLDED FISH LURES: FoodSource Lures, the "world's only molded fishing lures" made entirely of 100 percent real food, is expanding its product line with five new freshwater lures to meet the demands of anglers worldwide.

Soft plastics have long been a popular way to mimic natural food sources for fish, however, plastic is not biodegradable. That means plastic lures that are lost or discarded can potentially become an environmental issue. FoodSource Lures resemble popular soft plastic baits but are 100% biodegradable and pose no health hazards to waters, fish or other wildlife.

FoodSource Lures come in several attractive colors and scents in food sticks, grubs, worms, minnows, catfish bites, carp candies, salmon eggs and more. Durable and easy to use, these lures can be placed back in the original bag without damaging unused lures. Because FoodSource Lures are real food rather than plastics, fish strike hard and hold onto them. My personal experience with the product was drop shooting for walleyes in Northern Wisconsin using the 3-inch Minnow scented with anise and licorice. And bluegill fishing on Goose Lake using the 3-inch earthworm scented with garlic. The fish took the bait without hesitation!

If your local tackle shop doesn't carry FoodSource Lures (it's only a matter of time before they will have to carry them due to customer demand), log onto their web site at www.fslures.com for a state-by-state listing of dealers near you, or have your dealer order some of the product for you.

RECENT PRESS RELEASES: A great way to keep current on news from the Illinois Department of Natural Resources is to read the press releases posted on their web site. Bookmark: www.dnr.state.il.us/pubaffairs/pubaffairs.htm. Recent releases include rules on Canada goose management will have no impact on the upcoming 2007-08 waterfowl hunting seasons or nuisance permit procedures in Illinois.

TRAILBLAZER ADVENTURE PROGRAM: The Trailblazer Adventure Program continues to grow and program leaders are expanding their responsibilities to ensure its continued success. Trailblazers is the largest outdoor youth education program of its kind. Developed to introduce families to the outdoor lifestyle under the guidance of sportsmen mentors, the program has brought the thrill of outdoor sports to more than 366,000 participants since its inception in 2001.

In 2007, the U.S. Sportsmen's Alliance Foundation expects 150,000 participants to learn about shooting, hunting, fishing and other outdoor sports during 80 scheduled events. The USSAF is looking for motivated volunteers who feel strongly about keeping the outdoor heritage alive. If you are interested in becoming a volunteer, contact Frank Price at (614) 888-4868, ext. 202, or e-mail trailblazer@ussportsmen.org.

ILLINOIS MUSKIE ALLIANCE MEETING MINUTES: "Muskie signs for Mallard Lake showing the difference between a muskie and a pike are being developed by the sign shop of DuPage County at Mallard Lake. Ray Thompson will check to see if Muskies Inc. brochures will work in our area."

"Present at the meeting were Ted Koski and Greg Meyer of Ramp Illinois. They are trying to organize interested groups to support a move to stop closing, and instead add launch ramps on Lake Michigan and other Illinois bodies of water. All fishermen pay 15% on the products they buy to support access to waterways."

ThunderBolts Win In Rainy Series Opener

A late start at Hawk Ford Field on May 31st didn't stop an enthusiastic crowd from coming out to cheer on their first-place Windy City ThunderBolts. The team battled the Traverse City Beach Bums for nine hard innings, and despite being out-hit 12-5, a resilient Bolts squad walked away with a come-from-behind 6-4 victory.

For most of the afternoon, chances of baseball being played at Hawk Ford Field looked grim. Around 5 p.m., however, the sun broke through the clouds and the grounds crew went to work. By 8 p.m. the field was ready for play and the Beach Bums and Bolts were ready for action.

The teams would only waste one inning before getting the scoring underway. The Beach Bums would plate one run on ThunderBolts starter Brody Taylor in the top of the second to give the team a 1-0 lead. In the bottom half, the ThunderBolts would use one hit by J.P. Lowen and a pair of bunts to bring across two runs to take a 2-1 lead.

The score would remain the same until the top of the fifth. The first 3 batters the Beach Bums sent to the plate would cross home in the inning to give the Bums a 4-1 lead. The ThunderBolts would bring one back in the sixth to make it a 4-2 game.

Traverse City starter Robbie McClellan scattered only 3 hits over 6 2/3 innings of work, but it was the last batter that he faced that turned the tide of the game. With Rob Marconi on at second base following a walk and stolen base, left fielder Mike Coles stepped to the plate. Coles would battle McClellan to a full count and then took a fastball back up the middle to plate Marconi and tie the game.

The ThunderBolts would take the lead back for good in the bottom of the eighth inning. Leading off the ThunderBolts half of the frame, shortstop Wes Long belted his third home run of the season deep to left to give the ThunderBolts a lead they would not relinquish. Amos Ramon would add a bases-loaded RBI single to give the Bolts some insurance. Two innings of solid relief by Isaac Hess earned him the win while Matt Petty pitched a perfect ninth for his second save of the year.

Free Fishing Days

Recreation agencies, park districts, youth groups, civic organizations and fishing clubs throughout Illinois will host a wide variety of fishing derbies, how-to clinics and other special activities as part of the 2007 celebration of Illinois Free Fishing Days, June 8 to 11. Free Fishing Days allow anyone to fish without a fishing license, inland trout stamp or salmon stamp during the four-day event each June.

Organizations throughout the state plan special events during Free Fishing Days weekend and at other times during the spring and summer to focus on fishing. While anyone can fish without a license during the four days of Free Fishing Days, anglers fishing in fishing derbies, tournaments and other special events held prior to or after Free Fishing Days are required to have a fishing license, unless they are otherwise exempted.

One such event will take place on the Chicago River June 21st and 22nd. The event is sponsored by Fishin' Buddies. For more information, call John Kidd Jr. at (773) 233-3250.

For more information on Free Fishing Days events in Illinois, contact the IDNR at (217) 782-9990.

Coaching Clinic

ASEP Coaching Clinics will be held in Downers Grove on June 23rd at the Holiday Inn Express and in Arlington Heights on July 11th at the La Quinta Inn for anyone interested in becoming certified to coach middle or high school athletics. The successful completion of the ASEP program is required by the Illinois High School Assn. for all non-faculty coaches.

To register or for more information about this or future clinics, contact Jeff Kyle at (217) 586-4799.

2007 Rawlings-NAIA Gold Glove Team

St. Xavier University freshman left fielder Tony Testin (Joliet/Joliet Catholic) was one of just nine NAIA players named to the 2007 Rawlings-NAIA Region VII Gold Glove Team when the honors were released by the national office recently. Testin had an impressive debut season with the Cougars this spring both offensively and defensively.

"To be able to come in as a freshman and have the type of season that Tony had this spring is a testament to his work ethic and talent for the game of baseball," said SXU baseball coach Mike Dooley. "Many people rank baseball players based on their offensive production, but having a guy who can play great defense is often just as important. Tony is very deserving of this distinct honor and I believe it is the start of what will be a very successful college career for him."

Testin, along with senior third baseman Nick Tantillo (Tinley Park/Andrew), was named to the 2007 All-CCAC Gold Glove Team as well as the 2007 NAIA All-Region VII Gold Glove Team in May. He racked up 97 putouts and two assists with just two errors in the outfield. He finished the season with a fielding percentage of .980. On the offensive side, Testin hit .365 (72-for-197) on the year with a team-best 45 runs scored over 52 games. He also finished with 11 doubles, two triples, and 40 RBI.

Four St. Xavier Softball Players Earn Academic Honors

The St. Xavier University softball team had seniors Jory Bodi, Marie Barker and Nicole Barker, in addition to junior Holly Kennedy, all recognized as 2007 Daktronics-NAIA Softball Scholar-Athletes when the national office released the names in conjunction with the 2007 NAIA Softball National Championship Tournament, which is taking place this week in Decatur, Ala. Bodi played first base for the Cougars, while the Barkers and Kennedy saw action in the outfield this past spring.

To be named a Daktronics-NAIA Softball Scholar-Athlete, a student-athlete must have at least a 3.50 grade point average (GPA) on a 4.00 scale and be at least a junior in academic standing with one full academic year completed at the nominating institution.

Gilbert Signs with St. Xavier Women's Cross Country/Track

Kayla Gilbert, a senior middle distance runner at Shepard High School in Palos Heights, has signed a letter of intent to continue both her athletic and academic career at St. Xavier University as a member of the Cougar women's track program. The Calumet Park native is expected to make an immediate impact on the indoor/outdoor track teams at SXU next season.

Gilbert is the daughter of Cynthia Gilbert of Calumet Park. She plans to pursue a degree in nursing next year at SXU. Gilbert was coached by Verline Gaddis with the Astros' girls track team.

SXU Men's Track Signs Witty

Roy Witty, a senior distance runner at Marist High School in Chicago, has signed a letter of intent to continue both his athletic and academic career as a member of the Cougar men's cross country and track programs. The Mount Greenwood native was coached by John O'Hara (boy's cross country) and Tony DeAngelis (boy's track) during his prep career at Marist High School.

Witty is the son of Roy and Beverly Witty of Mount Greenwood. He plans to pursue a degree in business next year at Saint Xavier University. SXU men's cross country/track coach Ed McAllister feels that Witty possesses the work ethic and skill to make a smooth transition to collegiate athletics.

Barker Named to Academic All-America Team

St. Xavier University senior right fielder Nicole Barker (Chicago Heights/Marian Catholic) was named a first team honoree in the College Division of the 2007 ESPN The Magazine Academic All-America Softball Team when the national committee released the national honors recently. This is the second straight year that Barker has earned a spot on the ESPN The Magazine Academic All-America Softball Team after garnering third team honors as a junior following the 2006 season.

Barker led SXU with a batting average of .426 (69-for-162) and 40 runs scored over all 45 games. In addition, she also tied for the team-lead with 16 stolen bases and four triples. Barker majored in business and graduated from SXU in May with a 3.89 cumulative grade point average on a 4.00 scale.

To be nominated for the ESPN The Magazine Academic All-America Softball Team, a student-athlete must be a starter or important reserve with at least a 3.20 cumulative GPA for her career. Student-athletes are not eligible until they have reached sophomore athletic and academic standing at their current institution. Student-athletes must also have completed one full academic year at the nominating institution to be eligible.

Book Sale Benefits Children's Hospital

Children's Memorial Hospital in Chicago is one of the children's health organizations benefiting from sales of "The Boy of Steel," a New York Times best-selling children's fiction book about a young boy with brain cancer who becomes a New York Yankees batboy for a day. All royalties from sales of the book published by HarperCollins in 2006 are donated to children's cancer research organizations.

Laura Sealey, the book's illustrator, will sign copies of "The Boy of Steel" free of charge during all three days of the 10th annual SportsFest sports and entertainment collectibles show Friday through Sunday, June 8th to 10th, at the Renaissance Schaumburg Hotel & Convention Center. Her appearance is sponsored by exhibitor Art of the Stars.

Book author Ray Negron grew up in the Bronx and as a teen was caught spray painting graffiti on the side of Yankee Stadium. Yankees owner George Steinbrenner put him to work as a batboy and Negron went on to play minor league baseball with the Pittsburgh Pirates organization. He also worked as a team counselor for the Cleveland Indians and Texas Rangers and is currently a special adviser to Steinbrenner.

Approximately 40 former and current professional athletes in a variety of sports will be on hand to sign autographs at SportsFest. For an up-to-the-minute list of autograph guests and other details regarding SportsFest, visit www.sportsfestshow.com.

Show hours will be 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Friday, June 8th; 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday, June 9th; and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Sunday, June 10th. Tickets are $10 for a one-day ticket and $25 for a three-day pass, and are available at the web site, by calling toll-free 1(800) 726-9966, ext. 607, or at the door. Thoughts On Health & Nutrition

by
Lucinda K. Lysen, RD, RN, BSN

CAREGIVING—A LABOR OF LOVE

I recently picked up an article on caregiving. I felt like I was reading my own story. Three years ago my father died of cancer and my mom was left alone at 84 with the residual effects of a stroke, and a spinal injury. My sister and I were overwhelmed with grief, a sick mom to care for, an estate to manage, and our own personal lives and work schedules in front of us. A nursing home was out of the question for my mom; she belonged at home in her own comfortable surroundings of fifty plus years. And this is what we promised my dad would happen, in his dying days. We were faced with huge decisions on how to proceed.

According to the National Alliance of Caregiving (NAC), 50 million people in our country care for relatives or friends who are unable to take care of themselves. The majority of caregivers take care of family members, and half are older adults with health challenges of their own. If a caregiver's own health doesn't complicate his or her ability to give care, the ongoing demands of life often do. The typical caregiver is a 46 year-old woman with a family who has a job, while also providing over 20 hours a week of unpaid care to an ailing parent, according to the NAC. Over half of caregivers are forced to make adjustments to their work life, such as going in late or giving up work entirely.

Careers aren't the only things that caregivers sacrifice. They also give up time with spouses and children, forgo hobbies and social activities, and miss vacations. They sacrifice their own needs—physical and otherwise—and assume the added responsibility of learning health care skills to provide the care that their loved ones need to go on.

In addition to all this, there are huge emotional challenges. Caring for someone who is totally dependent on you, either because of injury or chronic or terminal illness, is an overwhelming commitment which requires dramatic coping skills. It is important to have the right resources at hand if you are to navigate such challenges. Being pointed in the right direction can make all the difference in the world.

Fortunately, my sister and I were pointed in the right direction early on. We sought the help of others and got it! That's not to say that it isn't still very difficult. I am with my mom every day for considerable time, and forego time at the office, time with my husband, and personal activity time to do so. But it is precious time to me, and I would not give it up for anything!

There are many resources out there—the yellow page directory is one way to start looking! There are day care centers for older adults, and senior living facilities, if this is what you and/or your loved one choose. Most hospitals now provide home health services. A home health service can provide at-home nursing care, physical and occupational therapy, assistance with activities of daily living which can no longer be undertaken by the individual independently, nutrition education, and more. Your local Council on Aging is available for those over 60 who are mentally and physically impaired. There are also many, many non-hospital based home health agencies and eldercare agencies which offer caregivers for daily and live-in situations, and even grocery delivery. Check with your insurance for coverage and with an accountant for what's tax deductible. And remember—you are not alone, if you just look around!

There are also numerous Web sites and online support groups devoted to caregivers and their loved ones. You may want to check the following:

NAC—www.caregiving.org
Family Caregiver Alliance—www.caregiver.org
National Family Caregivers Association—www.nfca.org

Nursing Home Violations

The Illinois Department of Public Health announced the following type "A" violations of the Nursing Home Care Act.

Act were cited during the months of November and December. An "A" violation, which is the most serious licensure violation imposed by the state, pertains to a condition in which there is a substantial probability that death or serious mental or physical harm will result.

The statement of violation for each facility can be obtained by visiting the Department's Web site at www.idph.state.il.us.

Claremont Rehab & Living Center, a 200-bed skilled care facility located at 150 N. Weiland, Buffalo Grove, has been fined $20,000 for failure to supervise a resident at high risk for falls. This failure resulted in the resident suffering a fall, then dying. The facility has requested a hearing on the Department's action.

Glenwood Healthcare & Rehab, 184-bed skilled care facility located at 19330 S. Cottage Grove, Glenwood, has been fined $22,500 for failure to ensure each resident at the facility was adequately supervised and monitored to prevent resident to resident abuse. This failure led some residents to fear they could not be protected from a resident who showed aggressive behavior. The facility has requested a hearing on the Department's action. The matter is set for a status conference May 22.

Lawrence Community Healthcare Center, a 99-bed skilled care facility located at 900 E. Corporation St., Bridgeport, has been fined $10,000 for failure to prohibit food service and housekeeping employees from working while the employees experienced nausea, diarrhea and vomiting before and during a shift. This occurred during an outbreak of gastrointestinal illness that affected residents and staff at the facility. The facility also failed to take proper precaution to prevent the spread of the outbreak. The facility has requested a hearing on the Department's action. A status in the matters is set for June 18.

June 18.

Manorcare at Elk Grove Village, a 190-bed skilled care facility at 1920 Nerge Rd., Elk Grove Village, has been fined $5,000 for failure to adequately supervise a resident to prevent them from leaving the facility. Staff mistook the new resident for a visitor and allowed the resident to leave. The facility notified police, who found the resident un-harmed. The facility has requested a hearing on the Department's action.

Manorcare at Elk Grove Village was also fined $22,500 for failure to provide the necessary care and services to a resident who required medication. Staff did not provide medication to the resident for more than two weeks, which led to the resident being hospitalized. The facility requested a hearing on the Department's action.

Somerset Place, a 450-bed intermediate care facility located at 5009 N. Sheridan, Chicago, has been fined $20,000 for failure to provide adequate supervision and prevent elopement. A resident who requires supervision was found on the street by police and taken to the hospital with a fractured wrist and forearm. The facility has requested a hearing on the Department's action.

Westshire Nursing & Rehabilitation Center, 485-bed skilled and intermediate care facility located at 5825 W. Cermak, Cicero, has been fined $10,000 for failure to provide interventions for a resident who displayed mental and/or psychosocial adjustment difficulty. The resident had multiple episodes of maladaptive behavior including self harm and physical abusive (attention seeking) behavior, but the facility did not come up with a plan to prevent such behavior. The facility has requested a hearing on the Department's action. The matters is set for a status conference on June 6.

Avon Walk For Breast Cancer Raises $8.3 Million

More than 3,600 participants in the fifth annual Avon Walk for Breast Cancer Chicago raised $8.3 million to advance access to care and finding a cure for breast cancer. At the Closing Ceremony at Soldier Field, Avon Foundation Executive Director Carol Kuzig announced three initial grants, with millions more slated to be awarded throughout the year. The initial grants are:

Mount Sinai Hospital: $1,950,000 to support a task force which has been formed to address and find solutions for the critical issue of black/white disparities in Chicago breast care and mortality. The task force includes participation of the leading hospitals that care for the underserved populations in the Chicago area. Funds will support the program manager of the task force and an immediate study of two lower-income neighborhoods, North Lawndale and Humboldt Park, specifically to determine if the disparity results in part from unequal access to mammography or from reduced quality mammography screening. While focused on Chicago, the findings of the task force can help resolve disparity issues nationwide.

Mercy Foundation f.b.o. Mercy Hospital and Medical Center: $1,000,000 to support a new program "Providing Solutions for Breast Care Disparities in Chicago," with the funds specifically slated to support patient navigation and the purchase of two digital mammography machines, with the goal to increase capacity for screening and diagnostic mammography by 25%. Mercy will reach out to the entire population in the Chicago area and, in particular, to women on a one- to two-year wait-list for screening at Stroger Hospital.

Robert H. Lurie Cancer Center/Northwestern University and Northwestern Memorial Hospital: $1,000,000 to support both breast cancer care and research, including: access to breast care for the underserved at Northwestern Memorial Hospital and the Erie Family Health Center; and research—focused on clinical studies identifying markers for breast cancer prevention and treatment response, and characterizing molecular mechanisms of breast cancer growth, survival and metastasis.

Donations are still being accepted for the Avon Walk Chicago, and registration is open for the remaining 2007 Walks in other states. From 2003 through 2006, the Avon Walk for Breast Cancer series raised more than $150 million. To register, donate or for additional information, visit www.avonwalk.org or call (800) 510-WALK.

Cherished Angels Memory Garden Annual Remembrance Ceremony

The Little Company of Mary Cherished Angels Memory Garden offers a place for family and friends to grieve and reflect upon the loss.

Little Company of Mary Hospital and Health Care Centers recently hosted the Annual Remembrance Ceremony in the Cherished Angels Memory Garden. The Garden honors the babies who left this earth too soon and offers a place for family and friends to grieve and reflect upon the loss.

"We felt there was a strong need to find a meaningful way to remember and recognize these precious little ones," said Mary Grimm, manager of Maternal Child Services. "These remarkable little angels continue to have a profound impact on our lives."

The Little Company of Mary Sisters' generously donated space for the Garden on the East side of their Convent. The space was transformed into an oasis complete with lush landscaping, benches, statues and a fountain to provide serenity and healing. This breathtaking Garden was created on an almost nonexistent budget through the dedicated efforts of the Perinatal Loss Committee and the Maternal Child nursing staff.

The Hospital employees generously supported the Garden this year by organizing a raffle during the 2007 Hospital Week. The proceeds went towards the purchase of the Angel of Hope statue for the Garden.

If your baby died at birth, the committee encourages you to visit the Garden. For more information, call the Perinatal Loss Committee at (708) 229-5928.

Sheriff Dart's Summer Safety Tips

Summertime creates all sorts of opportunities for the common house burglar. Windows and garage doors are left open and bicycles are left outside. The warm weather gives him the chance to spend plenty of time outdoors looking for vulnerable homes to victimize. And the humming of air conditioning units muffles the noise a burglar makes while breaking into a house, garage, or car.

But the best opportunity for a house burglar is the opportunity created by a family vacation. An empty house that is not properly protected is a burglar's best friend. By taking the following steps, you can safeguard your home by making it look lived-in while you are away on vacation:

- Alert a trusted neighbor that you will be out of town. Ask them to watch for any suspicious activity around your home. Provide them with a phone number of where you can be reached in case of an emergency.
- Have a neighbor collect your newspapers and mail or arrange to have your delivery service suspended when you're out of town. However, be warned, there have been a few isolated incidents of newspaper carriers tipping off burglars when they know a home on their route is empty. Place an automatic timer on a few select lights in your house. Simply leaving a lamp on 24-hours a day can indicate to a burglar that there is no one home to turn the lights off.

- Hire a kid from the neighborhood to mow your lawn while you are gone.
- Lock expensive jewelry and other valuables in a safe deposit box at a nearby bank.
- Contact your local police department and ask if they have a "vacation home check" program.
- Just prior to leaving home, walk through the house and make sure all windows and doors have been locked. Don't forget to check the basement and garage.

Planning for your vacation entails more than booking a flight, making hotel reservations, and packing sun tan lotion. Take the time to safeguard your home so you can enjoy a safe and worry-free vacation.

The American Red Cross has learned about a new scam targeting military families. This scam takes the form of false information being told to military families.

The caller (young-sounding, American accent) calls a military spouse and identifies herself as a representative from the Red Cross. The caller states that the spouse's husband (not identified by name) was hurt while on duty in Iraq and was med-evacuated to a hospital in Germany. The caller states they couldn't start treatment until paperwork was accomplished, and that in order to start the paperwork they needed the spouse to verify her husband's Social Security number and date of birth. In a recent case, the spouse was quick to catch on and did not provide any information to the caller.

"American Red Cross representatives do not typically contact military members or dependents directly and almost always go through a commander or first sergeant channels. Military family members are urged not to give out any personal information over the phone if contacted by unknown or unverified individuals, including confirming that your spouse is deployed," said Martha Dittmar, Communications Manager for the American Red Cross of Greater Chicago.

American Red Cross representatives will contact military members or dependents directly only in response to an emergency message initiated by your family. The Red Cross does not report any type of casualty information to family members. The Department of Defense will contact families directly if their military member has been injured. Should any military family receive such a call, they are urged to report it to their local police department.

The American Red Cross ensures that the American people are in touch with their family members serving in the United States military by operating a communications network that is open 24-hours, 7 days-a-week, 365 days-a-year. Through a network of employees and volunteers at the Red Cross national that link families during emergencies, access to emergency financial assistance, confidential counseling, community support headquarters, local chapters, on military installations, and deployed with troops, the Red Cross offers a broad range of services. Among these services, the Red Cross provides communications for families left behind, assistance to veterans and preparedness courses for military personnel and their families. Last year, the American Red Cross of Greater Chicago provided emergency services for 7000 members of U.S. Armed Forces families.

It is a federal crime, punishable by up to 5 years in prison, for a person to falsely or fraudulently pretend to be a member of, or an agent for, the American National Red Cross for the purpose of soliciting, collecting, or receiving money or material.

Operation Iraqi Freedom Living Memorial Unveiled

On Sunday, May 27th, Alsip VFW Post 450, 11800 Veterans Way in Alsip, hosted a memorial unveiling for our troops in Iraq. Alsip village officials as well as VFW and the Veteran's Affairs Department dignitaries attended the memorial dedication. Many Alsip residents and other veterans also attended the ceremony.

The Marine Color Guard and the Emerald Society Pipe and Drums led dignitaries to the permanent war memorial located in front of Post 450. Here, a statue created by Alsip resident Bill Tellano was placed in memory of those who died in Iraq as well as those who survive that war. Also honored were the soldiers who fought in all wars to keep America free and strong.

After a moment of silence, Officer John M. McHale offered a prayer and the National Anthem was sung by Alsip Village Trustee Tom Collins.

Alsip Mayor Patrick Kitching welcomed the audience and with the help of resident artist Bill Tellano, unveiled the memorial statue of a soldier kneeling in prayer. The statue will remain a part of the permanent memorial.

IDVA Chief of Staff Michael Gough, who represented Director L. Tammy Duckworth at the ceremony, honored Bill Tellano. He received a plaque of appreciation for his wonderful sculpture from Duckworth's office.

Also speaking at the memorial was Tom Maher commander of VFW Post 450 and Robert White, VFW Commander of the 16th District.

When all was said and done, the flag was raised in honor of soldiers everywhere who are serving their country and Taps was played for those who died in defense of their country. A flight of doves and a 21-gun salute closed the ceremony.

Hosts Business Opportunities Information Workshop

On Tuesday, June 12, the Department of Aviation will host a free workshop for parties interested in learning about and participating in new business opportunities at Chicago's O'Hare and Midway International Airports. The event will be held from 8:30 a.m. to noon at the Fountain Blue Banquets and Conference Center located at 2300 S. Mannheim Road in Des Plaines.

"The City of Chicago is committed to promoting local businesses and working with minority- and women-owned companies interested in doing business at Chicago's airports," said Chicago Aviation Commissioner Nuria I. Fernandez. "I encourage all interested businesses to attend the June 12th Airport Business Opportunities Information Workshop."

Attendees will learn about business opportunities for MBE/WBE/DBE/ACDBE businesses at Chicago's airports, including contracts for professional services and maintenance and airport concessions.

Representatives from the City's Departments of Aviation, Procurement Services and Business Affairs and Licensing will be on hand to assist business owners with applications, certification and procedural matters necessary to do business with the City.

There is no cost for this opportunity, but pre-registration is required. To pre-register, please contact James Hankin at (773) 686-3541 or visit www.flychicago.com/doingbusiness/6-12-07Event.shtm.

In November 2006, 650 job seekers participated in the first Chicago Department of Aviation and O'Hare Modernization Program (OMP) Aviation and Construction Industry Job Fair. The Department of Aviation plans to host another Business Opportunities Information Workshop in late summer 2007.

The Chicago Airport System is self-supporting, using no local or state tax dollars for operations or capital improvements at O'Hare and Midway International airports. Together, Chicago's airports generate more than $45 billion in annual economic activity and create 540,000 jobs for the region. Visit www.flychicago.com to learn more about the Chicago Airport System.

Pass Bills To Clean Up Toxic Mercury

In a major victory for children's health and the environment, the Illinois House of Representatives yesterday afternoon passed Senate Bill 1241, which prohibits the sale or installation of mercury-containing thermostats—and concludes a successful effort by State Senator Mattie Hunter (D-Chicago) and State Representative Karen May (D-Highland Park) to pass two bills eliminating the largest classes of mercury-containing products still legal for sale in Illinois.

"Senate Bill 1241 and House Bill 943 will combat the contamination and environmental hazards that stem from mercury's unnecessary use in products," said Hunter, SB 1241's chief sponsor. "This is another important step in strengthening Illinois's laws regarding mercury, which causes significant health risks to a significant portion of our population."

"These bills are about protecting children's health," said Representative Karen May (D-Highland Park), chair of the House Environmental Health Committee and chief sponsor of HB 943, which bans the sale mercury-containing measuring devices and passed the legislature on May 16. "If we don't curtail the major sources of mercury pollution, we are knowingly endangering the healthy development of Illinois children."

A potent neurotoxin particularly dangerous to developing children, mercury is widely used in thermostats and measuring devices such as medical thermometers, barometers and blood pressure cuffs. According to U.S. EPA, these products account for over a third of the mercury in products sold nationally.

"Policy makers are realizing the senselessness of continuing to expose people to mercury's health risks when safer alternatives are widely available," said Max Muller, Environmental Advocate at Environment Illinois. "Moreover, they're realizing the financial risk as well. Properly cleaning up a mercury spill can cost tens of thousands of dollars, and researchers estimate the health impacts of mercury poisoning cost our country billions of dollars per year."

"These bills are a huge victory for Illinois Children, but we also expect them to have a national impact," said John Gaudette, lobbyist for the Illinois Environmental Council, which advocated for the bills. "As the nation's fifth biggest consumer market, Illinois may serve as the tipping point beyond which manufacturers find it too expensive to continue making both mercury and non-mercury versions of their products. The more states that pass similar laws, the closer we are to having, in effect, a nation-wide ban."

Thirty-five percent of America's population already lives in one of a dozen states that already bans mercury-containing thermostats. Nine states currently prohibit mercury in measuring devices.

When disposed of, mercury-containing thermostats and measuring devices are often crushed or incinerated, causing mercury's airborne release. A single gram of mercury is sufficient to contaminate a 20-acre lake, and the average thermostat contains three grams of mercury. Illinois EPA estimates less than 4% of thermostats are properly recycled in Illinois and thousands of pounds of mercury from these products are improperly disposed of each year.

When airborne mercury lands in waterways, bacteria convert it to methylmercury, a potent toxin that can permanently damage the human heart, brain, and immune system. When a pregnant mother eats contaminated fish, methylmercury crosses the placenta and can cause irreparable damage to the developing fetus's central nervous system, resulting in developmental delays, motor, memory, and attention problems, and decreased IQ. Nationally, U.S. EPA researchers estimate that up to one in six potential mothers—including over 100,000 women in Illinois—has high enough blood-mercury levels to put a fetus at risk.

Mercury-free thermostats and measuring devices with equal or better performance are available at comparable cost. Honeywell, the nation's leading thermostat manufacturer, has already eliminated mercury from its product line. Leading hospitals like Johns Hopkins and the Mayo Clinic have phased-out mercury in medical measuring devices. In Illinois, Omron, a leading medical device vendor based in Bannockburn, has eliminated mercury in its products, and Consorta, a bulk purchaser based in Schaumburg, has eliminated mercury-containing devices from its purchasing contracts.

Illinois has made great strides in recent years in eliminating preventable sources of mercury pollution by passing bills to prohibit mercury in personal fever thermometers (2003), most switches and relays (2004), children's vaccines (2005), and automobiles switches (2006). Most significantly, in December 2006, Illinois became the largest coal-burning state to require power plants to eliminate up to 90 percent of their atmospheric mercury pollution.

Legislators Asked To Expand State Children's Health Insurance Program

Lawmakers are fighting against the clock to reauthorize the State Children's Health Insurance Program (SCHIP), a government program that has extended insurance coverage to more than 6 million kids since its inception in 1997. To continue coverage for children already on SCHIP, the program must be renewed by September of this year.

As federal and state legislators discuss resources and funding levels, Delta Dental Plans Association is asking that they also work at removing the barriers that stand in the way of oral health care for children.

"Every child in America deserves access to oral health care," said Kim Volk, president and CEO of Delta Dental Plans Association. "There is an opportunity here to take a successful program and make it better. We want to be sure it's done in a way that brings dental services to more children."

Tooth decay is the most prevalent chronic disease among children, especially minority and low-income children. A recent report issued by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) noted that three times as many children aged 6-11 from families living below the federal poverty line had untreated tooth decay as compared with children from families with higher incomes.

Although it is widely recognized that oral health is integral to the overall health, dental services are often reduced within government programs when states are confronted with limited resources. As a result, fewer than 20 percent of eligible children receive a single preventive dental service through SCHIP.

Foremost among Delta Dental's recommendations is to stabilize access to dental care by establishing a federal guarantee of children's dental coverage. Enrolling children who are already eligible is another important goal, supported through the launch of community-based education and outreach.

Delta Dental is also urging policymakers to extend coverage for dental services to low-income children who have access to limited medical insurance coverage. Under current law, SCHIP cannot provide supplemental dental coverage to children whose parents have employer-sponsored medical coverage. The organization believes that states should have the option of extending dental coverage to any child who meets income and other eligibility standards, and does not have access to employer-sponsored dental coverage.

Lastly, Delta Dental is recommending that proven business practices be incorporated into the administration of SCHIP, including greater reliance on performance measures, equitable payment rates for dental services, competitive fee arrangements and administrative cost-efficiencies. These approaches have been used successfully by a handful of states in administering programs that increase access to children for dental care, and this success could be shared by more states.

Delta Dental Plans Association, based in Oak Brook, IL, is a national network of independent not-for-profit dental service corporations specializing in providing dental benefits programs to 47 million Americans in more than 81,000 employee groups throughout the country.

Biologists Hunt For Invasive Fish And Lethal Fish Disease

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and its federal, state and regional partners, including Chicago's Shedd Aquarium, will conduct annual search efforts in the Illinois Waterway near from the Chicago suburbs to Havana, Ill., for three species of invasive fish, as well as for lethal fish pathogens.

During the "Carp Corral/Goby Roundup," biologists will attempt to determine the relative abundance and upstream distribution of the bighead and silver carp—two types of Asian carp—and chart the downstream leading edge of the round goby.

Biologists will also collect tissue samples from captured fish to test for disease pathogens such as the non-native spring viremia of carp virus and the viral hemorrhagic septicemia virus, which can be lethal to a number of native fish species.

Viral hemorrhagic septicemia, or VHS, is one of the most feared fish diseases in the world, and it has made its way into several Great Lakes. Biologists are concerned that VHS virus could spread via the Chicago waterway and other Great Lakes tributaries into the Mississippi and Ohio River basins.

Sampling will cover 180 miles, more than half the length of the Illinois Waterway, from Alsip downstream to Havana. Round goby are most abundant and likely to be seen at upstream sample sites while bighead and leaping silver carp are more common and likely to be encountered at a downstream area.

Interconnected man-made channels and natural rivers of the Illinois Waterway System in metropolitan Chicago provide a direct link for water-borne movement of non-native aquatic nuisance species between the Great Lakes and Mississippi River basins. Together these watersheds encompass parts of 30 states and two Canadian provinces.

The potential economic and environmental impacts of Asian carp, round goby, fish disease pathogens and other invasive species like zebra mussels are widespread and significant.

The "Carp Corral/Goby Roundup" surveillance effort is critical in determining whether Asian carp have moved upstream of an electrical barrier near Romeoville, Ill., toward Lake Michigan, and whether round goby have made their way farther downstream toward the Mississippi River.

"Invasive Asian carp can upset the natural balance of aquatic ecosystems, and in addition, the silver carp can actually leap high out of the water and may collide with anglers, boaters, water skiers, or others who recreate on rivers, posing a serious safety hazard to all," said Pam Thiel, project leader for the Service's La Crosse, Wis., Fishery Resources Office and coordinator of the "Carp Corral/Goby Round Up."

An electrical fish barrier near Romeoville in the Chicago Sanitary and Ship Canal—designed to prevent and slow the spread of nonindigenous aquatic species—has been operational since 2002. This experimental prototype consists of a single array of 14 electrodes. One of the electrodes failed soon after installation. The 13 remaining electrodes are still functional but are wearing out due to corrosion.

Construction of a permanent barrier is complete just downstream from the prototype. University of Wisconsin Sea Grant Institute's Dr. Phil Moy, co-chair of the Dispersal Barrier Advisory Panel, explained, "The new barrier has 46 electrodes, has the capability to operate at higher voltage to more effectively repel small fish, and has five- by five-inch steel bar electrodes with a design life of 20 years."

The new barrier is currently being tested for vessel and mariner safety before being operated at full power. Biologists found a bighead carp 21 miles below the electrical barrier in 2002, about 50 miles from Lake Michigan, but to date no bighead or silver carp have been collected above the barrier. However, reproducing populations of bighead and silver carp have expanded into lower portions of the Illinois River to the Starved Rock Lock and Dam.

"The Great Lakes fishery brings $4 billion to the region every year and approximately five million anglers fish the waters annually, and invasive species like Asian carp and round goby threaten the very future of this valuable resource," said Marc Gaden, spokesman for the bi-national Great Lakes Fishery Commission. "We must do everything possible to halt these biological invasions. With the fate of both the Great Lakes and Mississippi River fisheries at risk, there are elevated concerns for the future."

Native to large rivers of Asia, bighead and silver carp were brought to the United States in the early 1970s and began appearing in public waterways in the early 1980s. These species are plankton feeders, eating microscopic plants and animals, and can reach weights of more than 80 pounds. They compete for food with larval and juvenile fish, as well as adult paddlefish, gizzard shad, big-mouth buffalo and native mussels.

The round goby, a non-native fish from the Black and Caspian seas, was first discovered in North American waters in 1990 and has since spread to all the Great Lakes. Known for its aggressive feeding and defensive behavior, and prolific reproductive rate, the round goby is a threat to native fish and a nuisance to anglers.

The goby has been moving inland from Lake Michigan, toward the Mississippi River via the Illinois Waterway System since 1993. In 2004, the Illinois Natural History Survey collected a small round goby below the Peoria Lock and Dam, nearly 170 miles from Lake Michigan and half the distance to the Mississippi River.

In 2005 and 2006, the VHS virus caused massive fish kills in lakes Huron, St. Clair, Erie and Ontario, and the St. Lawrence River. Thousands of economically valuable native fish have perished, including muskellunge, walleye, lake whitefish, and yellow perch, while others like Chinook salmon, smallmouth bass, and northern pike were diseased but did not die in large numbers.

Although this virus has not yet been detected in Lake Michigan or Lake Superior, it poses such a widespread serious threat to fishery resources and aquaculture in the Great Lakes Basin and beyond that the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service has restricted interstate shipments of live fish from states that border the Great Lakes, causing economic hardships to many here who depend on healthy fisheries for a livelihood.

Since 1871, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Fisheries Program has played a vital role in conserving and managing native fish and other aquatic resources. For more information about the Fisheries Program, go to <http://fisheries.fws.gov>.

Do You Really Need A Lawyer?

Sometimes it's obvious. You've been accused of a crime or you are sued for damages in a civil suit, and you become very aware of the urgent need for professional legal help.

Other times, it's less clear. The fact is that legal assistance is often desirable, even essential, in situations which may have nothing to do with crime or a court action.

How do you determine if you need a lawyer? It depends on the issue. If you've received an ordinary parking ticket, you probably don't need legal help. But if you're facing a situation involving a significant amount of money or your personal rights are in jeopardy, it may be wise to seek out professional legal advice.

Common situations where you need a lawyer include the following:

When You Enter into a Contract. Any agreement, oral or written, which involves a consideration - that is, the exchange of something of value in return for some goods or service rendered - may be binding and enforceable. Generally, oral agreements should be avoided. Written agreements should be either prepared by or examined by a lawyer before you sign anything.

When Your Personal Status Changes. Marriage, the birth or adoption of children and moving to a different state may result in new or different legal and personal responsibilities. Your lawyer can help you plan for an meet new obligations, including the preparation of various legal documents which may be required.

When You Make Or Revise A Will or Estate Plan. The planning and drafting of your Will is an important legal matter. Your lawyer can plan your estate in a way that will be most beneficial to you and your heirs. In addition, your lawyer can suggest ways to organize your estate so that substantial savings in taxes and other estate costs are realized.

When You Buy Or Sell Real Estate. Buying and selling real estate is a huge financial transaction for most people. Your lawyer will review all legal documents necessary to the transaction and participate in the closing, in order to avoid legal pitfalls that could lead to losing your home.

When You Are Involved In An Accident. If you are involved in an accident of any kind resulting in personal injury or property damage you should immediately consult with a lawyer. Your lawyer may also be helpful if you believe that a doctor or other professional has committed malpractice.

Whenever Your Personal Rights Are Threatened. The law exists to protect your rights, but often you must take definite action to make those laws work for you. For example, you may need a lawyer if you've been fired from work or have faced discrimination or immigration problems.

When Financial Problems Arise. If you have tax problems or face personal or a business bankruptcy, your attorney can help you wade through the maze of legal issues towards a satisfactory solution.

When Organizing a Business. Your attorney can help with the formation of your business and assist in the ongoing concerns about employment law, workplace safety issues, immigration issues, intellectual property rights and other matters.

When You Are Arrested. If you are arrested for any reason or are accused of or questioned about your involvement in a crime, you should consult with an attorney immediately. If you cannot afford an attorney, one will be provided to you free of charge.

Daley Announces New Zoning Web Page

Cook County Commissioner John P. Daley is informing residents of unincorporated Cook County about a new, convenient web site for obtaining building permits, and information about contractors, who are licensed to work in unincorporated Cook County. On line applications are available for building, electrical, and plumbing permits, as well as detailed information and supporting documents to help explain the county's application process.

The complete text of the Cook County Zoning Ordinance, completely overhauled in 2001, is also available. Future plans are being considered to add the complete text of the Cook County Building Code to the web site.

"This convenient new web site will save residents time and money," said Commissioner Daley. "Some of these tasks used to require a trip downtown to process paperwork. Now, it can all be done from the comfort of your own home."

Governor Announces U Of I's Historic Lincoln Hall Project Will Be "Green"

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently announced that the planned $66.4 million rehabilitation of the University of Illinois' historic Lincoln Hall will be a model "green" project, and will be submitted for an official national designation of projects that place an emphasis on energy-efficient and environmentally-friendly design.

The Lincoln Hall project will be submitted for Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) Gold certification, which would place the project at the forefront of the national movement for sustainable energy practices.

LEED certification rates projects based on their energy and water use efficiency, indoor air quality, the use of recycled and local materials, design innovation, pollution reduction, erosion control, and the overall impact of the project on the surrounding environment. The Lincoln Hall project goals include the latest energy-saving climate control systems that would also improve indoor air quality; special insulation and window treatments to improve the building's energy efficiency while preserving its historic character; lighting systems that would conserve energy and improve the classroom environment; plumbing fixtures that would reduce water usage; and other measures that will be specifically addressed during the design phase of the project. These planned upgrades would not only save energy but also help cut emissions of greenhouse gases and air pollutants.

The State of Illinois has released $3 million for planning the Lincoln Hall renovation, with the balance of state funds, $55.1 million, included in the governor's proposed FY 08 budget. The University of Illinois is contributing $8.3 million to the project.

Lincoln Hall was built in 1911 and has had no major improvements since the west hall and theater were added in 1930. The planned $66.4 million construction project will reconfigure existing space for more classrooms and to meet current life safety codes. Instructional space will be concentrated on the first two floors and the backstage area of the theater, which has not been used for 25 years since the relocation of the Theater Dept. to the Krannert Center. The top two floors will be primarily faculty office space. The building will also receive upgrades to its electrical, lighting, heating, ventilation, air-conditioning, and computer network systems, as well as new flooring, ceilings and wall finishes.

Internet Safety Education

Joined by educators from Chicago Public Schools (CPS), CPS Board President Rufus Williams and area lawmakers; Attorney General Lisa Madigan recently unveiled new and concentrated measures designed to help protect today's school children from threats not known to school kids of just a few years ago: online predators and other criminals that use the Internet to perpetrate crimes against children.

At a morning news conference in the library and computer lab at Chicago's Drummond Elementary School, Madigan announced two important tools that will help parents and educators monitor how children use the Internet. Senate Bill 1472 calls on schools to provide yearly Internet safety education to students in grades K through 12. In addition, Madigan announced that her office would coordinate the distribution to schools throughout the state educational videos that promote Internet safety.

Introduced into the General Assembly last month, SB 1472, the Internet Safety Education Act, sponsored by Sen. Dan Kotowski and Rep. David Miller, encourages Illinois schools to adopt an age-appropriate Internet safety curriculum. Intended to serve as a tool to assist education, SB 1472 identifies several key topics for instruction including safe and responsible use of the Internet, online predators, identity theft, cyber-bullying and harassment, and illegal downloading.

Madigan also announced that her office will coordinate the distribution of Think Before You Post, a new public service advertising (PSA) campaign created by NCMEC and the U.S. Dept. of Justice in cooperation with the Ad Council. The PSAs are designed to raise awareness about the prevalence of online sexual exploitation and to help parents, guardians and teens better protect themselves from online predators.

Approximately 34 percent of children ages 10 to 17 post their real names, telephone numbers, home addresses or the names of their schools online where anyone could see, according to a recent study conducted by University of New Hampshire researchers for NCMEC.

Madigan commended Superintendent Arne Duncan and the Chicago Public Schools for partnering with her office in making the Think Before You Post PSA available to over 500 grammar and high schools throughout the city of Chicago.

Madigan used the occasion to stress the ever-changing virtual world and how online predators have new mediums to reach potential victims and perpetrate crimes against children.

According to a 2005 report by the Pew Internet and American Life Project, 87 percent of teens between the ages of 12 and 17 are online.

In 2006, 55 percent of teens reported use of social networking web site of which 48 percent reported visiting such web sites at least daily.

According to NCMEC, approximately 13 percent of youth received a sexual solicitation or approach over the Internet within the preceding year.

Sit-In At Saint Linus School

Student wears hippie style vest made in the art classes as part of the cross curriculum study of the 1960's.

Upon arriving at the office of the surprised Dr. Stritch, they staged a true sixties style sit in. They chanted repeatedly in unison: Peace, Love, Pop! ...and Pop Costs A Dollar, Let's All Holler!..... Students then sang several parodies to sixties songs, including one to the tune of Kumbaya. "Someone's thirsty now, Give us Pop... Oh Doctor, give us pop...." Student representatives Mike Sheehy and Phil Caffee delivered prepared speeches. They ranted on about desiring a world of all flavors and "a world in which 7-up is not just used for the general upset stomach, but as a low-priced beverage of choice. Working together we can achieve our goal.... We've been patient for eight years. We've seen the price of pop be driven up by the conglomerates! Big business is gouging the thirsty students in our school. It is time to rise up and talk to the man! Dr. Stritch, we come together as the 8th grade student body - Do the right thing, Doctor... Give us Free Pop!

After the speeches, the good doctor agreed to meet privately with the group's leader. Although the students offered to stay "green," the principal was concerned with dietary factors and the example being given to younger students. After a few consultations between the principal and the students, the mediator (Mrs. Gallagher) presented an offer that both parties agreed upon and signed. It included the following: a choice between two (not five) eight ounce soft drinks would be available to eighth grade students after a twenty four hour waiting period provided students would immediately remove any clothing that was out of standard uniform policy and return silently to their homerooms. And finally, upon arriving home after school, students would immediately brush their teeth to prevent further tooth decay and moderate their sugar intake.

All in all, the lessons were well learned in a forty minute class period.

Some students really take their lessons to heart. This was quite evident recently to Dr. Michael Stritch, Principal of St. Linus School. The school's spirited eighth grade class, who had been studying the history and culture of the 1960's, donned hippie style clothing over their blue uniforms and took to the halls in protest style, quite reminiscent of the 60's era.

The activity was the brainchild of art teacher, June Gallagher, who with the cooperation of Assistant Principal, Larry Pawelski, arranged for the students to turn the tables on their principal who happens to be a self confessed sixties buff. The purpose was to integrate areas of the cross curriculum study of the decade and teach the need for peaceful negotiation and mediation.

The protest was well organized and of course, non-violent. In weeks prior to the sit-in, the students planned with Mrs. Gallagher and chose their issue: We Want Free Pop! It was an issue all could relate to; the desire for a variety of non dairy beverages to be available to them in school without having to pay an exorbitant price. It provided the inspiration for the colorful banners, jewelry, vests, tie dyes and bandanas that the student made during their art class.

Eighth graders of St. Linus School take to the halls as they stage a protest as part of their study of the 1960's.

Student Mike Ferguson "chills" out.

Martinique Founder Passed Away

Anthony DeSantis, 93, died at his home in Oakbrook Terrace on Wednesday, June 6th following a long bout with cancer.

Mr. DeSantis founded the Drury Lane banquet halls and theaters, which included the former Martinique, which he opened in 1946 near 95th and Western Ave. in Evergreen Park.

Mr. DeSantis was a very popular and successful businessman. He owned and operated five Drury Lane theaters, which featured Broadway stars, providing affordable entertainment. Reportedly he had saved $3,000 to open the Martinique, which became an area landmark for 50 years. Productions were initially held under a tent in the parking lot. After about eleven years he moved the restaurant and opened a dinner theater featuring such stars as Debbie Reynolds, Rosemary Clooney, Vic Damone and Cesar Romero. The establishment also catered to weddings, proms, luncheons and other functions.

Then in January 2004 the Martinique closed its doors. Numerous items, such as furniture, fixtures, menus, dishes, costumes, etc., were sold at auction. According to a grandson, Kyle who is the catering manager for Drury Lane Oakbrook Terrace, Mr. DeSantis continued to work until about two months ago. Kyle reportedly said the closing of his beloved Martinique was too much for Mr. DeSantis.

The DeSantis family still owns Drury Lane Oakbrook Terrace and the Drury Lane Water Tower Place, which Mr. DeSantis opened in 2005.

Mr. DeSantis was a devote Catholic. His annual donations to many Catholic charities were very generous. In 2006 he donated $1 million to Catholic Charities.

A funeral Mass was said Monday, June 11th at 10:30 a.m. at Holy Name Cathedral.

Mr. DeSantis is survived by his wife, Lucille; daughter, Diane; brother Dante and five grandchildren.

The Oak Lawn Village Board hears

Senior Garbage Complaints

The Oak Lawn Village Board Meeting was addressed by several residents concerning the new village waste hauler, Veolia. The board was told that senior citizens are having trouble bringing the new garbage totes to the curb since they are too big for them to handle. The new totes were delivered to residents in recent weeks and they are capable of carrying 96 gallons of solid waste. However, it was stated that senior residents seldom have need for a receptacle with that much capacity.

Complaints were that most seniors do not generate a large volume of waste, sometimes only a commercial garbage bag in a week. They also complained about paying for something that they do not need. In addition, several residents complained of their garbage not being picked up at all.

It was said that seniors have a choice of either a 96-gallon tote or a 64-gallon one that is lighter. It was also said that seniors receive a discount from Veolia. Explaining the need for a tote, trustees said that they will bring uniformity to the community on garbage day and would keep streets cleaner. Being closed, the totes will not allow animals to tear into plastic bags.

As for not picking up trash, Bob Fister of Veolia, said that there was some trouble as the driver's were learning the streets in the village. However, he said that this problem should be taken care of as they learn their routes. He said that, in the future, all garbage would be picked up; if it is not, residents should call the company to report it right away.

Fister also reported that in the first month of service, over 400 tons of recyclables were picked up. This he said gave the village about $12,000 as their share of recycling revenues. He stressed the importance of recycling and said that residents should be aggressive in their recycling efforts as it benefits the village.

Brought to the board was a motion to suspend the health benefits to part-time elected officials. Trustee Jerry Hurdles brought the motion to the board stating that he did not think offering the benefits to part-time elected officials was right when other part-time employees are not offered benefits. He also said that the move would save the village approximately $30,000 a year. Trustee Steve Rosenbaum seconded the motion.

St. Francis Hospital For Sale

It has been reported that SSM Health Care of St. Louis is looking for a buyer for St. Francis Hospital and Health Center in Blue Island. The facility has been a presence in Blue Island for over 100 years. Parent Company SSM Health Care is sure that a buyer will be found for the 410-bed building by the end of the year.

SSM Health Care has retained investment banker UBS to find interested buyers for the only hospital it owns in Chicago. A company spokesperson said that a pool of candidates would soon be identified. Negotiations for the hospital are expected to begin in 45 to 60 days.

According to officials at SSM Health Care, many of the hospitals in Chicago are part of a large system. It was stated that two years ago, SSM Health Care tried to open a second hospital on 171st and LaGrange in Orland Park. This attempt was rejected by the Illinois Health Facilities Planning Board, a ruling that did not allow for expanded operation in the competitive suburban market.

It was stated that SSM Health Care would follow the "ethical and religious directives" that emphasize keeping the hospitals within the church, authorities said. Their first preference will be for a Catholic buyer.

Both Blue Island and hospital officials believe that there will be no trouble in interested buyers. The hospital employs nearly 1,500 people. In recent years, renovations to the emergency room, four new operating rooms were constructed and a new cardiovascular center and a women's center has been established. Most of the rooms have been converted from double occupancy to single occupancy.

A discussion ensued in which trustees called the motion politically motivated. Most vocal was Trustee Robert Streit who read a statement citing the worth of a trustee being more than the money they are compensated for their time and hard work, which is $7,200 a year. He also pointed out the times that both trustees voted for issues that have cost the village more money than $30,000 a year. New Trustee Carol Quinlan said that being offered benefits was not why she ran for office, but it was a minor consideration. Mayor Dave Heilmann reported that many people said that public servants maybe getting 'more than they deserved' to which he answered that trustees have an option; they can refuse the benefits and the pay. He reported that he, himself, returns the money that he is paid.

When voted on, the motion failed 4 to 2.

A resident brought up the fact that newspapers reported an incident where a police officer had to shoot a dog that was attacking him. It was stated that the incident happened at a residence where pit bulls were being bred. However, the resident pointed out that he observed dog owners who let their dogs walk without leashes and defecate without the owners cleaning up after their animals. It was stated that Oak Lawn does have leash laws. Dogs must be walked on a leash. Owners must also pick up after their animals as soon as they are finished.

It was reported that many residents of the area have been calling village hall in regards to noises at night at Home Depot. It was reported that in the last month there were about 20 phone calls to the police about noises waking residents during the night. Mayor Heilmann reported that the village had tried to talk with store managers for nearly a year with no results and this was not acceptable and against the agreement Home Depot had with the village. Village officials will pursue the complaints with store management.

In other business, a resident complained about the proposed Martello's Corner, 10425 S. Kedvale, subdivision stating that there were issues with the proposal. It was also stated that the planning and zoning board had also denied the request. However, when the ordinance was brought up for vote, it was stated that the owners of the property wanted to have the proposal tabled. The board will hear the proposal again during the July meeting.

Clerk Quinlan reported that the Special Events Commission will sponsor its first summer concert on Sunday, June 24th from 7 to 9 p.m. Mayor Heilmann lauded M. Barbara Jean Beyer who received Senior Citizen Volunteer Recognition from Tom Dart's office on May 9th. He also reported that in two years Oak Lawn would celebrate its 100th anniversary of incorporation. He said that he is advising the Special Events Commission to begin planning the celebration.

REMEMBER FATHER'S DAY THIS SUNDAY

The Unlicensed Tree Trimmer You Hire Today Could Own Your Home Tomorrow

Homeowners who hire unlicensed contractors to perform tree work may expose themselves to liability for injuries suffered by employees of the contractor. After the recent storms, too many unqualified entrepreneurs grabbed a chain saw and decided to go into the tree business.

"With thousands of dollars at stake, not to mention the integrity and appearance of your property and your personal safety, make sure you investigate before deciding which company you should hire," warns Peter Gerstenberger, senior advisor for safety, standards and compliance with the Tree Care Industry Association. "If the 'professional arborist' you hired to remove a tree drops it on your house instead of your lawn, it's too late to confirm the company is insured."

A large number of consumers have been dragged into litigation involving uninsured contractors. Why? Because if an employee of an unlicensed contractor is injured on the job, the homeowner may be responsible for his injuries or disabilities. Of course, if that unlicensed tree service drops a limb on the house - or a tree on the neighbor's house - there is probably no protection other than the homeowner's insurance.

Consumers believe that paying a tree service company "under the table" will save them money. That may or may not be true, but if there is a problem the consumer almost never has any option with an unlicensed or uninsured contractor. In addition to having no insurance, unprofessional companies are less likely to perform professional work. Consumers may end up paying more to repair the damage, or may lose the value of a specimen tree that declines due to poor care.

"Disreputable companies are renowned for ripping gutters off, breaking fences and bird baths, and even dropping trees on houses," says Gerstenberger. "Then they typically fold up and leave, never to be seen again." In most cases unlicensed tree workers are employed by companies that do not have workers' compensation insurance or liability insurance. These companies do not pay city, state, or federal taxes. They do not secure permits when required. Any of these problems can cause a homeowner costly legal problems!

How can homeowners protect themselves?

Disreputable companies tend to:

Solicit work door-to-door

Demand payment in advance

Advertise topping, an injurious practice to trees

Sell jobs without producing a written estimate or work order.

Start with the arborists listed in the phone book. Look for what the ad tells you about the company: number of years in business, professional affiliations, accreditation, licenses, certification, etc. Be aware that the credentials of someone calling himself an arborist can vary widely. Don't just hire someone with a chain saw who knocks on your door! Look for the company displaying the credentials of a professional.

When you meet with the arborist:

Ask to see current certificates of liability and workers' compensation insurance, if applicable.

Ask for local references, and check on the quality of their work and level of service.

Verify professional affiliations, such as membership in the Tree Care Industry Association.

Don't be lured by a bargain and don't pay in advance.

Also insist on a signed contract as to cost, dates when work is to be performed, and exactly what is to be done.

If you would like some professional help in creating a safer, more fire-resistant landscape, consult a professional arborist. Contact the Tree Care Industry Association (TCIA), a 69-year-old public and professional resource on trees and arboriculture. It has more than 2,000 member companies who recognize stringent safety and performance standards and who are required to carry liability insurance. TCIA has the nation's only Accreditation program that helps consumers find tree care companies that have been inspected and accredited based on: adherence to industry standards for quality and safety; maintenance of trained, professional staff; and dedication to ethics and quality in business practices. An easy way to find a tree care service provider in your area is to use the "Locate Your Local TCIA Member Companies" program. You can use this service by calling 1-800-733-2622 or by doing a ZIP code search at www.treecaretips.org.

Officers Carry Torch For Special Olympics

Beginning Sunday, June 10, law enforcement officers across Illinois will take to the streets, highways and roads of the state, carrying the Special Olympics torch to help raise funds for their hometown sports heroes – the athletes of Special Olympics Illinois. About 3,000 officers representing every branch of law enforcement will cover the 23 legs of the Illinois Law Enforcement Torch Run.

The Illinois Law Enforcement Torch Run is the single largest year-round fund-raising event benefiting Special Olympics Illinois. This intrastate relay and its various fundraisers have two goals: to raise money and increase public awareness for the athletes of Special Olympics. Each year, officers in Illinois run more than 1,500 miles carrying the Flame of Hope through the streets of their hometowns and deliver it to the State Summer Games in Normal in June.

On Friday, June 15, legs of the run from all over the state will converge on Normal. That evening at dusk, in a dramatic moment during Opening Ceremonies of the Special Olympics Illinois State Summer Games, officers from every leg of the Torch Run will enter Illinois State University's Hancock Stadium with torches lit and hand off the "Flame of Hope" to Special Olympics athletes. When the cauldron is lit and the games declared open 3,600 athletes will continue three days of competition and celebration.

When it began in 1986, the Law Enforcement Torch Run raised $16,000 in Illinois. It has since grown into the largest fundraiser for Special Olympics Illinois, raising more than $10 million since 1986. The Illinois Law Enforcement Torch Run raised $2 million in 2006, making it the third highest grossing program in the world.

Perhaps one of the most motivating factors for law enforcement officers is the knowledge that their efforts will benefit the athletes of Special Olympics Illinois. "We are involved in the Torch Run because it's such a genuine project," says Joe Peña, director of the Illinois Law Enforcement Torch Run and retired East Dundee Police Chief. "We're helping Special Olympics athletes truly experience sports and competition while building life skills."

Torch Run 2007 sponsors are: Presenting Sponsors – Dunkin' Donuts and Shop 'n Save; Gold Medal Sponsors – Illinois Knights of Columbus and CARQUEST; Silver Medal Sponsors – Illinois Association of Chiefs of Police, Illinois Sheriffs' Association and Coca-Cola; and Bronze Medal Sponsors – Illinois Fraternal Order of Police, Kane County Chiefs of Police Association and Simmons Cooper.

"Thanks to the Law Enforcement Torch Run and its corporate sponsors, Special Olympics Illinois is better able to reach more athletes and offer them more year-round training and competition opportunities. Special Olympics Illinois athletes are able to participate in the program free of charge thanks to sponsors like the Law Enforcement Torch Run," says Doug Snyder, Special Olympics Illinois president and CEO. "Special Olympics programs help the 20,000 current athletes in Illinois develop improved physical fitness and self-esteem."

In addition to donations for running, officers raise funds in various ways throughout the year, including Polar Plunges, building sprints, raffles, bike rides, golf tournaments, bowl-a-thons, concerts and more.

To get involved in Law Enforcement Torch Run activities in your area, call Jeff Henson at Special Olympics Illinois (1-800-394-0562) or email him at jhenson@soill.org or contact your local law enforcement agency.

Since being elected Cook County Commissioner of the 17th District in 2002 and re-elected in 2006, I have made it clear that one of my prime objectives was the revitalization of Swallow Cliff. Part of that has come to fruition as the stairs, or exercise area as some call it, are now being reconstructed and should be completed by the end of June.

There are now other opportunities to make Swallow Cliff, along with other venues in the Forest Preserve, even more vital recreational areas. On June 1st, the Forest Preserve District of Cook County issued a Request for Proposal ("RFP") for the development of the toboggan slides using artificial surfaces not solely dependent on natural weather conditions which would allow these areas to operate beyond the normal winter recreational season. This proposal package must be picked up from the Forest Preserve by June 15th and returned by August 3rd.

Additionally, the Forest Preserve District is making plans to issue another RFP seeking interested individuals or entities to submit proposals outlining concepts for District wide and/or specific designated areas for concessions and retail opportunities. The hope will be to find plans that are revenue generating while still keeping with the core mission of the FPD. A similar RFP was issued last year but that was for a company to manage concessions for the entire Forest Preserve District. This proposal will seek either district wide plans or plans that may pertain to just one venue within the district which would allow small businesses to make proposals as well as large companies.

I am again urging all potential vendors to review these proposals and submit plans. We have an opportunity to continue the revitalization of Swallow Cliff as well as enhancing other venues within the Forest Preserve District. Please help us ensure that these great cultural venues in our communities are given the potential to shine like the Emerald Necklace that the Forest Preserve District of Cook County has been known to be. Interested parties may get further information by calling my office (312-603-4215) or visiting my website, <http://www.liz.gorman.com>.

Termination Of Former Governor Ryan's Pension Upheld

The Circuit Court of Cook County recently upheld the termination of former Governor George H. Ryan's full pension.

Following Ryan's April, 2006 conviction on 18 counts of criminal activity, the General Assembly Retirement System of Illinois (GARS) requested an opinion from Attorney General Madigan regarding the impact of the conviction on the payment of the former Governor's pension. On Sept. 12, 2006, Attorney General Madigan issued an opinion finding that because "Ryan's extensive and reprehensible criminal conduct was directly and inherently related to his official duties as Governor and Secretary of State," his criminal conviction requires the forfeiture of his pension benefits. Madigan also concluded that the Illinois law concerning the forfeiture of pension benefits requires a total forfeiture of all of Ryan's pension benefits, not merely those that accrued during his terms as Governor and Secretary of State.

Based on this opinion, on Sept. 19, 2006, the GARS Board voted to suspend the former Governor's pension. Ryan appealed the Board's decision to the Circuit Court of Cook County. In his appeal, Ryan argued that he should not have to forfeit the pension benefits derived from his years of government employment prior to his criminal conduct.

In the courts ruling, Cook County Circuit Court Judge Martin Agran upheld the Board's decision and concluded that permitting Ryan to retain any pension benefits based on his government employment would allow future participants who engage in criminal conduct while serving in state government to protect their pension from forfeiture by simply changing positions within state government. Judge Agran found that such a result would diminish the deterrent effect of the pension forfeiture provisions in Illinois law.

"Former Governor Ryan breached the public trust, using his positions within state government to engage in widespread criminal conduct," Madigan said. "Ryan's actions were exactly the type of misconduct that our pension forfeiture law is designed to discourage. This decision confirms that public officials cannot be allowed to benefit from conduct that directly violates the public trust."

Parking Placards Legislation

Legislation initiated by Secretary of State Jesse White that increases fines up to $1,000 for people who continually abuse disability parking placards and license plates was approved by the Illinois House. The measure now moves to the governor's office for approval.

Under White's proposal (SB 1318), those caught parking with a fraudulent disability placard or license plate in spaces reserved for people with disabilities will face fines of $750 for their second offenses and $1,000 for their third or subsequent offenses.

The violator may also have his or her driving privileges, as well as the disability license plates or placard, suspended or revoked.

"It is unbelievable that able-bodied people would time and time again abuse this important program and take parking spaces reserved for persons with disabilities," White said. "The increased fines and suspensions will send a message that if you continue to violate the program you will pay the price financially as well as personally."

The legislation also clarifies that placards are not transferable and the authorized holder must be present, entering or exiting the vehicle at the time the parking privileges are being used.

The proposed legislation also states that 50 percent of each fine collected will be distributed to the law enforcement agency or agencies that issued the citation or made the arrest. This includes the Secretary of State Department of Police, where 50 percent of the fine will go into the Secretary of State Police Services Fund.

There are over 455,000 placards and over 90,000 disability plates in Illinois.

Illinois has made a major push towards full competition for television and telecommunications services through Senate Bill 678, legislation sponsored by state Rep. Jim Brosnahan, (D-Evergreen Park), that unanimously passed out of the House last week.

"This legislation is an essential first step towards competition and lower rates in Illinois," Brosnahan said. "The telecommunications industry in Illinois is past due for some serious updates and these regulations are both an opportunity for the expansion for cable providers and a way to hold the new markets accountable to consumers across the state."

Telecommunications competition has been slow to develop in Illinois due to long-standing and onerous laws requiring providers to negotiate agreements with each individual municipality where it wants to offer service, a process often lasting months or even years. To accommodate the growing markets of cable, phone and internet services, and the providers who bundle these services, SB 678 allows telephone or cable companies to receive a single statewide video agreement or franchise, cutting the bureaucratic red tape out of the current process. When companies have established guidelines, they can more easily enter the market and compete for business, hopefully providing consumers with greater service options, lower prices and better quality service.

The attorney general will be responsible for enforcing the telecommunications re-write law and making sure that telephone and cable companies are complying with its requirements. The attorney general may impose financial penalties on those companies found to be in violation of the law and can also revoke the statewide franchise rights of any company who fails to comply with the new Act.

For more information contact Rep. Brosnahan at (708) 499-2810.

Legislation drafted by State Treasurer Alexi Giannoulas aimed at helping families save more money toward their children's college tuition has been unanimously approved by the General Assembly.

The bill removes the tax penalty for families who invest in out-of-state college savings plans. It passed in the Senate (56-0) and in the House (113-0) in February. It now awaits the governor's signature.

"As elected officials, we need to make sure that Illinois families get the most out of their hard-earned dollars and can afford to send their children to college," Giannoulas said. "Illinois lawmakers have eliminated a significant barrier that punished Illinois residents who wanted to invest in out-of-state plans. This is a big win for Illinois consumers."

Along with Alabama, Illinois is the only other state that imposes a 3 percent state tax on the earnings residents receive from tax-exempt savings programs, commonly known as "529 plans," administered in other states.

"Illinois families will invest in Illinois' 529 plan because it provides them the best investment options at a low cost," Giannoulas said. For more information on Bright Start, visit www.brightstartsavings.com or call the Treasurer's office at (888) 845-4723.

Five United States Senators, including U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) have urged the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) to investigate a cigarette advertisement campaign geared to entice teenage girls to take up smoking.

According to Sen. Durbin, "Big Tobacco has spent billions of dollars marketing cigarettes to children and young adults and have encouraged millions to start smoking at an early age. Why? Children today are three times more likely to be influenced by tobacco advertising than adults. This latest Camel No. 9 campaign is more of the same. It is our responsibility to ensure that tobacco companies are not marketing their dangerous products to a vulnerable audience."

In their letter issued May 4th to the FTC, the Senators urge the investigation of "advertising practices by R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company for marketing cigarettes to children." R.J. Reynolds launched the Camel No. 9 brand in February (07) and claims the cigarettes are aimed at adult female smokers, a market segment where Camel has performed poorly.

However, anti-smoking groups argue that the product - from its name recalling an upscale perfume, to the packaging and the ads - appears designed to lure teens or young women to cigarettes. Camel No. 9 cigarettes are advertised in women's magazines under the slogan "Light and Luscious."

The Illinois Appellate Court in Springfield rendered a very significant ruling recently when it upheld the Illinois Gaming Board's (IGB) decision to revoke Emerald Casino Inc.'s (Emerald) license to operate a casino in Rosemont. In a 152-page unanimous decision, the Appellate Court concluded: "Emerald's proven violations of the Board's rules are plentiful. Each one of the violations, standing alone, could support revocation of Emerald's gaming license."

Attorney General Lisa Madigan represented the IGB in this appeal and several other suits brought by Emerald and the Village of Rosemont to prevent revocation of Emerald's license. Madigan strongly objected to a proposed settlement that would have allowed Emerald to avoid revocation and vigorously resisted numerous state and federal court actions filed by both Emerald and the Village of Rosemont seeking to operate a casino in Rosemont. The Appellate Court rules that the Attorney General had the authority to prevent the settlement and pursue the revocation of the license.

"This has been a long fight to restore and ensure the integrity of the gaming industry for the people of Illinois," stated Madigan. "I am pleased by the Court's decision affirming the revocation of Emerald's license and the protection it provides the citizens of Illinois against unsuitable casino operators who do not deserve the privilege of owning and operating a casino in Illinois."

Supporters and friends of Cook County State's Attorney Richard A. Devine are hosting a Summer Reception in his honor Wednesday, June 20th from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. at The Library Club, 190 S. LaSalle St., 40th Floor (corner of LaSalle & Adams) in Chicago. The $150 per person ticket will be snapped up by numerous business and elected notables who wish to be among the power elite. For information and reservations contact Dana Grigoroff at (312) 659-5009 or email: melangeltd@aol.com.

Legislation Increases Protection Against Gun Violence

Senate Bill 940 overwhelmingly passed the Illinois State Senate on June 6th with a vote of 48-4-1 and is on its way to the governor. The legislation, initiated by Attorney General Lisa Madigan in response to the Virginia Tech tragedy, requires Illinois to participate in the federal government's National Instant Criminal Background Check System (NICS) and closes loopholes in existing Illinois law to keep guns out of the hands of prohibited purchasers.

Senate Bill 940, sponsored by Sen. Dan Kotowski (D-33rd) and Rep. Harry Osterman (D-14th), contains two key changes to make sure that Illinois law effectively prevents access to firearms by those that are prohibited from purchasing or owning guns.

First, the bill requires Illinois to share information about persons who are prohibited gun purchasers under federal or state law with NICS. NICS was established under the 1993 Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act and is designed to allow any federal firearm licensee to be immediately supplied with information concerning whether a prospective gun purchaser is prohibited under state or federal law from owning a firearm.

Once signed into law by the governor, Illinois will join over 20 other states in sharing information with NICS regarding individuals prohibited from purchasing firearms under state and federal law. Information shared between states through NICS is critical to preventing the sale of guns to those who attempt to circumvent prevention measures by crossing state lines.

When signed into law, SB 940 also will close a significant gap in the laws governing gun purchases. Illinois law currently mandates that the Illinois State Police deny an application for or revoke a current Firearm Owner's Identification Card (FOID card) for a person whose mental condition poses a clear and present danger to himself or herself, to others or to the community. However, under the present law, the Illinois State Police only receive notice of people who have received inpatient mental health treatment. Information concerning a person whose mental condition poses an imminent danger to himself or herself, to others or to the community, but who has received outpatient, and not inpatient, mental health treatment is not submitted to the Illinois State Police. Consequently, the Illinois State Police background check system does not receive the information needed to enforce the FOID card prohibitions and to make sure a person who is precluded under the law from holding a FOID card cannot own a firearm.

SB 940 closes that loophole by mandating that the Illinois State Police receive sufficient information to effectively enforce the FOID Act. Specifically, SB 940 requires that all hospitals and mental health facilities report information to the Illinois State Police concerning individuals who are prohibited from purchasing a gun based on their mental health, regardless of whether the individuals received inpatient or outpatient mental health treatment.

The Illinois State Police acts as the point of contact for NICS and all federally licensed firearm dealers in Illinois are required to contact the Illinois State Police to determine whether the prospective gun purchaser is prohibited under federal or state law from purchasing a firearm.

Additionally, SB 940 is designed to make sure that Illinois State Police records are up to date by requiring that hospitals and mental health facilities report this information to the Illinois State Police within seven days of admission or provision of mental health services. The current law requires reporting within 30 days of admission to a hospital for inpatient treatment.

Senate Bill To Combat Internet Child Pornography Moves To Governor's Desk

If legislation passed on June 6th is signed by the governor, Attorney General Lisa Madigan said Illinois will become the first state to establish a database that will aid her office and other law enforcement in tracking down and prosecuting child pornographers.

Senate Bill 697 unanimously passed the Illinois Senate on June 6th. The bill, drafted by Madigan and sponsored by Sen. A.J. Wilhelmi (D-Joliet) and Rep. Esther Golar (D-Chicago), now goes to Gov. Blagojevich for his signature.

Senate Bill 697 features five key components:

It requires persons convicted of child exploitation offenses to provide their Internet Protocol (IP) addresses to law enforcement upon conviction.

It requires persons convicted of child exploitation offenses to register their IP addresses as part of the information provided to the sex offender registry.

It requires that offenders on parole or monitored supervised release must consent to law enforcement searches of any computers, personal digital assistants (PDAs), cellular phones and other devices that are under their control and are capable of accessing the Internet or storing electronic files. Under the provisions of SB 697, these searches are authorized only to allow law enforcement to verify the offender's IP address and ensure compliance with other parole conditions.

It establishes the Illinois Cyber-Crime Location Database (ICLD) and authorizes the Attorney General to collect, store and use IP addresses to investigate and prosecute child pornographers.

It creates the offense of aggravated child pornography for those who possess, manufacture or distribute child pornography involving children under the age of 13.

An IP address consists of a unique string of numbers assigned by an Internet provider to identify a particular Internet Account's entry point onto the Internet for the exchange of data. When an Internet user sends content via the Internet, that content carries with it the user's IP address. As a result, law enforcement investigators who obtain child pornography transmitted via the Internet may be able to determine the IP address used to send that pornography and follow the IP address directly to the specific Internet Account used to download or exchange the child pornography.

According to law enforcement reports, over the past two years, more than 56,000 individual IP addresses engaged in some form of trading or distribution of child pornography. Based on this number, Madigan said, it is clear that incidents of trading and distributing child pornography over the Internet are increasing.

Senate Bill 697 will establish Illinois as the first state to give law enforcement the ability to compile records of IP addresses and online activity of child pornographers that later can be used in criminal trials and also creates the Illinois Cyber-Crime Location Database to hold this information.

Drivin' Historic Dixie Highway

On Saturday, June 16, vintage cars will be Drivin' the Dixie, a day long tour, visiting historic towns and sites.

It is one of the most unusual car events in the state and won a Superior Achievement Award from the Illinois State Historical Society for the unique way of promoting history. The Dixie Highway is the first north to south transcontinental highway from the Great Lakes to the Gulf. Efforts were initiated in 1915 and the highway was completed in 1925. In Illinois, the Dixie is arguably the most historic road for it first began as a buffalo trail, Native American trail, Vincennes Trail and Hubbard's Trail. In 1835 the Illinois General Assembly ordered a state road to be established as the first official road: Route 1. To assist travelers, the road was marked by boulders, which were placed every mile. One boulder still exists roadside in Crete.

The road now boasts an Illinois State Historical Society marker for Dixie Highway in Homewood as well as an historic marker for Hubbard's Trail in Momence. The first tour was open to only vintage cars but because so many modern cars followed the tour six years ago and drivers wanted to join in the adventure, the organizers opened the tour to all vehicles the following years.

"We have had Model A Fords, a Stanley Steamer, a 1959 Berkeley, a 1912 Model T, a hearse, Corvettes, Studebaker Lark, Edsel Mercedes, cars that have driven the Great American Race and one directly from a museum. Some cars have appeared in movies and in television documentaries," said Elaine Egdorf, organizer. "The tour has grown to over 200 cars, almost all vintage or collector cars with repeat participants. We pass National Register Historic sites and local landmarks. We make learning about history fun."

The tour starts in Blue Island, 2433 York Street, just west of Western Avenue, with cars arriving between 8:30 a.m. and 9:30 a.m. Cars pull out at 10:15 a.m. Participants may join in any town. After stops in Posen and Hazel Crest, cars will arrive in Homewood at 11 a.m. to tour downtown via Ridge Road, Martin Avenue and Hickory Road to view the historic Gottschalk House, Illinois State Historical Marker and mileage post at Independence Park. Antique and vintage cars will park in St. Paul's Church parking lot for a 45 minute car show.

Participants can vote for their favorite car and view Willow School's historic Dixie Highway art exhibit. Children can create a cardboard box car to be entered into the People's Choice Award.

At 11:45 a.m., the path of adventure will continue to Flossmoor, Chicago Heights, Steger, Crete, Beecher, Grant Park with activities taking place at each stop: car shows, historic displays, museums open, concerts, art shows, garage sales, entertainment and refreshments. Festivities conclude in Momence with a grand prize drawing at 6 p.m. and a free concert on Rock Island at 9 p.m. The general public may view the cars and participate in the town events.

Each participating car must be registered. Pre-registration is $10 per car. Registration the day of the tour is $15, which includes tickets for raffles drawn at each participating town, coffee and rolls, a windshield decal, a Dixie Highway key chain, a hot dog lunch, a historical photo guide booklet and raffle prizes. To pre-register send a check for $10.00 to A's R Us Model A Ford Car Club, Box 3, Crete, IL, 60417. Supporting towns have passports available or call Elaine Egdorf, (708) 798-9535 for general information. For car registration information call Bob Steinmetz, (708) 596-6302. Information, passports and registration forms are available at www.drivingthedixie.org.

The Drivin' the Dixie was initiated by the Village of Homewood Heritage Committee and is sponsored by the towns of Blue Island, Posen, Hazel Crest, Homewood, Flossmoor, Chicago Heights, Steger, Crete, Beecher, Grant Park and Momence. Drivin' the Dixie is supported by the A's R Us Model A Ford Car Club of America and many historical and business organizations.

The Drivin' the Dixie efforts are now linked for all of Dixie Highway in Illinois except for Chicago since Danville, Rossville, Hoopston, Milford, and Watseka have joined. Cars may begin downstate and drive north to meet at the Island Park in Momence where a day long event is planned. An art fair, games, a swing dance band and a rock concert end the day. All events and phone numbers are listed in the passport.

Museum Of Science And Industry Hosts The City Of The Future

On June 11 the Museum of Science and Industry opened The City of the Future, an exhibition that showcases how three major U.S. cities might evolve in the next 100 years.

The exhibit is the produce of The City of the Future: A Design and Engineering Challenge, which was inspired by The History Channel® series Engineering an Empire. The series explored the architectural and engineering feats of past civilizations, and their profound effect on the development of human civilization. In partnership with The History Channel and the American Institute of Architects, Infiniti and IBM—both champions of design and innovation—sponsored this competition that dared participants in New York City, Chicago and Los Angeles to peer into the future to imagine the bold, visionary architectural and engineering solutions that will give form to our cities 100 years from now.

On display at the Museum of Science and Industry until Oct. 7, will be 10 models that came out of this dynamic competition—the overall winner of the national competition (Chicago's own UrbanLab); seven other visions of Chicago in the 22nd century, as well as the regional winners from Los Angeles and New York. Participants addressed the impact of global warming, population growth and security.

Accompanying these models will be descriptions from the firms explaining their design, the influences that shaped the idea and the goal of the project. Guests to the exhibit will also have the opportunity to create their own vision of their city in 100 years at an interactive building station.

Chicago Actor Takes Special Role As Teacher And Mentor

Chicago actor/singer Anthony Whitaker spends his days helping children to become true students of performance. On the professional teaching staff at the Beverly Arts Center (BAC), 2407 W. 111th St., Chicago, Whitaker teaches classes in comedy improv, puppetry and other theater arts. Through the BAC's Arts Outreach program, Whitaker teaches music and at St. Cajetan and St. Walter elementary schools on the south side, and St. Benedict elementary school in Blue Island, and coordinates special performance projects for Casselli and Esmond schools, also on the south side. He directed "Into the Woods Jr." for St. Benedict School and his own version of "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz" for the Worth Park District.

Whitaker began his own performance career at age ten at the Greenville Little Theater in his hometown, Greenville, SC. He has a special appreciation for nurturing performance arts in children, allowing them to develop their creative spirits while learning the necessary skills. Young theater students at the BAC also take advantage of practicing and performing on a state-of-the-art stage in a real theater.

While on break from teaching in area schools this summer, Whitaker will be working with young performers at the BAC. He'll teach two summer camps. In "Puppetry on Film" students age 8 to 14 will create puppet characters, then learn common puppetry film tricks and special effects as they film a short movie featuring their creations. This class will end with a showing of the film in the BAC Studio Theater.

Whitaker will also teach comedy improv and theater games to children age 5 to 12 in the BAC's Inter-Arts summer camp, a two-session, multi-discipline, arts based summer camp offered on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

A successful singer and songwriter, Whitaker will also find himself ensconced in two "star-making" activities at the BAC this summer. As host for Teen Open Mic nights on Thursdays, June 22, July 5, July 19, Aug. 2 and Aug. 16, 8 to 9 p.m., Whitaker will emcee talented 13- to 19-year-olds as they try out new material or show off their best work. Set in a coffee house atmosphere and open to poets, musicians, vocalists, dancers, rap artists, stand-up comedians, and talents that defy description. Participants perform in 5-minute time slots and outstanding performers may be asked to return as "headliners." To sign up to perform, call (773) 445-3838, ext. 216.

Whitaker will also emcee BAC's two South Side Idol competitions, the first Tuesday, July 10 and Thursday, July 12, and the second on Tuesday, Aug. 14 and Friday, Aug. 17. Competition will begin at 7:30 p.m., and final winners will be selected for each week. Winners will be invited to open for an upcoming performance on the BAC's main stage.

Whitaker has performed as an actor at The Royal George Theatre, Bailiwick, Theatre on the Lake and Northeastern University. He has written and performed two one-man musicals, "I Was A Teenage Judy Garland Fan" and "Stolen Stories." He is also a graduate of the Second City Conservatory Program.

As a singer/songwriter Whitaker has appeared in numerous local venues including the Old Town School of Folk Music, the Folk and Roots Festival, Uncommon Ground, the Hideout and the Empty Bottle. He has touring extensively throughout the Midwest and southeast, and is working on his first full-length CD, "Melted."

For more information on or registration for Whitaker's classes and other fine arts education opportunities through the Beverly Arts Center School of the Arts, call (773) 445-3838 or visit www.beverlyartcenter.org.

Local Designers Unite For AIDS Fashion Fundraiser

Twelve of Chicago's hottest designers have come together to raise awareness of HIV/AIDS at a unique fashion fundraiser - Make a Statement: Design for the Cure. Each designer will create an ensemble using a piece of red fabric provided to them in order to symbolize the need to end the HIV/AIDS epidemic. Models sporting the red-hot designs will work the 18-foot catwalk constructed around Transit nightclub's bar counter. Sponsored by the AIDS Foundation of Chicago's Junior Board, the event will include cocktails and a raffle.

Tickets are $50 in advance ($60 at the door) and may be purchased by phone at (312) 334-0935 or online at www.aidschicago.org/make_a_statement. Proceeds from the event will benefit the AIDS Foundation of Chicago's grant making, advocacy, and program services.

Every year in the United States, more than 40,000 people are newly infected with HIV. Half of the new infections occur in young people under age 24. In Illinois, an estimated 42,000 people are living with the disease - enough to fill every seat in Wrigley Field.

Participating designers in the fashion show include Taylor Wilson, Kristina Sparks, Jennifer Salim, Agnes Kadlubawski, Lara Miller, Michel Delon Wilson, Alistaire de Rosario, Katrin Schnabl, Jason Givens, Mee Wai, Isaac Facio and Lisa Stevens.

Windy City Cornhole/Bean Bag Classic

Articulate Promotions presents the First Annual Windy City Cornhole Classic on Saturday, July 28 at Soldier field, home to the NFC Champion Chicago Bears, where hundreds of Chicago cornhole fans, as well as other baggers from across the country will be tossing corn filled bags to win the admired Windy City Cornhole Classic Championship Cup.

Come out, rain or shine, and enjoy music from popular bands, ice-cold beer, and delicious food, while competing in this prestigious tournament. Whether you are a competitive player, a social player kickin' back a beer, or even a first time thrower, all are encouraged to come and throw a few bags. There will be T-shirts and give-aways for each participant as well as monetary prizes that will be awarded to the top places in each of the various divisions.

Hosted by the Illinois Cornhole Organization, The Windy City Cornhole Classic is the Midwest's largest organized cornhole tournament. A portion of the net proceeds will be donated to Fathers Helping Fathers, Inc., a national non-for-profit organization dedicated to helping fathers in all aspects of parenting.

Baggo, Corn Toss, Bean bags or Cornhole, as it is most commonly called, is an increasingly popular game across the nation where players toss a one-pound bag filled with corn at a sloped box with a hole at one end.

The points are awarded either by tossing the bag into the hole for three points or if the bag stays atop the box, the player earns one point. The first individual or team to score 21 wins the game; best of three games wins the match.

CICADAS - THE PLUS SIDE: They're noisy, dirty and their damage to my trees is already evident in the form of dropping leaves. The seventeen-year cicada invasion has hit all 105 of my trees. They seem to be particularly attracted to my maple trees. That's fine with me, I don't like maple trees.

Being an optimist, I try to look on the positive side of events. This I know: When the critters emerged from the soil they left 1000's of "holes," the equivalent of core aeration without the messy cores. These holes will allow the soil to breathe and let moisture, air and nutrients to enter the soil. The hulls discarded are messy, but my mulching mower will turn them into organic fertilizer - I hope! Our feathered friends don't have to look too far for a meal, giving them more time to tend to their nestling. Some of my fishing buddies are having a field day using them as bait. Keeping them alive (the cicadas, that is) and presenting them with light tackle, preferably a fly rod and allowing them to wiggle on the water surface is better than using surface baits, and fish can't resist them.

FREE FISHING CLINIC CLOSE TO HOME: Sometime between June 21st and Aug. 24th, the Illinois Department of Natural Resources will be conducting a free fishing clinic at nearby Marquette Park at 67th and Kedzie Ave. The clinic is targeted toward children ages 16 and younger, but anyone interested in learning basic fishing techniques may attend.

Instructors will present information on fish and other aquatic life, rules and regulations, as well as baiting a hook, tying a knot, casting, and how to handle and release fish back to the water. All participants are provided with rods, reels, bait and tackle for 90 minutes of catch-and-release fishing.

As a youngster growing up just three blocks from the Marquette Park lagoons, I have many pleasant memories of hours spent catching pan fish, bass and catfish on very crude tackle. The lagoons are heavily stocked with fish, clinic participants should learn a lot and have a great outdoor experience. For specific dates and times, contact Brenda McKinney at (847) 294-4137.

EVERY SCTP CAN NOW BE A CHAMPION: When it was launched six years ago, National Shooting Sports Foundation's Scholastic Clay Target Program broke out fast of the starting gate, exceeding initial expectations as youngsters responded enthusiastically to trying a new sport offered in a familiar team format, with coaches and exciting competitions, and with a national foundation supplying organizational structure and identity.

Having grown exponentially since then, SCTP began this year with more than 8,000 participants in 41 states. To keep that momentum going, the program is introducing a promotion that rewards team members who encourage friends to join the team.

Called "SCTP Champions," the recruiting program rewards participants who bring friends or classmates in SCTP with a limited-edition pin and the chance to win team prizes through a sweepstakes. Details of the promotion will be included in a mailing to all SCTP coaches and will be posted on the program's Web site: www.nssf.org/sctp.

USFWS DISTRIBUTES $600 MILLION TO STATE WILDLIFE AGENCIES: Interior Department Secretary Dick Kempthorne announced that more than $600 million will be distributed to 56 state and territorial wildlife agencies to fund conservation efforts, shooting ranges, and hunter education.

Numerous species such as the wild turkey, white-tailed deer, pronghorn antelope, American elk and mountain lion have increased in population due to improved research and habitat management funded by Wildlife Restoration. In the program's history, more than 9 million landowners were provided management assistance for wildlife and fish. State wildlife agencies have improved more than 26 million acres of habitat and developed more than 43,000 acres of waterfowl impoundment.

Sport Fish Restoration is funded by the collection of excise taxes and import duties on sport fishing equipment, motorboat and small engine fuels, and pleasure boats. Sport Fish Restoration funds are allocated to the states based on a formula that includes the land and water area, inland waters and the Great Lakes and the number of fishing licenses sold.

ATTENDANCE AT STATE PARKS: Governor Blagojevich announced that attendance figures at Illinois' more than 120 state parks and natural areas in 2006 were the largest they have been since 2002. Attendance figures for 2006 show 44,482,840 people visited a state park last year, eclipsing 2005 attendance figures by 316,429.

"Millions of people and families from Illinois and across the nation every year enjoy the beauty of our state parks and the many activities they offer. This great boost in tourism also helps strengthen the economy of the state's regions," said the Governor.

All-America Honorable Mention

St. Xavier University senior shortstop Samantha Lovato (Oak Forest/Eisenhower) and senior right fielder Nicole Barker (Chicago Heights/Marian Catholic) were both named to the 2007 NAIA Softball All-America Honorable Mention Team when the national office released the honors recently. The selection of the All-America teams takes place in conjunction with the NAIA Softball National Championship in Decatur, Ala., which wrapped up Wednesday, May 23rd at the Wilson Morgan Softball Complex.

"These honors are very well deserved," said SXU softball coach Myra Minuskin. "In addition to being our clutch hitter all season long, Sam is probably the best defensive shortstop to ever play in our program and definitely one of the best in the NAIA this year."

"Nicole used her incredible speed to get on base and constantly disrupted opponents with her base-stealing talents," continued Minuskin. "The pair had outstanding college careers and will be deeply missed next season."

Lovato led St. Xavier in several offensive categories over 44 games this spring, including doubles (14), triples (4), home runs (4) and RBI (49). She hit .401 (55-for-137) on the year and also tallied 29 runs scored and 16 stolen bases. Defensively, Lovato committed just nine errors at the shortstop position while leading the Cougars with 99 assists. Barker led SXU with a batting average of .426 (69-for-162) and 40 runs scored over all 45 games. In addition, she also tied Lovato for the team-lead with 16 stolen bases and four triples.

The Adam Walsh Child Protection Safety Act

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently announced the implementation of the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006 across Illinois, allowing private schools to have access to national criminal records and information of potential employees. Until now, only Illinois public schools had been allowed to receive this information from the FBI. This Act makes Illinois the first state in the nation to offer federal criminal history information to private schools for the purpose of employment screening.

On March 7th, Gov. Blagojevich submitted a letter to the FBI requesting Illinois be permitted to implement this law at the state level. Illinois public schools have historically been authorized to receive national criminal history record information from the FBI pursuant to the Illinois School Code. However, federal law has prohibited private entities from receiving the same data.

The Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act was signed into law by President George W. Bush on the 25th anniversary of the abduction of Adam Walsh from a shopping mall in Florida on July 27, 1981. Adam was found murdered 16 days after his abduction and the perpetrator of the crime has yet to be brought to justice.

The Illinois State Police have developed processing procedures, user's agreements, informational brochures, and training sessions as part of the Adam Walsh Act. Private schools seeking to conduct an FBI national criminal history records check pursuant to the Act can contact the Illinois State Police Bureau of Identification at (815) 740-5175.

Computers And Training To Local Fire Departments

Fire department personnel from Evergreen Park, Lemont, Oak Lawn and Posen were among 30 communities which attended workshops in Woodridge recently where they received computers, software and training that will improve their ability to report and record vital information about fires and other incidents. The equipment and training were provided at no cost to the fire departments by the Office of the State Fire Marshal (OSFM).

The National Fire Incident Reporting System (NFIRS) is an electronic system designed to help fire departments report and maintain computerized records of fires and other incidents in a uniformed manner. It was developed by the U.S. Fire Administration in partnership with the National Fire Information Council to simplify reporting and enable the fire service to examine trends on a local, state and national level to help reduce loss of life and property.

NFIRS enables fire departments to collect data on a full range of fire department activities, including structure fires, civilian and fire service casualties, emergency medical services (EMS), hazardous materials, wildland fires, apparatus, personnel and arson/juvenile firesetters.

Nearly 500 fire departments previously received the computers, software and training. Fire departments interested in the training can contact Vicki Fraase, OSFM, at (217) 558-0325 or by email at Vicki.Fraase@illinois.gov.

OAK LAWN INDEPENDENT Carjack Victims Shot

Two people were taken to Christ Medical Center in Oak Lawn on Sunday, May 27th, at about 9 p.m. after they were shot after three young men tried to carjack their vehicle, leaving the victims in critical condition.

The assailants fled in a 1998 Oldsmobile sedan after the shooting and led a police chase that involved police cars from Chicago, Oak Lawn and Evergreen Park and a Chicago police helicopter involved in the chase.

The suspects were followed onto the grounds of Mother McAuley High School in Mt. Greenwood where they turned in front of the school's gardens and fled across the street. The luckless suspects hit a tree in front of a home at 99th and Avers where they got out of the car.

Police ordered the three to throw down weapons. Police arrested the trio and took them to Christ Medical Center for treatment.

Counterfeit Currency

Recently the Oak Lawn police have investigated several calls of counterfeit $100 bills.

These bills are being printed on $5 bill paper. This is done by washing an original $5 bill and then printing a $100 bill on this paper. The way to check for this is to hold the bill up to the light and check the hologram on the right side of the bill. The face hologram should match the center picture on the bill. If it does not match it is a counterfeit bill. On the currency recovered the hologram on the right was the Lincoln head and the center photo was the Franklin picture. Business should make sure their employees are aware of this fraud.

Those needing information should contact the Oak Lawn police at (708) 422-8292 or dial 911 in an emergency.

Primary Spelling Bee

Hazeigreen School in Alsip held its second annual primary spelling bee for the first, second and third graders. They qualified for the grade level spelling bee by winning their preliminary spelling contest within their classrooms.

The teams were: The Hornets, Yellow Jackets, Bees, and Wasps. After the spelling word was given, each team conferred with each other and then printed the word on a white board. The word was judged and if correct, the team received 10 points. The first team to reach 120 points was the winner for their grade level. The winning team representing first grade was: Ashley Klein and Ryan Smith (front row). The winners in third grade were (left to right) Nidhi Mittal and Jeremy Tryban, and winning at the second grade level were Sydney Keina and Chris Burns. Congratulations to the winners and all the primary students who participated.

Superintendent Retires After Nearly 20 Years

When the science wing at Richards High School opens next fall, the facility will bear the name of retiring Superintendent Dr. Kevin G. Burns (pictured). Given his service and achievements in nearly two decades working for District 218, the honor provides a fitting tribute.

As Superintendent of District 218 since 2001, Dr. Burns has spearheaded a victorious first-time referendum campaign, maintained the district's tradition of integrating technologies into the curricula, and supervised the overhaul of graduation requirements to better meet university admission standards. During his tenure as superintendent, District 218 dramatically altered its graduation requirements to include geography, three years of math, and four years of English study.

"Each day for two decades, Kevin gave his best to District 218. He worked tirelessly for our students, staff and the community as a whole. He has played an instrumental role in making our schools wonderful places to learn and grow. I want to express my sincere gratitude for his service to District 218 and wish him the very best in the years ahead," said Michael Stillman, president of the District 218 Board of Education.

He also oversaw the initiation of a new comprehensive ninth grade program that redefined the academic, social, and personal experiences for freshmen starting in fall 2003. In the past year, the district has completed a capital improvement campaign that includes new science wings at Eisenhower and Richards high schools and a new cafeteria at Shepard High School.

While serving as principal at Eisenhower High School from 1994 to 1998, the school won a National Distinguished School Award for Title I (1997) from the U.S. Department of Education and a Connections 2000 Award (1996) for outstanding school-to-work programming from the Illinois State Board of Education (1996). Dr. Burns has a doctorate and master's degree from Loyola University Chicago and a bachelor's degree from St. Xavier University.

The Board of Education recently voted to name the new science wing at Richards High School in his honor.

Tips On Reusing Those Old Plastic Grocery Bags

It's in the bag. That's what more and more Americans are saying as they find more innovative ways to protect the environment by reusing those old grocery bags.

Though many reusers know old plastic bags are good for carrying their shoes and picking up after pets, there are a number of creative uses they may not know. Brook Alexander from "Real Simple" TV offers these ideas: You can use them not only to keep a soggy umbrella from flooding your purse, but they can also be used to make improvised knee pads when you're out weeding in the garden. Inside the house, they can be used as small trash can liners, especially in the bathrooms.

Here are a few more ideas: Instead of peeling fruits and veggies over a cutting board or into the sink, do it over a plastic bag and when you're done, toss it all into the trash. To keep your cookbook clean when you're baking, wrap a bag around everything but the page you're using.

You can also use them for your indoor plants. Just crumple bags to fill the bottom of a large pot that's too deep for your plant. This will cut down on potting soil (just make sure not to plug the drainage hole).

One offbeat idea is to use them as wrapping paper. Rifle through your bags to find the prettiest and most colorful, then triple bag the gift and tie all three sets of handles into a knot. Cut the tops of the loops and fan the pieces out to make a plume.

Good news for ardent recyclers is that plastic bags can be recycled just like plastic bottles. In many areas supermarket chains and municipalities have begun implementing programs to reclaim your grocery bags and recycle them into things such as plastic lumber for weather-resistant decking. And old plastic grocery bags might even be recycled into new plastic grocery bags. Recycling is not always available so you should check with your local recycling program to find out what plastics are recycled in your area.

Fox Lumber To Rebuild

Alsip officials gave approval at a recent board meeting to the owners of Fox Home Center Lumber and Supply to use a temporary trailer for their business. The trailer will be on the Fox property until the business can be rebuilt in the wake of a major fire that occurred on Mother's Day.

Fox Home Center and Lumber and Supply, owned and operated by the Laird family, has been in Alsip for 45 years. Village officials were elated that the owners plan on rebuilding the business.

The fire destroyed the main building and part of the lumberyard in a five-alarm fire that drew a total of 145 firefighters from 25 area fire departments.

Thoughts On Health & Nutrition

by
Lucinda K. Lysen, RD, RN, BSN

A PORTION MAY NOT BE A SERVING

Ever eat something only to find that the portion per serving was really half of what you just ate? This is not so uncommon. According to research at Vanderbilt University, a common pitfall when checking nutrition labels is failing to factor in serving size. And even when people do this, they often miscalculate how much they're eating. Americans' inability to understand portion control is one reason cited for the country's climbing obesity rates.

Vanderbilt's study was conducted between June 2004 and April 2005 when the low carb craze was at its height, so many of the questions involving serving size focused on carbohydrate counts. Researchers found only about a third of the volunteers correctly estimated how many carbs were in a 20-ounce bottle of soda. "Most people don't realize those have 2.5 servings," said Dr. Russell Rothman, lead author of the study.

In the Vanderbilt study, similar mistakes were made on other foods: bagels, a microwave dinner, peanut butter, a pint of ice cream, cookies and candy. That was despite nearly all respondents saying they regularly check nutrition information.

Established by the federal Food and Drug Administration in 1993, a serving size is often smaller than most Americans eat in one sitting. And bigger packaging over the years may have distorted perceptions.

With two-thirds of Americans overweight or obese, the FDA recently solicited suggestions on how to tweak nutrition labels and serving sizes to make them more useful. Consumers suggested labels that reflect the entire package for foods like muffins, which are typically eaten in one sitting, but are the equivalent of two or more servings.

The food industry has responded to the confusion in recent years with a slew of products that allow people to visualize what a serving really looks like. Chips, crackers, cookies and pudding now come in handy 100 calorie packs, and single serving packaging has exploded in popularity. The downside to this, of course, is that you get what you pay for, or you pay for what you get! The cost of such products is higher than what you can buy in much larger quantities, or in bulk.

Age-Related Macular Degeneration Prevention

Of all age-related diseases, perhaps nothing is more dreaded than age-related macular degeneration (AMD) - a deterioration of the retina that leads to eventual blindness. Commonly diagnosed in people over the age of 55, instances of AMD have increased dramatically over the past decade as average life expectancy continues to reach all-time highs. Fortunately, experts state that preventing AMD can be as simple as selecting a diet rich in omega-3 fatty acids. According to Salmon of the Americas executive director Arlene Riera-Daubon, farmed salmon is one of the easiest ways to obtain the nutrient.

A new study published in the Archives of Ophthalmology, in fact, states that consumption of fish rich in omega-3 can cut the risk of developing AMD by as much as 40 percent. The study comes on the heels of recent research by the Harvard University School of Public Health dispelling myths associating salmon consumption with mercury contamination. This, says Riera-Daubon, is just one of many reasons that salmon should be a staple on family menus. While both wild and farmed salmon make up a healthy diet, farmed salmon contains larger amounts of the beneficial omega-3 fatty acids.

"Omega-3 is associated with more than just eye health. It improves memory function, benefits the circulatory system, and contributes to all-around bodily improvement," says Riera-Daubon. "People of all ages should be including farmed salmon on their weekly menu. After all, it's never too late or too early to focus on health and it's easy to see how farmed salmon contributes to a healthy body."

"Fight The Bite"

With temperatures climbing upwards, the Cook County Department of Public Health (CCDPH) is once again this year urging the public to protect themselves from mosquito-borne illnesses by taking special precautions to "Fight the Bite."

CCDPH has begun its yearly surveillance to identify mosquitoes, birds and humans that may be infected with West Nile virus (WNV). The Health Department monitors traps in several suburban locations to survey and test mosquitoes for the virus. In addition, CCDPH is picking up a limited number of birds for laboratory testing.

CCDPH urges everyone to Fight the Bite this summer: Apply mosquito repellent containing 20-35% DEET, picaridin, or oil of lemon eucalyptus primarily to clothing. Concentrations of 10% DEET or less are recommended for children. Always follow directions on the container. Mosquito activity is heaviest from dusk until dawn. Limit time outdoors during these hours. If you must be outside, keep skin covered by wearing long-sleeved shirts, pants and socks. Check around the outside of your property for containers that could hold water. Water that is allowed to stagnate for three or four days becomes a breeding ground for mosquitoes. Be sure screens on windows and doors throughout your home are intact and fit tightly to prevent entry of insects. Keep gutters around home cleared of debris and in good repair.

Mosquitoes become infected after biting a bird that harbors the illness and human infection may occur after being bitten by an infected mosquito. Most people infected with WNV have no symptoms of illness and never become ill. But illness can occur 3-15 days after an infected bite and cause symptoms of fever, headache and body aches.

The disease can affect all ages, but people over the age of 50 and those with chronic disease, such as heart disease or cancer may be at-risk for serious complications from encephalitis or meningitis. For that reason, people who experience high fever, confusion, muscle weakness, severe headaches, or a stiff neck should see a doctor immediately.

For a complete list of birds that the health department will collect, or to download a dead bird reporting form, visit www.cookcountypub.lichealth.org, or call CCDPH at (708) 492-2000. TDD for speech/hearing impaired: (708) 492-2002. More information is also available at: www.cdc.gov/ncidod/dvbid/westnile/index.htm or www.idph.state.il.us/cnvhealth/wnv.htm.

Cancer Survivor Day

Cancer survivors joined their families and friends from all over the Chicago and community Sunday, June 3 in celebration of National Cancer Survivors Day. The celebration, co-sponsored by Little Company of Mary Hospital and Health Care Centers and the Hilton Oak Lawn included a spiritual liturgy, brunch and featured guest speaker, Robert Jordan, WGN-TV weekend anchor and prostate cancer survivor.

Little Company of Mary's Manager of Outpatient Oncology Services, Beth Vacavik, R.N., M.S., O.C.N. emceed the morning's festivities and Sister Sharon Ann Walsh graciously welcomed guests with a beautiful reminder of how blessed The Center is to be able to honor new and returning cancer survivors. Reverend Joseph Ruiz then led a beautiful liturgy that set the tone for a joyous morning.

Following the brunch, Jordan who was diagnosed with prostate cancer in October 2005 and underwent a da Vinci surgical prostatectomy in January 2006, spoke about his battle with cancer and encouraged all to be conscious about their health.

Jordan first joined WGN-TV in 1973 as a general assignment reporter and he also served as an anchor for the One O'Clock News. He left WGN-TV in 1978 and joined the CBS News Midwest Bureau in Chicago where he worked for two years as a reporter, covering stories in the Midwest for network nightly news with Walter Cronkite. He then returned to WGN-TV in 1980. Among the work, Jordan has completed at WGN-TV are several documentaries and news series.

In 2006, Little Company of Mary joined the ranks of the academic medical centers as it offers physicians the opportunity to employ the da Vinci Surgical System in prostate cancer surgery. A minimally-invasive da Vinci robot helps surgeons perform complex surgeries through tiny openings using state-of-the-art robotic technology. Patients who undergo da Vinci prostatectomies typically enjoy shorter hospital stays and earlier returns to full activities.

Last Fall, LCM also began performing High Dose Rate Brachytherapy (HDR) for prostate cancer patients. HDR involves placing temporary radioactive catheters directly into the prostate with sophisticated computer planning to deliver the most precise radiation treatment available. This technique maximizes the cancer treatment and minimizes side effects.

Power Wheelchairs Are Available

The Senior Wheels USA Program makes available power wheelchairs to senior citizens and the permanently disabled at no cost to the recipient, if they qualify.

The power wheelchairs are provided to those who can no longer walk safely, nor self-propel a manual wheelchair, and who meet the additional guidelines of the program.

If the patient's need is for use in the home, call for more information to see if they qualify. Call toll-free at 1-800-246-6010.

The Senior Wheels USA Program's main purpose and goal is to develop public awareness that there are assistance options that allow senior citizens (as well as the permanently disabled) to remain independent in their own homes. Without this awareness and assistance, the family may prematurely choose a nursing home, or make an unnecessary retail purchase on power mobility equipment.

Those who do not meet all the requirements of the program, may still be able to get help through the donation program. This is made available when people call wanting to donate their power wheelchairs that are no longer needed.

Illinois Physician Disciplinary Rate Improves

Reflecting the Blagojevich Administration's commitment to improving access to high quality health care, Illinois has dramatically improved its ability to act against physicians who violate their patients' trust. Illinois now ranks 12th for its enforcement of disciplinary cases against physicians, according to an analysis released by Public Citizen on June 6th.

The department has streamlined the way it handles medical disciplines. In cases where a mandatory report is received, investigators immediately request or subpoena medical records, rather than wait until the initial review is completed, thus allowing the case to move forward more quickly if an investigation is warranted. IDFPR has a full-time medical practice coordinator, an experienced team of medical investigators and a prosecution team that consistently presents solid cases before the Medical Review Board and Administrative Law Judges. The department is also more aggressively disciplining physicians who have substance abuse issues and acting more swiftly on disciplining doctors who have been disciplined in other states. Finally, the hard work of the Medical Disciplinary Board has reduced the backlog of cases and increased the number of physicians who receive significant disciplines.

Using data collected by the Federation of State Medical Boards (FSMB) the Public Citizen Health Research Group found that Illinois has increased its effectiveness in disciplining physicians for each of the past five years. The state is now ranked 12 in the nation for the rate of serious disciplinary actions taken against licensed doctors, up from 18 last year. Illinois' ranking for 2002 was 41 and in 2003 it rose to 35. In 2004 the state ranked 25. Meanwhile, the number of complaints has stayed relatively constant with complaints against about 5% of the doctors practicing in the state.

In 2006, the Illinois Dept. of Financial and Professional Regulation sanctioned 172 physicians through the loss of license privileges or the restriction of those privileges. The physicians were disciplined for actions ranging from mishandling of payments to gross negligence. To review the reports cited above, click on Federation of State Medical Boards or Public Citizen's Analysis.

A Prayer for Our Troops and Soldiers

Dear Lord,
There's a young man far from home,
called to serve his nation in time of war;
sent to defend our freedom on some distant foreign shore.
We pray You keep him safe,
we pray You keep him strong,
we pray You send him safely home...
for he's been away so long.
There's a young woman far from home,
serving her nation with pride.
Her step is strong, her step is sure,
there is courage in every stride.
We pray You keep her safe,
We pray You keep her strong,
we pray You send her safely home... for she's been away too long.

Bless those who await their safe return.
Bless those who mourn the lost.
Bless those who serve this country well,
no matter what the cost.
God, Bless America!

Good-bye until next week. God bless you and your family and God bless America.

Senior Citizens Are Living Safer At Home

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently reminded eligible seniors living independently to sign up for the Emergency Home Response Service, a home-monitoring service launched in October and run by the Illinois Dept. on Aging (IDoA). The service provides two-way voice pagers that automatically link seniors to a support center that can quickly send help in case of an emergency. Last week, IDoA delivered its ten thousandth monitor.

"More than 10,000 Illinois seniors who live independently in their own homes feel safer, thanks to these pagers that can help them get emergency assistance quickly. But there are thousands more who can take advantage of this service, and get some peace of mind for themselves and their families, and I urge them to call our Senior HelpLine at (800) 252-8966 and sign up," said Gov. Blagojevich.

On Oct. 15, 2006, Gov. Blagojevich launched the Emergency Home Response Service program. The Emergency Home Response Service is run by the Illinois Dept. on Aging (IDoA) Community Care Program. The department expects another 5,000-10,000 seniors to use the service, which is free for seniors who qualify for the program.

To be eligible for Emergency Home Response, an individual must:

- Be an Illinois resident - 60 years of age or older.
- Have non-exempt assets of $17,500 or less (this does not include home, vehicles or home furnishings).
- Have a signed physician's statement confirming need of this service.

Have an assessed need for long-term care.
Other assistance available through the program includes care coordination, home care aides, adult day service and other flexible services intended to help seniors continue living independently at home.

According to nationwide figures from the National Center for Injury Prevention and Control, for millions of older Americans, domestic accidents present a serious health risk. In the United States, one of every three persons age 65 and older falls each year. Among older adults, falls are the leading cause of injury, deaths and the most common cause of injuries and hospital admissions for trauma. In 2003, more than 13,700 people age 65 and older died of fall-related injuries. Another 1.8 million were treated in emergency departments for nonfatal injuries related to falls.

Fractures are the most serious health consequence of falls. Eighty-seven percent of all fractures among older adults are due to falls. Approximately 250,000 hip fractures, the most serious fracture, occur each year among people over age 65. Half of all older people hospitalized for hip fractures cannot return home or live independently after their injury.

"Gov. Blagojevich is committed to improving the quality of life for older persons as well as making sure that members of our greatest generation are not forced to give up their homes," IDoA Director Charles D. Johnson said. "The Emergency Home Response Service has been a great success and builds on the Department's focus to reduce the need for nursing home placement. I want to encourage those eligible seniors to consider the use of this service so that they can remain safe living in their own home for a long time."

Alternative Retirement Offer Approved By State House

Cook County Board President Todd Stroger recently applauded the passage of Senate Bill 377, which is expected to increase the funding ratio of the Cook County and Forest Preserve District pension funds by allowing eligible employees to voluntarily separate from service in exchange for an enhanced lump-sum payment of their pension contributions.

The offer allows current County and Forest Preserve District employees in active service as of Dec. 31, 2006 through the signing of the bill - when it becomes law - to increase the value of their personal contributions to the County's Pension Fund by 50% if they agree to voluntarily resign from County service, forfeit accrued pension credits, and separate employment within 60 days of the date the legislation becomes law. Employees must withdraw the total value of their pension contributions to take advantage of the offer.

Because the employees' service is effectively deleted from the County's pension fund liability in exchange for a lump-sum payment, the cost of pension benefits to these employees is eliminated, at a savings over the long term to the County's and Forest Preserve's pension funds. The legislation is budget-neutral to Cook County.

Cook County's offer is modeled on a similar program deployed last year by the State of Illinois, the 2006 Alternative Retirement Cancellation Payment, or ARCP. That program allowed eligible state employees to receive a lump-sum payment of their contributions with regular interest times two.

Virtually the entire workforce of Cook County and Forest Preserve is expected to be eligible for the offer. Senate Bill 377 now returns to the Illinois State Senate for its consideration of President Stroger's pension refund proposal.

ASPCA Applauds Passage Of Illinois' H.B. 3614

The ASPCA® (The American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals®) applauded the passage of H.B. 3614, sponsored by Rep. Ed Sullivan, Jr. and Sen. Pamela Althoff. The bill will now go to the Governor for his signature.

H.B. 3614 will increase the penalty for animal fighting to a felony, regardless of what form it takes. Currently, only dog fighting is a felony under state law but all other forms of animal fighting—including cockfighting—are misdemeanors.

"The ASPCA is strongly opposed to any kind of animal fighting, since it greatly endangers the animals being made to participate—but it has also become increasingly clear that public safety is greatly endangered any time animal fighting takes place," said Ed Sayres, president & CEO of the ASPCA.

"Animal fighting also fosters a generally pervasive attitude that violence towards animals is not only acceptable, but a means of entertainment. We are extremely pleased with the outcome of this bill and grateful to Rep. Sullivan and Sen. Althoff for sponsoring it."

Research has shown that misdemeanor penalties are ineffective in deterring animal fighting ventures. "The minimal fines and fees associated with misdemeanors are inconsequential, as the payoff for a successful fight far outweighs the risk of having to pay a meager fine," said Ledy VanKavage, Senior Director of Legal Training and Legislation for the ASPCA. "These fines are often viewed by those who arrange animal fights as the 'cost of doing business.'"

"Case in point, approximately $100,000 was confiscated by the Winnebago Sheriff's department from a cockfighting bust near Rockford, Ill.," added Ms.

VanKavage, who worked closely with legislators to implement the bill.

Founded in 1866, the ASPCA® (The American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals®) was the first humane organization established in the Western Hemisphere and today has one million supporters. The ASPCA's mission is to provide effective means for the prevention of cruelty to animals throughout the United States. The ASPCA provides national leadership in anti-cruelty, animal behavior, humane education, government affairs and public policy, shelter support, and animal poison control. The NYC headquarters houses a full-service animal hospital and adoption facility. The Humane Law Enforcement department enforces New York's animal cruelty laws and is featured on the reality television series "Animal Precinct" on Animal Planet. Safety Tips For Outdoor Grilling

Warm weather is finally here and people throughout Illinois are busy making plans to enjoy outdoor activities during the summer months. To help people enjoy a safe summer this year, the Illinois State Fire Marshal's Office is working to increase awareness of summer fire safety tips.

According to the National Fire Protection Assn. (NFPA), gas-fueled and charcoal grills are involved in nearly 1,000 residential structure and home outdoor fires each year in the United States, many due to grills placed too close to the house or other combustible materials. In 2002, grill-related fires resulted in property loss of $30 million nationally. Statistics from the Illinois State Fire Marshal's Office show that nearly 170 grill-related fires were reported in 2006.

Most fires caused by grills could be prevented by following these safety tips:

General Outdoor Grilling Tips

- Gas and charcoal barbecue grills must be used outdoors only. If used indoors or in any enclosed spaces, such as tents, they pose both a fire hazard and the risk of exposing occupants to toxic gases such as carbon monoxide.
- Determine a safe location for the grill, well away from siding, deck railings and out from under eaves and overhanging branches.
- Place the grill a safe distance from lawn games, play areas and foot traffic.
- Keep children and pets away from the grill area - declare a three-foot "kid-free zone" around the grill.
- Use long-handled grilling tools to enable the chef to keep a safe distance from heat and flames.
- Periodically remove grease or fat buildup in trays below grill so it cannot be ignited by a hot grill.

Charcoal Grills

- Purchase the proper starter fluid and store the can out of reach of children and away from heat sources.
- After applying charcoal lighter fluid to coals, wait a minute before lighting the coals. This allows the concentration of explosive vapors to dissipate.

- Never add charcoal starter fluid when coals or kindling have already been ignited, and never use any flammable or combustible liquid other than starter fluid to get the fire going.
- Be careful not to spill any fluid on your clothing or in the area surrounding the grill.
- Hot coals should always be disposed of in designated containers. Plenty of water should be poured on coals to completely extinguish the flames and cool the coals.

Gas Grills

- Check the gas cylinder hose for leaks before using if for the first time each year. A light soap and water solution applied to the hose will quickly reveal escaping propane by releasing bubbles. If you determine your grill has a gas leak, turn off the gas tank and grill and have the grill serviced by a professional. If the leak doesn't stop after turning the gas and grill off, call the fire department.
- If you smell gas while cooking, immediately get away from the grill and call the fire department. Do not attempt to move the grill.
- Use only equipment bearing the mark of an independent testing laboratory. Follow the manufacturer's instructions on how to set up the grill and maintain it.
- Always shut off the valve to a fuel source when it is not in use.
- Never start a gas grill with the lid of the grill closed. The propane or natural gas may accumulate inside, and when ignited could blow the lid off, causing injury.
- Never store propane gas cylinders in buildings or garages. If you store a gas grill inside during the winter, disconnect the cylinder and leave it outside.

For more fire safety information, go to the OSFM web site at www.state.il.us/osfm or call (217) 785-1040.

Initiative To Combat Drunk Driving

Legislation that cracks down on drunk drivers has passed both chambers of the General Assembly and now moves to the governor's office for his approval. The bill is the result of joint efforts among Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD), Secretary of State Jesse White, and the bill's sponsors: Sen. John Cullerton (D-Chicago) and Rep. Robert Molaro (D-Chicago).

Senate Bill 300 will require all first-time DUI offenders who wish to obtain driving relief during the period of statutory summary suspension to install on their vehicle a breath alcohol ignition interlock device (BAIID). Motorists are required to blow into the BAIID, which measures their blood alcohol content level. The device is designed to prevent DUI offenders from driving after having consumed alcohol.

"This measure will help improve roadway safety for all of us," said Secretary White. "Statistics show breath alcohol ignition interlock devices are very effective in preventing subsequent DUI offenses."

New Mexico implemented a similar law nearly two years ago and experienced in the first year a 12 percent reduction in alcohol-related fatalities. Moreover, studies show BAIIDs are effective in reducing subsequent offenses by up to 90 percent while on the vehicle.

"This is one of the most important pieces of DUI legislation passed in Illinois in several years because ignition interlocks stop vehicles from being driven by those who are drunk," said Glynn Birch, national president of MADD. "Illinois continues to raise the bar for other states. MADD applauds the state of Illinois for protecting its motorists from the dangers of drunk driving."

The bill also increases the length of the statutory summary suspension from three months to six months for those offenders that failed the breath alcohol test at time of arrest and from six months to 12 months for those offenders that refused the breath alcohol test at time of arrest.

In addition, the bill eliminates Judicial Driving Permits (JDPS) for first-time DUI offenders, and instead requires those offenders who wish to drive to install the BAIID before driving relief is granted. DUI offenders will be monitored during the entire time the BAIID is installed in their vehicles.

DUI offenders who cause death, great bodily harm, are under age 18 or have a prior conviction of reckless homicide are ineligible for driving relief.

"I would like to commend MADD for this initiative," said White. "They are working to enact similar legislation throughout the country in an effort to prevent the senseless tragedies caused by drunk driving."

Senate Bill 300 has an effective date of Jan. 1, 2009.

Salmonella Warning

Dr. Eric E. Whitaker, state public health director, is warning the public about handling birds, such as baby chicks and ducks, and the risk of disease. Two Illinois Salmonella ser. Montevideo cases from separate households in Madison County match a multi-state outbreak pattern linked to contact with birds (ducklings and chicks). Both cases have reported contact with birds purchased from the same local chain feed store and both have onset of illness in May. It is not yet known how many locations across Illinois have received infected birds so anyone purchasing animals needs to be cautious.

"A person can contract salmonellosis through contact with animals, such as handling birds, cleaning cages, feeding and touching them," said Dr. Whitaker. "You should always wash your hands with soap and water after any type of contact with animals."

Salmonella bacteria can be found in feces of animals, including birds. Animals can become infected and can then infect humans in contact with the animal's fecal material. The animal may show no signs of illness.

Symptoms of salmonellosis in people can last several days to a week and include diarrhea and fever. Symptoms usually appear six to 72 hours after exposure to the organism.

If persons have symptoms of diarrhea and fever following contact with baby chicks or ducklings they should seek attention from a health care provider and call their local health department.

Fire Department Grant

On Wednesday, June 14th, the Oak Lawn Fire Department was awarded a grant from the Fireman's Fund Insurance Company in the amount of $15,195. The grant will be used to purchase new heavy-rescue extrication equipment. The tools similar to the "jaws of life" will help Oak Lawn's firefighters quickly and safely extricate accident victims from their vehicles. The equipment will include a power unit, heavy duty cutter and spreader. This equipment is half the weight of its predecessor and more than twice as powerful.

The equipment is being paid for by the Fireman's Fund, which provides grants to fire departments through its Fireman's Fund Heritage program. As part of the initiative, every employee is able to nominate a fire department for a grant. A special regional task force of employees and agents then reviews the nominations and selects winners. Jose Beltran, an underwriting manager, nominated Oak Lawn.

Roof Worker Electrocuted

David Vainisi, of Chicago was killed as he worked on the roof of an Oak Lawn building located at 10220 Cicero. According to officials, Vainisi was electrocuted by a Commonwealth Edison power line that was dangling close to the building's roof.

Vainisi was one of eight workers on the building. He was the only one hurt in the accident. He was working a few feet from where three power lines hung overhead. Officials said. Power had been cut to the building indefinitely after the accident.

Authorities explained that one of two things might have caused the electrocution death. Vainisi had a shovel that may have touched the wire, or the electricity may have jumped from the power line to him.

It was stated that the current charred his body and pitched it over the edge of the commercial building leaving it hanging there and igniting a small fire. The jolt also welded a door shut inside the building.

Vainisi was pronounced dead at 12:16 p.m. at Christ Medical Center in Oak Lawn. Representatives from Commonwealth Edison said that they are waiting for the completion of an investigation of whether the live power lines were deemed too close to the building. They also said that they are not aware of a minimum distance for power line to be kept from buildings. The representatives offered their condolences to Vainisi's family and stated that they will work with authorities in the investigation.

Stroger Administration Marks Six Month Tenure

Cook County Board President Todd Stroger has marked the first half year of his administration - a period characterized by both great challenges and a series of important achievements. The list below bulletpoints developments in a variety of sectors of Cook County government in the last six months, with a focus on arenas directly under the purview of the Office of the President.

Progress on professionalizing and de-politicizing county hiring practices.

- Supported supplemental Shakman relief order before taking office. At first board meeting, oversaw passage of order.
- Also at first board meeting, co-sponsored critical reforms to strengthen the County's Office of Inspector General and to support my commitment to zero tolerance of corruption in Cook County government.

Tackling the budget deficit.

- Instructed department heads and employees to meet a 17% across-the-board reduction in costs to tackle deficit.
- Mandated offices to focus on delivery of core services, particularly in health care and public safety.

Progress on professionalizing operations.

- Updates to Cook County Procurement Code, including a requirement that bidders comply with County Ethics Code - including campaign disclosure requirements and provisions that strictly prohibit soliciting or receiving gifts.
- Procurement Code improvements to competitive bidding process, public oversight of contracts and proposals, and creation of framework for electronic procurement process to enhance access, transparency for vendors and public.
- Initiated Phase One of redesigned Purchasing Dept. web site, will launch Phase Two later this month.
- Modernization efforts are expected to assist small, minority and women-owned businesses by providing opportunities for business development, vendor education and support.

Increased operational efficiency.

- Transitioned Cook County into the deregulated electric energy market by procuring a new electric supplier for over 14 million square feet of County space, minimizing significantly increased costs due to higher energy rates.
- Industrial engineers working on efforts to privatize a number of support functions at the Juvenile Detention Center and Stroger Hospital, changes expected to cut costs by several million dollars per year.
- Forest Preserve District continues to hold down operating costs by exploring new opportunities to privatize services, an approach that has been wildly successful in golf courses.

- Turning around the long-troubled Juvenile Detention Center.
- Currently working with court monitors and policymakers to revamp the management structure, install new personnel practices, bring in new executive leadership and - through legislation in Springfield - shift control of the agency to the Office of the Chief Judge.

Targeting community and economic development.

- Developing series of trade missions and collaborative programs to provide vital networking and relationship-building opportunities with little cost to the County, and long-term gains in trade, job development and economic vitality. April jumpstart of Sicilian collaboration and enterprise development part of this effort.
- Recently liberalized property tax incentives to promote reoccupation of abandoned commercial, industrial buildings.
- Launched effort to work more closely with municipalities throughout Cook County to promote redevelopment of tax delinquent properties. In April, hosted a special meeting for all municipalities interested in participating in the 2007 Tax Scavenger Sale through the County's No Cash Bid Program.
- Working to roll out new affordable housing program and new workforce housing program.
- Brought new leadership to POET, which is working to realign resources to focus more on training, to increase number of job placements, and increase average wage at the time of placement.

Progress in environmental responsibility.

- In late May, will announce participation in a project with other countries to reduce greenhouse gases.
- Shaved millions off energy bills by aggressively encouraging use of lower-cost lighting and heating technologies - from state-of-the-art fluorescent bulbs to green building technologies that cut heating and cooling costs.
- Capital planning and facilities management teams are working hard to ensure that all renovation projects maximize energy efficiency and set example for environmentally responsible governance.
- Highway Dept. created multi-agency task force to explore new technologies for road building. Started two road construction projects - one north suburbs, one south suburbs - that use recycled tire rubber in paving process.

Efforts to improve our public health care system.

- Embarked on ambitious program of reorganization and restructuring designed to deploy new efficiencies while maintaining highest standards of medical care for the patients who depend on us for service.
- Recruited and empowered blue ribbon committee to review, approve and have oversight over proposed financial restructuring plan.
- Consolidated operations in human resources, public affairs and finances, reviewing more consolidation options.
- Brought in needed professional talent, including John Cookingham as the Health Bureau's new CFO, and Cook County's former CFO, Tom Glaser, as the Bureau of Health Services' Chief Operating Officer - a new position.
- Contracted with vendors to install new "superbill system" to ensure collection of subsidies and insurance dollars.
- Consolidated clinics by half from 26 to 13 with negligible impact in service, continuing to serve fully 96% of patient base and eliminating $10 million in costs from ambulatory health care system.
- Moved to improve services at Stroger Ambulatory Screening Clinic, which functions as gateway to health system.
- Fantus Lab, Fantus Pharmacy, Specialty Care Center and other clinical units have also been targeted for major overhauls to produce greater efficiencies and increase revenues.
- General Medicine Clinic at Stroger, system's busiest and largest adult primary care clinic, logged nearly 70,000 patient visits last year and generated just over $800,000 in revenue. But many examining rooms desperately needed refurbishment and were virtually unusable, so we've undertaken massive renovation to double the number of ambulatory screening rooms from 12 to 24.
- Working aggressively to select and train competent managers, add support staff where necessary... particularly health advocates and clerical staff...and ensure that productivity and revenue data is accurate and up-to-date.
- Pharmacy operation that filled over 4.6 million prescriptions last year through mail order and six pharmacy operations at Stroger, CORE, Fantus, Provident and Oak Forest Hospitals is working to cut waiting lines, despite fact that we fill 18,000 prescriptions per day system-wide, with much lower staffing ratio than comparable systems. Working to address staffing levels and vacancy rates so operations run more smoothly and efficiently.

- Next steps include adding second Fantus pharmacy, second Stroger pharmacy, opening new Provident pharmacy, enlarging Oak Forest pharmacy, replacing aging computer software, adding Central/ Mail Robotic pharmacy at Stroger Hospital. Also expanding efforts to capture free and low-cost medications for patients.
- Improved health care methodologies for County Jail detainees, by consolidating mental health services into one division, centralizing pharmacy distribution, lab work, medical records, psych clinics and crisis intervention response.
- Instead of screening for Sexually Transmitted Diseases at intake - which raised serious privacy concerns for inmates - established a STD clinic with new info, outreach tools to get detainees services they need.
- Cut back on moonlighting at Cermak, ensuring site is now largely covered by staff doctors and health care providers.
- Automating order systems for lab work, radiology, clinical notes and appointments, and bringing Cermak into compliance with court orders by contracting with Isaac Ray Center for mental health services; increasing level of activity therapy by over 100 hours per week, and developing plans to computerize entire 10,000-detainee-campus, which is currently managed by an antiquated paper-based system.
- Moving to revamp pathology operations throughout health care system, by implementing new laboratory model in February and bringing on a new medical director and administrative director. Overtime in laboratory system has already been cut by 55%, and staff reductions have saved the system $1.2 million.
- Cut turn-around time for top five most ordered lab tests by roughly 10%.
- Created overlapping shifts, reduced operating hours where viable, established competitive wage packages for health care providers, and moved aggressively to fill vacant positions to cut overtime costs, which cost almost $6 million last year. Initiatives expected to save more than $7 million over two years, and in recent pay period, reduced overtime costs roughly 30 percent compared to a year ago.
- Stepped up efforts to ask outside partners to help shoulder the burden of health care in the region.
- Asked private hospitals to join us in meeting the costs necessary to maintain the County's Internet Referral Information System, or "IRIS," linking to 18 federally qualified health centers, in the wake of demise of federal funding for this program. Doctors at those sites (who are not affiliated with or credentialed by Cook County) have until now been able to schedule patients for specialty diagnostic medical services at Cook County's Specialty Care Center. The Center provided $20 million in highly specialized medical care to patients last year.

Looking at strategies to ensure that Cook County is compensated for care that it provides to residents who hail from other counties - and in some cases, even other states.

Beat The Heat & Save On Your Electric Bill

As the temperature rises, energy use and costs typically rise as well. There are many simple, economical ways to boost comfort, save energy and reduce electric bills, and improve safety, according to the Illinois Electric Council (IEC).

"There are easy energy-saving steps that can pay for themselves relatively quickly," says Molly Hall, IEC Executive Director. "Weather stripping and caulking are examples of inexpensive ways to improve efficiency and cut energy costs year-round."

A considerable percentage of total residential energy cost is spent cooling homes. Reduce energy costs and maintain peak air-conditioner operation with a cleaning and tune-up. It also is important to clean or change filters monthly during the cooling season. An efficiently running cooling system will save dollars. If you are purchasing a new unit, check the efficiency rating, or SEER. The higher the SEER number the more effective the air-conditioner. For greater operating efficiency, install the unit in a shady area, and keep it free of plant overgrowth and debris.

Ventilate the attic and check insulation. Adequately sized vents and/or an attic fan can help keep hot air from building up. If your attic has less than 6 to 8 inches of insulation, consider adding more. Proper attic insulation can save up to 30 percent of your cooling bill. Be sure the insulation does not block vents or cover exhaust fans.

Another inexpensive way to keep cool and reduce air-conditioning costs is to use ceiling and oscillating fans to create a "wind chill" effect. The moving air makes the temperature feel cooler, and allows a higher air-conditioner thermostat setting while maintaining cooling comfort. For each 1-degree increase in the thermostat setting, cooling costs can be lowered by about 3 percent.

Follow these operating tips for greater energy efficiency and lower air-conditioning costs:

Install a timer or programmable thermostat to increase and decrease the temperature automatically. Leave it on a higher temperature while you're away, and set it to cool the house half an hour before you return home.

Turn off lights, televisions and computers when not in use.

Close drapes and shades on sunny days.

Make sure heat-producing appliances like televisions and lamps are away from the thermostat. They will increase the temperature near the thermostat and cause the air-conditioner to run when it is not needed.

Plan to do hot work - washing and drying clothes, cooking and baking - during cooler morning and evening hours.

Keep your kitchen cooler by cooking in a microwave oven, or grill outdoors.

Increased summer electric demands do not only place a strain on budgets, they also can place a severe strain on your home's electrical system - a dangerous shock and fire hazard. Flickering or dimming lights, TV or computer monitors, or frequent circuit breaker trips, are signs of an overloaded electrical system, or faulty wiring that should be checked immediately by a professional.

Homeowners can take simple electrical safety precautions that can prevent overloaded outlets and serious damage and injury. Avoid using extension cords continuously, and don't use multiple plugs in outlets. Check plugs and electric cords for fraying or cracks, and never run cords across high-traffic areas, behind curtains or baseboards, or underneath rugs or furniture.

"Juneteenth Day"

Legislation Introduced

U.S. Sens. Dick Durbin (D-IL) and Carl Levin (D-MI) recently introduced legislation recognizing the significance of June 19, 1865, commonly known as "Juneteenth Independence Day." The day commemorates the arrival of Union soldiers in Galveston, Texas with news that the Civil War had ended. African Americans who had been slaves in the Southwest celebrated June 19th as the anniversary of their emancipation. The legislation is co-sponsored by Sens. Harry Reid (D-NV), Barack Obama (D-IL) and Debbie Stabenow (D-MI). Rep. Danny Davis (D-IL) has introduced a similar resolution in the House.

"Two years after President Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation and months after the end of the Civil War, Union soldiers finally delivered the news of freedom," said Durbin. "While news can travel quickly across the globe in today's world, it is important to continue the tradition of celebrating Juneteenth Independence Day. Cultures across the globe look to this historical event as a source of inspiration and an opportunity for celebration."

First Human West Nile Virus Case In Illinois

Illinois Dept. of Public Health has confirmed through laboratory tests the first human West Nile virus case in Illinois for 2007. The DuPage County woman is in her 50s and became ill earlier this month.

"Typically we don't receive reports of human West Nile virus cases in Illinois until July, however, DuPage County has reported positive West Nile virus mosquito samples this year," said Dr. Eric E. Whitaker, Illinois Dept. of Public Health Director. "This should serve as a reminder that you need to protect yourself against mosquito bites now."

Positive mosquito samples reported this year include DuPage County on May 8th, Tazewell County on May 17th and Cook County on May 24th.

In 2006, the first positive mosquito sample was reported on May 24th in DuPage County and the first human case was reported on Aug. 1st in St. Clair County. Last year 77 of the state's 102 counties were found to have a West Nile positive bird, mosquito, horse or human case. A total of 215 human cases of West Nile disease, including 10 deaths, were reported last year in Illinois.

Surveillance for West Nile virus in Illinois began May 1st and includes laboratory tests on mosquitoes, dead crows, blue jays, robins and other perching birds as well as the testing of sick horses and humans with West Nile-like disease symptoms. Citizens who observe a sick or dying crow, blue jay, robin or other perching bird should contact their local health department, which will determine if the bird is to be picked up for testing.

West Nile virus is transmitted through the bite of a mosquito that has picked up the virus by feeding on an infected bird. Most people with the virus have no clinical symptoms of illness, but some may become ill three to 14 days after the bite of an infected mosquito.

Only about two persons out of 10 who are bitten by an infected mosquito will experience any illness. Illness from West Nile is usually mild and includes fever, headache and body aches, but serious illness, such as encephalitis and meningitis, and death are possible. Persons older than 50 years of age have the highest risk of severe disease.

The best way to prevent West Nile disease or any other mosquito-borne illness is to reduce the number of mosquitoes around your home and to take personal precautions to avoid mosquito bites.

Shirey Wins 2007 Time Magazine Quality Dealer Award

Congratulations to Thomas F. Shirey, President, Frank Shirey Cadillac in Oak Lawn, who recently received the 2007 TIME Magazine Quality Dealer Award (TMQDA). The announcement was made by Ed McCarriek, TIME's President & Worldwide Publisher, and Johann Finkelmeier, VP and General Manager Original Equipment Tires, North American Tire Unit, The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, at the National Automobile Dealers Association (NADA) convention in Las Vegas. Shirey is one of only 60 automobile dealers, from more than 19,500 nationwide, nominated for the 38th annual award.

Says McCarriek: "The TIME Magazine Quality Dealer Award is the automobile industry's most prestigious and highly coveted award for car dealers, and we are proud to sponsor this award which stands for excellence and community involvement." TMQDA recipients must demonstrate a long-standing commitment to effective community service and be among the nation's most successful auto dealers. The award is sponsored by TIME in association with Goodyear, and in cooperation with NADA. A panel of faculty members from the University of Michigan Graduate School of Business Administration selects TMQDA finalists.

An Illinois native and graduate of Georgetown University, Shirey worked in his family's dealership during high school and college, apprenticing in the service, parts and body shop to learn the fundamentals of the automotive business. After attending General Motors Management Dealer School and working in management, he purchased the dealership in 1979, presiding as President and CEO ever since. Thomas Shirey is a third-generation Cadillac dealer. His grandfather worked for GM in the 1920s and was awarded a Cadillac dealership in Brookfield, Illinois in 1949.

In addition to his business successes, Shirey and his dealership have also supported a wide range of organizations and causes, with a focus on health care. He is chairman of the Christ Hospital Development Council and vice-chairman of the board of Advocate Charitable Foundation. He has also been an active underwriter of Hope Children's Hospital. Shirey was recently named the Christ Hospital 2007 Outstanding Community Leader, an honor he cites as his most meaningful. "This award recognizes my many years of personal service and commitment to our local hospital," he noted. Shirey has participated actively in capital planning and fundraising to help the organization fulfill its vision of creating a separate Children's Hospital, Pediatric Oncology Center and a Clinical Auditorium; the first two have been brought to fruition, while the third is in progress.

Shirey was nominated for the annual TMQDA by Jerry H. Cizek III of the Chicago Automobile Trade Association.

Lipinski's H-Prize Act Passes House

Last week, Vice Chairman Dan Lipinski's H-Prize Act of 2007, H.R. 632, passed the U.S. House of Representatives in a vote of 408-8. Approved on a bipartisan basis last month by the House Science & Technology Committee, this bill seeks to lessen America's dependence on fossil fuels by developing hydrogen as a viable energy source, especially as a substitute for gasoline.

"Today the House took a major step forward in helping America find a solution to one of the greatest challenges of our time, finding a clean, alternative energy source," said Lipinski. "American families are struggling with high gas prices, our national security is threatened by our addiction to foreign oil, and the environment is suffering from the burning of fossil fuels. Hydrogen has great potential to solve these problems by providing a clean, domestic fuel source."

The H-Prize Act, introduced earlier this year by Rep. Lipinski, along with Rep. Bob Inglis of South Carolina, establishes competitively awarded cash prizes for breakthroughs in the use of hydrogen as an energy source for transportation. With clean water vapor as its only emission, hydrogen holds great promise as a clean fuel that will lessen our need for increasingly expensive fossil fuels that are imported from unstable parts of the world. Hydrogen-powered cars already exist, but further research and development is needed before they are commercially viable.

The H-Prize Act of 2007 would establish competitively awarded cash prizes to spur innovation in hydrogen energy technologies and advance the use of hydrogen as a fuel for transportation. Every two years, four $1 million prizes would be given for advances in the production, storage, distribution and utilization of hydrogen, and one $4 million prize would be awarded for advances in prototype hydrogen vehicles. And at the end of 10 years, one grand prize of $10 million would be given for a transformational advance in hydrogen energy technology.

The bill now moves to the Senate for further consideration.

All Points Southwest

By THOMAS E. GAVIN

U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) was joined Monday by more than a third of the U.S. Senate in sending a letter to Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Tom Harkin (D-IA) and Ranking Member Senator Saxby Chambliss (R-GA) urging them to strengthen federal anti-hunger and nutrition initiatives, particularly the Food Stamp Program in the upcoming reauthorization of the Farm Bill. Durbin was able to secure 34 other senators on the letter he sent.

"It is unacceptable that in the wealthiest nation, 37 million people live in poverty - nearly 1.5 million in Illinois," said Durbin, a co-chair of the Senate Hunger Caucus. "These Americans are often undernourished or go without a real meal for days. The Food Stamp Program provides a safety net for working families who struggle to meet their most basic needs. By helping them put food on the table, people of all ages are able to lead healthier and more productive lives."

The letter urges the committee to consider strengthening the upcoming Farm Bill in three specific ways: benefit levels should be adjusted because they are currently insufficient for families to obtain an adequate diet; the cap on child care costs that eligible households can deduct from their income education should be eliminated entirely, or at least raised; asset limits should be raised and tax-preferred retirements and educational savings should be excluded completely.

The letter also stresses the need to reduce unnecessary paperwork, streamline eligibility rules and invest in outreach and enrollment efforts.

Cook County Board President Todd Stroger joined Commissioners Joseph Mario Moreno (7th Dist.) and John P. Daley (11th Dist.) in support of a resolution at a recent board meeting marking National Hunger Awareness Day (June 5th). The entire Cook County Board of Commissioners joined them in supporting the resolution, which declared June to be Hunger Awareness Month in Cook County.

Nearly 500,000 individuals in Cook County rely upon food provided by the Greater Chicago Food Depository, which distributes more than 40 million pounds of food each year through its network of 600 food pantries, soup kitchens, shelters and Kids Cafes.

Gaining unanimous support in the General Assembly, legislation to better fund Illinois' local 911 call centers advanced to the governor's desk last week according to the bill's sponsor, state Rep. Jim Brosnahan (D-Evergreen Park).

Healthcare is currently at the center of debates over the state budget, so it is important that we find ways to improve our health and safety services with funds already in existence," stated Brosnahan. "This bill is an important step in boosting both the state's cost efficiency and the quality of emergency care we provide. Improving funding to 911 call centers will literally mean the difference between life and death for many accident victims and residents in need."

Currently wireless customers in Illinois pay a 75 cent surcharge to refund the cost of operating local emergency call centers. The money is split between two state funds, with one-third of the money used to reimburse wireless carriers for their operating costs. However, many carriers do not submit reimbursement claims to the Illinois Commerce Commission (ICC) and money remains unused.

House Bill 463 enhances public safety by providing higher funding levels to 911 centers without increasing the wireless surcharge. Brosnahan's bill provides that money that has been left unused in the carrier fund for two years will be re-allocated to local 911 centers across the state. This amount is estimated to be at $6.8 million for the first year. This measure would allow wireless emergency centers to upgrade to more precise location technology, and would not hinder carriers who do wish to submit reimbursement claims.

Congratulations to former Southtown Economist owner/publisher and present Hyde Park Herald owner/publisher Bruce Sagan on his selection and upcoming induction into the Chicago Journalism Hall of Fame. The International Press Club of Chicago will host its 2007 dinner and induction ceremony on Friday, June 22nd at Marcello's 645 W. North Ave., Chicago. Warn Against Using Fireworks

Every year, many Americans celebrate Independence Day with food, get-togethers and sometimes, fireworks. But no matter what kind of fireworks are used, they are extremely dangerous. Firecrackers can explode prematurely and rockets can take unexpected flight paths. And, according to the U.S. Eye Injury Registry, bystanders are more often injured by fireworks than operators themselves. No one knows that better than the Shannon family.

When Michael Shannon was just three years old, he attended a family reunion with his parents. During the festivities, someone lit a legal, aerial firework device which accidentally tipped over and fired straight at Michael, who was standing with his father more than 40 feet away. Before father or son could react, the missile struck Michael in the head, causing an open skull fracture and a severe burn to his brain. The damage was not only excruciatingly painful, but also caused him to lose his sight.

Michael's family brought him to the emergency room immediately, but unfortunately, Michael died the following day. Now, Michael's father, Jack, has become a steadfast supporter of consumer fireworks bans and he hopes to educate the public on how dangerous they can be.

"My son not only lost his sight, he lost his life to fireworks," said Shannon. "For Michael's sake, and the sake of others, my family is speaking out about the dangers of fireworks, hoping that the public and our policy-makers will take action and stop the unnecessary suffering caused by these dangerous devices."

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission reported that 6,500 people were treated in emergency rooms across the country due to accidents caused by fireworks during the Fourth of July holiday weekend, according to the latest data from 2005. There were 10,800 firework-related injuries for the entire year, an increase of 1,400 injuries from 2004.

Sadly, like Michael, many of those injured were children. In fact, 45 percent of all fireworks injuries are to those aged 15 and younger. Most injuries are to the hands and fingers, but 1,600 were eye injuries, including contusions and lacerations, debris in the eye and burns. Some eye injuries result in permanent vision loss.

"There are no such things as 'safe' fireworks." Even sparklers can burn up to 1,800 degrees Fahrenheit," said Daniel D. Garrett, senior vice president of Prevent Blindness America. "Adults who played with fireworks as kids without incident can't guarantee that their children won't be injured."

In 2005, there were 500 children under the age of 5 that were hurt by sparklers. In fact, sparklers accounted for half of all fireworks injuries to children in that age group.

Prevent Blindness America, the nation's oldest eye health and safety organization, urges everyone to leave fireworks to the professionals this year. Many communities offer spectacular displays to the public, free of charge. However, there have been injuries to the public reported at these events as well. Be aware that all fireworks, whether handled by consumers or professionals, can be dangerous.

Prevent Blindness America has these tips to help prevent fireworks-related injuries: Do not purchase, use or store fireworks of any type; Be aware that even sparklers are dangerous and cause one half of fireworks injuries in children 5 and younger; Protect yourself, your family and your friends by avoiding fireworks; Attend only authorized public fireworks displays conducted by licensed operators; Support legislation that bans the importation, general sale and indiscriminate usage of fireworks by children and adults.

For a free copy of the Safe Summer Celebrations, offering fun, fireworks-free activities for families brochure or more tips on fireworks safety, call Prevent Blindness America at (800) 331-2020 or log on to www.preventblindness.org.

Legal Issues Involved In Ending A Marriage

If a married couple decides to divorce, there are a number of legal steps the couple must take before the divorce can be granted.

The first is to file a petition for divorce. In Illinois, there is no waiting period to file, as long as one of the spouses legally resides in the state on the day of the filing. The actual divorce, however, can be granted only if the person has resided in Illinois for 90 days before the judgment. After a petition is filed, temporary orders often will address "maintenance" (formerly called alimony), visitation and child support. These orders may remain in effect until the divorce is final.

Before a judge will grant a divorce, a party must prove grounds. Typically, these include irreconcilable differences, mental cruelty, physical cruelty, habitual drunkenness or a drug habit, adultery, impotence and imprisonment.

In a case based on irreconcilable differences, which some people call no fault, the parties must show that there is a breakdown in the marriage, that they have been living separately for two years (unless the case settles and the parties sign a waiver of the requirement, in which case only a six-month separation is required), and that all efforts to reconcile have failed and further efforts will be futile.

Regardless of the grounds, money and property must be divided or awarded on an "equitable basis," regardless of who is at fault. Even if one spouse actually did something to cause the divorce, neither spouse is "punished" in the financial judgment.

Although most couples who are divorcing disagree about certain issues, these disputes usually are resolved through negotiation and advice from lawyers and a judge.

Among the issues that must be settled before the divorce can be granted are the following: division of property - real estate, investments, money; division of debts; whether or not one person will have to pay maintenance to the other, and if so, how much and for how long; if there are children, what the custody and visitation arrangements will be; and the financial obligations each person will have to the children.

If the parties do not reach an agreement, a trial will be held. Sometimes, it can take several months to a year before a trial date can be set.

Once an agreement is reached, divorce documents will be drawn up, signed by both parties and filed with the state. After the divorce is granted, the parties are required to abide by the guidelines set forth in the final divorce papers.

For further information about law-related issues, contact an area Illinois State Bar Association-member lawyer or visit www.isbalawyers.com.

Antique Appraisals

If you've wondered if that inherited heirloom, your collectible, or that "antique" are really valuable, you have the opportunity to get a valid appraisal of them on Sunday, June 24th.

The Women's Guild of the Balzekas Museum is featuring "Ye Olde Curiosity Shoppe" on that date, presenting Rex Newell, Professional Appraiser, to provide verbal appraisals. Rex provides a high quality seminar to bring you abreast of the current trends, ups and downs, and many aspects of this ever-changing business. He will tell what's hot and what's not.

Each guest can bring one hand-held item for appraisal. The program will start at 11:30 a.m. A light luncheon will be served thereafter.

This event, benefiting the museum, will be held in the Amber Ballroom at the museum, 6500 S. Pulaski Rd. in Chicago. Reservations at $20 per person are to be made with Scottie Zukas at (773) 582-3820.

Orland Park Summer Entertainment Series

The Village of Orland Park began its Summer Entertainment Series more than 20 years ago, first sponsoring live entertainment in the village's Doogan Park.

When the Orland Park Village Center Complex opened in 1989, the series moved to the Outdoor Amphitheater, a coliseum-like theater that extends into the pond at the Village Center, 14700 South Ravinia Ave. Wednesday morning children's shows were added with the new venue.

"Orland Park's Summer Entertainment Series is the longest running outdoor recreation program that the village offers," said Orland Park Recreation Director Nancy Flores.

"Corporate sponsors help to make this program possible," said Recreation Program Supervisor Gina Hassett, adding that a number of area businesses sponsor a performance each year. Along with the Village of Orland Park, main sponsors of the series include the Daily Southtown and Star Newspapers and Andrew Corporation.

"Each year, we offer as much variety as possible so that we please as many tastes as possible," Hassett said.

"Some of the best bands in the Chicago area have played for the village's series," Flores said, adding, "Orland Park is grateful to the many corporate sponsors that support this program each year."

All events are held at the Village of Orland Park Outdoor Amphitheater, 14700 South Ravinia Avenue, unless otherwise noted.

The Village of Orland Park operates an Inclement Weather Hotline to notify residents of the status of outdoor activities in the community. To find out if an outdoor event is canceled or if the location has changed, residents may call the pre-recorded hotline at (708) 403-6290.

Fashion Knight At The Museum

Former Project Runway finalist Mychael Knight will hold a fashion show gala event, "Fashion Knight at the Museum," at the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Museum on Saturday, July 28th at 8 p.m. As a finalist in the 2006 hit reality Bravo Network TV series, Project Runway, Mychael Knight established himself as bright new talent in the international world of fashion design. As host of "Fashion Knight at the Museum," Knight will highlight a past-to-present comparison of the trend-setting fashions of Mary Todd Lincoln's day to the contemporary styles of today. This runway extravaganza will include local models presenting some of Knight's own fashion designs.

Knight, 28, graduated from Georgia Southern University with a bachelor's degree in Apparel Design and Merchandising. Knight relocated to Atlanta to become part of the burgeoning urban entertainment industry. His fashion design work captured the attention of some of today's popular music artists including Jagged Edge, 112, Ciara, Free and Queen Latifah. At that point, Knight says he felt his career had "reached a glass ceiling," and it was time to take his career to a higher plateau. He noticed a commercial calling for designers to audition for Bravo's Project Runway for season three. From there, the world of fashion design has welcomed Knight as one of its newest stars.

The public is invited to be a part of this very special, one-of-a-kind "Knight" at the Museum. Two ticket options are available:

Fashionista Ticket - $75

- Exclusive invitation to the Very Mary VIP Party with special guest Mychael Knight at 6 p.m. in the Library Atrium (cocktails and hors d'oeuvres served)
 - Private tour of Mary Todd Lincoln: First Lady of Controversy exhibit before the show
 - Preferred seating to Fashion Knight at the Museum at 8 p.m. in the Museum Plaza
 - VIP memento
- Trendsetter Ticket - $35
- General admission seating to Fashion Knight at the Museum at 8 p.m. in the Museum Plaza
 - Viewing of Mary Todd Lincoln: First Lady of Controversy exhibit after the show
 - Public autograph session with Mychael Knight after the show

Tickets are on sale now and can be purchased by calling (217) 558-8934 or online at alplm.org. Visa and Mastercard are accepted.

Proceeds from the event go to the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library Foundation, a private, not-for-profit organization whose primary mission is to support the exhibits and programs of the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library and Museum (ALPLM).

This Summer, Crack The Case

Imagine entering a crime scene and being the one responsible for noticing and collecting every trace of evidence. The pressure's on: your analysis of the evidence must be scientifically sound to crack the case.

You've seen the hit television crime drama, CSI: Crime Scene Investigation on CBS. The Museum of Science and Industry in Chicago will host the world premiere of CSI: The Experience, an immersive, interactive forensic science exhibit related to the TV show. The bilingual exhibit (English and Spanish) will run through Sept. 3rd.

In CSI: The Experience, guests will play the role of crime scene investigator, learning scientific principles and real investigative techniques as they try to solve one of three crime scene mysteries. Two state-of-the-art crime labs will help guests piece together the evidence. With input from investigators from the television show, along with their real-life forensic science counterparts, guests will formulate a hypothesis, validate their findings based on scientific evidence and try to crack the case.

From DNA and fingerprint analysis to forensic anthropology and toxicology, visitors will be captivated by hands-on science in a multi-media environment with dazzling special effects—direct from the CSI television series. A video introduction by cast members from the TV show will welcome guests into the exhibit, lead them through the experience, and then evaluate their crime-solving savvy as they exit.

"This exhibit blends science, technology and innovation into one phenomenal experience that guests will enjoy and learn from," said David Mosena, president and CEO of the Museum of Science and Industry. "It's also our hope that in experiencing this exhibit, children will discover the many different and vital careers that exist within the field of science, and become excited about them."

"With the launch of this exciting new exhibit, we're extending the CSI brand beyond entertainment and licensed merchandise into an engaging learning experience," commented Elizabeth Kalodner, executive vice president and general manager of CBS Consumer Products.

The National Science Foundation (NSF) provided $2.4 million to the Fort Worth Museum of Science and History to develop the exhibit for a national tour of science museums, as well as an online learning adventure. According to Sandra Welch, NSF's program officer for informal science education, this unique project will advance science learning in museums across the country in an exciting new way. "The show CSI has inspired its millions of fans to become interested in forensic science. Recognizing the role the show plays in society, we think this connection with the exhibit will help draw many people into a high quality science learning experience."

The exhibit's "investigators" will enter one of three different crime scenes where they will identify evidence and record findings on a special investigation card. The crime scenes vary in intensity, with the mildest being the presentation of skeletal remains discovered in a remote desert.

In "A House Collided" a car has run through the living room window of a house in a quiet suburb. In the driver's seat is a man with his seatbelt on; he is slumped over. The windshield is shattered and the car door is shut. In the living room, there are muddy shoeprints, drops of blood and a stain near a sofa. A pizza box is open with pepperoni pizza spilled on the floor. A beer bottle is by the car door, and a hand print of blood (or is it pizza sauce?) is found on the car hood.

In "Who Got Served?" a young woman has been found dead in an alley behind an old Las Vegas motel. She is sprawled beneath a dumpster overflowing with trash and is wearing a waitress outfit with a nametag that reads "Penny." There is a tire tread across her abdomen, and tossed nearby is a photo of her, which has been ripped in half. No other injuries are visible. Amongst the trash are a handbag and a cell phone.

In "No Bones About It!" a hiker has stumbled across what looks like a human skull sticking out of the ground. It is partially buried by silt and debris. Other bones are scattered underneath the dirt. The skull has a visible hole in it, and among the remains, there are still tattered remnants of a coat and what appears to be a backpack.

After exiting the crime scenes, guests will refer to a large wall of crime scene photos and clues they may have missed. They will then analyze evidence in two highly interactive lab areas, each featuring multiple stations that allow for various evidence testing.

Guests who are investigating "A House Collided" will compare fingerprints of the victim to the evidence, examine blood spatter patterns, observe the shoes of the victim and tracks found in the room, compare fibers on the victim's clothes with fibers in the room, analyze the victim's blood-alcohol level, compare DNA of the victim with evidence and eventually discover the cause of death.

For "Who Got Served?" the investigation will include reviewing evidence within a cell phone, examining the contents of the handbag, inspecting the purse and headshot for fingerprints, establishing the time of death, reviewing DNA samples, testing powder from the handbag at the scene, and discovering the cause of death.

Sleuths working on "No Bones About It!" will analyze the bullet from the found skull, analyze hairs found with the body, examine a seed found in a pocket of the jacket, study a DNA sample from a tooth, test the DNA of an animal's hair, examine a femur bone to establish the height of the victim, compare dental records to the victim and discover the cause of death.

At the end of the exhibit, guests will present their findings in a re-creation of the office of Gil Grissom—the enigmatic CSI head investigator. They will answer a series of multiple choice questions, based on their scientific findings, on touch screens located in this area. After completing these questions, a case summary is generated and guests can match their results to those of expert crime scene investigators!

CSI: The Experience was developed by the Fort Worth Museum of Science and History with support from CBS Consumer Products, the cast and crew of the television show, and the National Science Foundation. This exhibit, geared toward guests ages 12 and up, requires a ticket with a specified entry time. Tickets, which include Museum general admission, are $19 for adults, $17.50 for seniors and $14 for children 3-11. There is a discount for City of Chicago residents. Advance tickets are on sale now at www.msichicago.org or by calling (773) 684-1414. Groups of 20 or more are eligible for a discount when they book in advance.

ILLINOIS SPRING TURKEY HARVEST: Hunters in Illinois bagged a preliminary harvest statewide of 14,767 wild turkeys during the 2007 Spring Turkey Season.

Hunters harvested a total of 14,917 turkeys during the regular seasons conducted April 9-May 10 in the south zone and April 16-May 17 in the north zone. An additional 570 birds were taken during the Youth Turkey Season.

"This year's spring turkey harvest fell short of last year's record setter, but all in all it was a pretty good season," said Paul Shelton, manager of the Illinois Department of Natural Resources Forest Wildlife Program.

"Turkey hunting is challenging and we congratulate those hunters who succeeded in bringing home a bird this spring. Weather conditions during early spring likely contributed to delayed nesting and this in combination with a smaller cohort of 2 year old birds from below-average reproduction in 2005 resulted in some tougher-than-expected hunting conditions. However, Illinois' turkey flock remains in excellent condition, and we have more record-setting seasons to look forward to in the future."

The top counties for spring turkey harvest in 2007 were: JoDaviess (542), Pike (528), Adams (456), Macoupin (400), and Fulton (386). Locally, Cook (3) and Will (56).

FIND OUT WHAT'S HAPPENING IN THE GREAT OUTDOORS: Tune in ESPN Radio AM 1000 every Saturday morning from 6-7 a.m. for "Chauncey's Great Outdoors" covering fishing, hunting, camping, cooking, boating, hiking or napping in a hammock.

LAKE ERIE PERCH LIMIT: In response to declining fish populations, Ohio Governor Ted Strickland issued an executive order to reduce the sport fishing bag limit for Lake Erie yellow perch from 40 to 30, and cut commercial catch limits to below 2006 limits.

The order went into effect Monday, April 9, immediately reducing the bag limit while new rules are finalized and placed into effect. The Lake Erie yellow perch bag limit for sport anglers was only recently increased to 40 in 2006 and prior to that has been 30 over the past nine years.

"Recent estimates of perch abundance were lower than we initially expected and reflect weak hatches from 2002, 2004, and 2005, especially in the western basin," said Roger Knight, Lake Erie program administrator for the Division of Wildlife. "Our projections indicate that the Ohio recreational fishery would exceed its quota allocation without a bag limit change."

BOW HUNTING AS KEY FOR URBAN DEER CONTROL: Deer automobile accidents annually cause more than a billion dollars in vehicle damage, kill hundreds of people, and injure thousands more. Sub statistics have led many towns to seek a safe way to decrease deer herds, and allowed bow hunting to find its niche.

Suburbs of Des Moines, St. Louis, Cleveland and Columbus, Ohio, Fort Smith, Arkansas, Kansas City, and Alamosa, Colorado have staged bow hunts or are considering doing so.

"Bow hunting is a safe and effective deer control," said U.S. Sportsmen's Alliance President Bud Pigeon. "Anti-hunters try to pressure many local governments to use costly, ineffective methods such as deer birth control, but it's the bow hunt that proves worthwhile." (The Sentry)

STATUS OF THE MUSKIE FISHERY IN ILLINOIS BY RAY THOMPSON: "In 2006, the Illinois hatchery system produced 6,710-12.5 inch and 200-7 inch Illinois mixed generic strain muskie fingerlings. The 200-7 inch fish were turned over to the Illinois Natural History Survey for research; 909 of the 12.5 inch fish were sent to the Green Gene projects lakes and the rest were stocked into three Illinois lakes. Additionally, Mingo received 332-9.6 inch Kentucky strain fingerlings and Shelbyville 1,209-12.5 inch overwintered Iowa strain fish."

"The state received about 25,000-5 inch fingerlings from Iowa, stocked 5,880 into seven lakes and finished rearing the remaining fingerlings at the Jake Wolf Hatchery. These out of state fingerlings results in 8,081-10.4 inch fingerlings stocked into 16 Illinois lakes and 9,725-11.2 inch fingerlings stocked 17 Illinois lakes. Additionally, 300-13 to 14+ inch Leech Lake strain fingerlings were donated by an IMA member club (Mississippi Valley Chapter of Muskies, Inc.) and stocked into two Illinois lakes. The grand total of muskie fingerlings stocked into Illinois waters in 2006 were 32,237. On behalf of the Illini Muskies Alliance, I'd like to thank the IDNR, the states of Iowa and Kentucky and the MVC of MI for their efforts."

Moraine Valley To Host Observatory Open Viewing

Moraine Valley Community College will continue to host its series of telescope open viewing nights in 2007. Remaining dates and times for this season's open viewings include the following Fridays: June 22 at 9:15 p.m.; July 20 at 9 p.m.; Aug. 17 at 8:30 p.m.; Sept. 14 at 7 p.m.; and Oct. 19 at 6:30 p.m.

Viewings will be canceled if conditions are rainy or cloudy.

Targets for the June 22 viewing will include the planets Venus and Saturn low in the west. The moon will be at about first quarter to the south and Jupiter to the southeast. If the transparency is good, viewers also will be able to observe the asteroid Vesta, some globular clusters and planetary nebula. All open viewings are held at the telescope dome on the G. Jack Bradley Observation Deck, located in the western sector of the college's Nature Study Area, near 107th Street and Kean Avenue. Observers are asked to park near the college's tennis courts and then walk on the path through the nature study area to the observation deck. For safety reasons, children not accompanied by an adult or supervisor will be turned away.

Tom McCague, retired associate professor and department chair of Moraine Valley's Biology department, hosts the viewings. An amateur astronomer for more than 40 years, McCague built the telescope using common hardware store items and donated it to the college. The telescope is a 67-foot Newtonian reflecting model with a 13 inches diameter and took him nearly 14 months to build.

Because of the outdoor location of the telescope, observers are reminded to dress appropriately for the weather and to bring binoculars if they have them.

For more information, call Josh Reinhart in the office of College and Community Relations at (708) 974-5742, e-mail reinhart@morainevalley.edu, or visit www.morainevalley.edu/naturestudy/events.htm on the Web.

Focus On Baseball

For the final production of its inaugural season, Chicago Children's Theatre takes on America's favorite pastime with the Midwest premiere of Honus and Me at the Goodman Theatre's Owen Theatre, 170 N. Dearborn St., July 20 through Aug. 26. The play, which takes place during baseball season focuses on the Honus Wagner T-206, which has been described as the "Mona Lisa of baseball cards." The production is supported in part by the Chicago Cubs and Cubs Care.

With the look and excitement of a real baseball stadium, the Goodman's Owen Theatre will be transformed for a story that blends sports, theater and fantasy. Honus and Me tells the story of Joe Stoshak, a young baseball fanatic who stumbles upon the most valuable baseball card of all time - a Honus Wagner T-206 - while cleaning his neighbor's attic. The card acts as a portal between Joe and Wagner's lives, and young Joe is suddenly transported back in time to the seventh inning of the 1909 World Series, where Wagner imparts upon him the confidence and wisdom he needs to succeed not only in baseball, but also in life.

Honus and Me is recommended for everyone ages seven and up and will run July 20 through Aug. 26 at Goodman Theatre's Owen Theatre, 170 N. Dearborn St. Tickets range from $15 to $38 and can be purchased at the Goodman Theatre box office by telephone at (312) 443-3800 or at the Chicago Children's Theatre website at www.chicagochildrenstheatre.org. Call For Long Term Solution To Pending Transit Crisis

THURSDAY, JUNE 21, 2007 - PAGE 9

The region's top environmental leaders gathered recently at the Environmental Law & Policy Center to speak out on the importance of public transportation and called upon Governor Blagojevich and the Illinois General Assembly to forge a long-term solution to the pending transit crisis. The group stressed that an investment in public transportation now would help to mitigate the impacts of global warming over the coming decade; and that a failure to invest would lead to dire environmental consequences in Northeastern Illinois.

"A major metropolitan region such as Northeastern Illinois deserves a vibrant, efficient and convenient transit system," said Shannon Fisk, Staff Attorney with the Midwest Office of the Natural Resources Defense Council. "Instead, service cutbacks are threatening to bring more congested roads, longer work commutes, and dirtier air for everybody in the region. The General Assembly and the Governor should approve Representative Hamos' plan to provide additional investment in CTA, Metra, and Pace, and to implement common sense reforms at the Regional Transit Authority."

The group, which included the Delta Institute, Environmental Law & Policy Center, Center for Neighborhood Technology (CNT), Congress for New Urbanism, Illinois PIRG, League of Conservation Voters, Natural Resources Defense Council, Openlands Project, American Lung Association of Metropolitan Chicago, and other environmental organizations signed a petition declaring their support for increased funding for public transportation. The petition was delivered to Governor Blagojevich as well as party leaders in the General Assembly, which has until July 1st to take action on the $226 million deficit faced by the CTA, Metra, and Pace.

"The Governor has publicly stated that Illinois should cut the production of greenhouse gasses to 1990 levels by 2020," Scott Bernstein, President of the Center for Neighborhood Technology, reminded the group. "Since motor vehicles alone account for more than one third of greenhouse gasses, there is simply no way to achieve that kind goal without strong regional transit. Transit will be the backbone of any successful climate change strategy in Illinois."

While public transportation's benefits to the environment were stressed, it was also argued that such benefits go hand in hand with transit's role in improving our economic and public health. "A strong public transportation system is critical to reducing global warming pollution," explained Joe Shacter, senior policy advocate at the Environmental Law & Policy Center. "Plus, when transit use goes up people drive less, leading to improved air quality, fewer respiratory illnesses, and increased household savings."

"No one wants the transit agencies to cut services or raise fares," said Anna Frostic, Environmental Health Advocate with the American Lung Association of Metropolitan Chicago. "The Governor and General Assembly must find a long-term solution to transit funding, otherwise the entire state will feel the impact in our pocketbooks, congested roads and the air we breathe for decades to come."

TIPS FOR HEALTH & SAFETY THIS SUMMER

Summer means barbecues, sports, vacations, bike rides, swimming, and boating. However, excessive heat exposure caused 8,966 deaths in the United States from 1979 to 2002, according to the Center for Disease Control and Prevention.

"So many injuries and accidents occur in the summer because children are out of school, people are taking vacations, and outdoor activities and sporting events occur frequently," says Ryne DeVries, DC, an associate professor and faculty clinician at Northwestern Health Sciences University in Bloomington, Minn. "Prevention tends to be the best defense to avoid visiting the emergency room."

DeVries suggests the following tips to promote a fun yet safe summer:

- Stay cool. Try to keep your body temperature regulated in hot weather to avoid heat cramps, heat exhaustion, or heat stroke, which can be deadly. Drink plenty of fluids, wear protective clothing, and stay in the shade whenever possible. Stop activity or call a doctor if you develop a headache, lose coordination, feel dizzy, develop muscle cramps, feel nauseous, or stop sweating.
- Always wear sunscreen. Overexposure to sunlight can result in uncomfortable and painful sun-burned skin. Long-term overexposure to sunlight can lead to skin cancer, wrinkles, freckles, age spots, dilated blood vessels, and skin texture changes. You can reduce your risk for skin cancer and permanent skin damage by using sun protection. Use a sunscreen that protects against both ultraviolet A (UVA) and ultraviolet B (UVB) rays and apply to the skin about every two hours. It is also important to wear sunglasses, a hat, and protective clothing when exposed to harmful rays.
- Stay hydrated. "Proper hydration is essential during exercise, while playing sports, or on a hot day," says Dr. DeVries.
- Ease into activity. Many people prefer to exercise in the summer because of the warmer weather but fail to prepare properly. "If you haven't exercised in the winter, gradually ease your way into a suitable workout regimen," says DeVries. "Listen to your body. You can't get back into shape in one week. The key is to have a plan and to stick with it. Also allow for recovery time between your workouts to avoid muscle or joint strain. If inflammation occurs, try icing or stretching the area."
- Bring a first aid kit. Always be prepared for accidents by bringing a first-aid kit on your bike ride or your camping trip. The kit should be stocked with sterile gloves, a cleansing agent, adhesive bandages, gauze, antibiotic and burn ointment, tweezers, scissors, and pain reliever.
- Wear the correct shoes. "With any kind of sport or activity, wearing the correct shoe is essential to avoid injury and to feel comfortable," says DeVries. "There are so many different types of shoes for different activities. It is easy to find the pair that you need."
- Break up your summer trip driving. Whether you're headed to the coast or on your way to the cabin, make sure to plan your trip accordingly to include driving breaks. "When driving for an extended period of time, you need to get out and move around about every hour," says Dr. DeVries. "Stretch your arms, legs, and back and walk around. It is also important to position your seat as far forward as possible to avoid bending forward and to provide lumbar support to your lower back. Reposition your seat occasionally to promote movement."
- Drive safely. Warmer weather brings highway congestion and road construction, which makes accidents more likely to happen. To decrease your risk of an injury, always wear your seatbelt and make sure your car is "road ready" with a thorough inspection. It is also important to drive responsibly, avoid talking on your cell phone, eating, applying makeup, or any other activity that may impair your driving.

Startling Drug Abuse Statistics

School's out and there is a feeling of freedom in the air. For some teens this means spending time with old friends and meeting new ones. For others this means no adult supervision and plenty of opportunities to find and use drugs or alcohol. Statistics show that many of our teens are doing just that.

Every day during summer vacation, an average of 6,000 youth try marijuana for the first time. Twenty-four percent of teens drink alcohol for the first time during summer break. Unfortunately, for many, drug or alcohol abuse does not stop there.

According to the National Survey on Drug Use and Health from the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, one in ten of our children aged 12-17 binge drink each month. Eighty-three percent of high school seniors state that it is "easy to get" marijuana and nearly 40% of them smoked it in 2005. In 2001, almost 3 million youths aged 12-17 had used prescription-type drugs nonmedically at least once in their lifetime.

All told, a full 50% of high school students have used an illegal drug by the time they graduate, more than 20% of them starting in eighth grade.

"Do you think drug dealers have missed the fact that school-aged children have plenty of free time during the summer?" asks Ryan Thorpe, Director of Admissions at Narconon Arrowhead, one of the country's leading drug and alcohol rehabilitation and education centers located in Canadian, Oklahoma. "Statistics show higher initial drug and alcohol use in the summer. The Drug Enforcement Agency reports increased sales of club drugs-most popular among teens and young adults-during the summer months, and marijuana availability increases because domestically grown plants flourish in the warmer months. This is a critical time for parents to educate themselves and their children on the dangers of drugs and addiction. This is why we are making the Healing Addicted Lives booklet available to parents at no charge. We want parents to truly understand how addiction occurs so they can use this knowledge to effectively educate their children on the problem."

To receive your own copy of Healing Addicted Lives at no charge, call 1-800-468-6933 today or visit the website www.healingaddictedlives.com. The Narconon program was founded in 1966 by William Benitez in Arizona State Prison, and is based on the humanitarian works of L. Ron Hubbard. In more than 120 centers around the world, Narconon programs restore drug and alcohol abusers and addicts to a clean and sober lifestyle.

Tan Is No Longer The Beauty Ideal

Just in time for summer, new survey results show that the appeal of tanned skin may finally be waning -- 53 percent of people surveyed believe they don't look better with a tan and 63 percent say they are not more attracted to someone who is tan. Sixty-nine percent do not think a tan makes them look slimmer. The survey was conducted by GfK Roper Public Affairs and Media for iVillage in partnership with The Skin Cancer Foundation.

"These findings are encouraging," said Perry Robins, MD, President of The Skin Cancer Foundation. "Once people stop linking their self esteem to tanned skin, we will really begin making headway in the fight against skin cancer. For now, there is still a lot of work to be done since an alarming number of people never use sunscreen."

Forty percent of people revealed that they never use sunscreen and only 11 percent use an SPF 15 or higher daily. Forty-two percent of people are still getting sunburned at least once a year. A person's risk for melanoma (the most serious form of skin cancer) doubles if he or she has had five or more sunburns.

The small percentage of people applying sunscreen daily is surprising given that 58 percent of people say they are concerned about skin cancer. These findings demonstrate a lack of understanding that everyday incidental sun exposure, like intermittent, intense exposure (such as on beach vacations), seriously damages the skin over time. But, people are getting better about using sunscreen when outdoors-- 59 percent of people use sunscreen at least occasionally - a 20 percent increase from a survey done in 2003.

Women still do a much better job than men when it comes to using sunscreen. Forty-seven percent of men say they never wear sunscreen, compared to 34 percent of women.

For more sun safety information, visit www.healthivillage.com or www.skincancer.org.

The survey also revealed that 74 percent of those who wear sunscreen reapply at least every 4-6 hours or after swimming or sweating. While only 28 percent of people comply with the Foundation's recommendation to reapply sunscreen every two hours, at least people are reapplying once during the day.

A surprising 57 percent of women and 53 percent of men think they can spend more time in the sun if they use sunscreen, but The Skin Cancer Foundation advises against this. Sunscreen does not allow you to spend hours in the sun without risking damage since no sunscreen blocks 100 percent of UV rays and most people do not apply it adequately or frequently enough.

There seems to be similar confusion about the protective ability of clothing. Thirty-six percent of people think that clothing provides the same level of protection as sunscreen. A new academic review from Switzerland shows that clothing (hats, sunglasses and clothing made from certain fabrics) may be the more effective method of protection. However, it depends on the type of clothing. An untreated white cotton T-shirt only provides the equivalent of an SPF 5 to 7. Darker more densely woven fabrics provide a much higher SPF.

The sun gives us all warmth and a sense of wellbeing. In fact, the majority of people surveyed, 76 percent, say that being out in the sun makes them feel happy. As the leaders in sun safety education, The Skin Cancer Foundation encourages people to enjoy the outdoors, as long as they do so safely. Follow the Foundation's tips to reduce the risk of sunburn, skin damage and skin cancer: Seek the shade, especially between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.; Do not burn; Avoid tanning and UV tanning booths; Use a sunscreen with an SPF of 15 or higher every day; Apply 1 ounce (2 tbsp) total of sunscreen to all exposed areas, 30 minutes before going outside, reapply every 2 hours or immediately after swimming or excessive sweating; Cover up with clothing, including a broad-brimmed hat and UV-blocking sunglasses; Keep newborns out of the sun. Sunscreens should be used on babies over the age of 6 months; Examine your skin from head-to-toe every month; See your physician every year for a professional skin exam.

EyeCare America Launches New Website

Interested in learning more about eye related health conditions such as glaucoma or macular degeneration? Need to locate an eye doctor in your area? Want to know if you qualify for a no-cost eye exam? If you're looking for accurate and up-to-date eye care information your search may be just a click away.

EyeCare America, a national non-profit organization that works to preserve eye sight by raising awareness about eye disease and providing access to medical eye care at no cost to the patient, has launched a new public service website that is home to the most trusted eye health information on the internet.

The new website is part of EyeCare America's educational mission to empower consumers with reliable educational information: Visitors can log on and...

Learn About an Eye Problem and access dozens of eye topics reviewed by ophthalmologists (Eye M.D.) such as information on risk factors, treatment options and even a tour of the anatomy of the eye;

Protect Your Sight because many of the leading causes of blindness are preventable. Learn the best way to preserve your eyesight; and Get Access to No-Cost Care. For more than 20 years, EyeCare America has worked to prevent avoidable blindness by providing free eye health educational materials and access to medical care at no cost to patients. Find out if you qualify.

According to a 2005 study by Neilson/Net Ratings, a global leader in media and market research, the internet is considered the most trusted source for health information after physicians. As the number of Americans seeking health care information on the Internet grows, EyeCare America plans to match that trend by providing visitors to the eyecareamerica.org website centralized information written in language that is clear and easy for them to understand. Visitors can even share important health topics with family and friends through a convenient email forward function.

Other easy to use functions include online tools such as a vision simulator, which allows users to see how vision would be affected from common eye diseases such as cataracts and glaucoma. Informative videos, created by the American Academy of Ophthalmology, are an added feature on the site and will provide consumers with a complete interactive experience.

The site was designed keeping in mind those who suffer from low-vision. Visitors to the website can increase the type size up to three sizes; contrast the content into both light on dark or dark on light and finally, the layout of the web pages can be changed to single-column viewing to accommodate low-vision reading aids.

Founded in 1985, EyeCare America is a public service program of the Foundation of the American Academy of Ophthalmology. Their mission is to reduce avoidable blindness and severe visual impairment by raising awareness about eye disease and care, providing free eye health educational materials and facilitating access to medical eye care. Since its inception, the program has helped more than 860,000 people. To learn more about EyeCare America and get the eye health information you need visit www.eyecareamerica.org.

Use Precaution To Prevent Developing Skin Cancer

As the days get longer and time spent outside increases, slipping on protective clothing, slopping on some sunscreen, slapping on a hat and wrapping on a pair of sunglasses is a must. The American Cancer Society encourages everyone to use some form of sun protection in order to decrease the likelihood of developing skin cancer.

More than one million cases of basal cell or squamous skin cancer (nonmelanoma) and nearly 60,000 cases of malignant melanoma (the most serious form of skin cancer) are expected to be diagnosed in 2007 in the United States. In Illinois, more than 1,500 people will be diagnosed with melanoma and approximately 500 are expected to die from the disease. While the risk of melanoma is higher for Caucasians than African-Americans, it's still important that people with darker skin also limit their sun exposure.

Research shows a link between severe sunburns in childhood and an increased risk of melanoma and other skin cancers later in life. Melanoma is currently the second leading cause of cancer among 13 to 30 year olds.

"Prevention must be a priority," said Clement Rose, M.D., president of the American Cancer Society's Illinois Division. "Grabbing the sun block and protecting yourself from the sun's harmful rays needs to be a habit that starts early and continues throughout your lifetime."

The majority of skin cancers are due to unprotected and excessive ultraviolet (UV) radiation exposure. The immediate adverse effects of excessive exposure are sunburn and eye damage. Long term effects include premature aging of the skin and skin cancer. The American Cancer Society offers the following advice on how to protect yourself from the harmful effects of sun exposure.

Avoid direct sunlight between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. when the sun is most intense; Protect your skin with clothing, including a long-sleeve shirt and a hat with a broad brim; Use sunscreens with a SPF factor of at least 15; and Liberally apply sunscreen 20 to 30 minutes before going outside so skin can absorb the protective agents and reapply at least every two hours or after sweating or swimming.

Wear wrap-around sunglasses with at least 99 percent UV absorption provide the best protection for the eyes and the skin area around the eyes.

Avoid tanning beds and sun lamps, which provide an additional source of UV radiation. In addition to proper skin protection, early detection can also save lives and improve survival because surgical treatment in the early stages can provide a cure.

To detect skin cancer early: Examine skin once a month and get familiar with your pattern of moles, freckles and "beauty marks" and be alert to changes in the number, size, shape or color of spots on skin. These types of changes are the most important warning signs of skin cancer.

Other warning signs include a sore that does not heal, a new growth or lesions that ulcerate, scab, bleed or itch. See your doctor regularly for skin checks.

The American Cancer Society is dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem by saving lives, diminishing suffering and preventing cancer through research, education, advocacy and service. The Illinois Division has more than 120,000 volunteers and staff fighting cancer in the state. For the most up-to-date cancer related information and to join the fight against cancer, call 800-ACS-2345 or visit www.cancer.org.

Matching Funds For Disabled Kids

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently announced Illinois will receive $8.6 million in federal matching funds to provide a range of specialized services to almost 800 children with developmental disabilities. The funds, administered through the Illinois Dept. of Human Services (IDHS) Home and Community Based Services (HCBS) program, will allow more families to keep their children at home and still be able to provide them the specialized care they need. By establishing Medicaid waivers, Illinois is able to waive regular Medicaid rules and create this new funding source for fiscal year 2008.

The approval of the waivers was announced by Deputy Gov. Louanna Peters at a joint videoconference of the Developmental Disabilities Waiver Committee, the Autism Task Force, legislators and other developmental disability advocates.

"It is often a struggle for families who have children with special needs to make sure their kids have the best care possible," said Gov. Blagojevich. "These two new programs will give hundreds more families access to support and services so they can care for their kids at home."

The new waiver programs, approved by the Dept. of Health and Human Services (HHS) Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, will serve young people age three to 21 who meet the Intermediate Care Facility for Developmental Disability (ICF-DD) level of care. Children with developmental disabilities include those with mental retardation and other related conditions such as Cerebral Palsy, Autism Spectrum Disorder, and Epilepsy.

The children's support services waiver will prevent or delay the need for out-of-home care for 600 people and the residential services waiver will provide services for approximately 175 to 200 families whose children need out-of-home residential services.

The children's support waiver will offer a range of services including personal support such as training, respite and personal care; home and vehicle accessibility and modifications; adaptive equipment and assistive technology; training and counseling services for unpaid caregivers; behavior intervention and treatment; and service facilitation.

The children's support waiver is very flexible for families. Parents may use a monthly allocation of funds to purchase services from the list of covered services.

The new waivers are approved for a three-year period beginning July 1st and can be renewed at the end of that time.

The IDHS Division of Developmental Disabilities administers the Illinois system of programs and services for persons with developmental disabilities.

Cook County Sheriff Recognizes Senior Volunteers

Cook County Sheriff Thomas J. Dart (right) presents Barbara Jean Beyer of Oak Lawn with a medal at the 15th annual Sheriff's Senior Citizen Medal of Honor Ceremony. The awards were presented to nearly 68 senior citizens from throughout Cook County in recognition of their volunteer efforts and commitment to making a difference in the lives of others.

Fire Department Grant

On June 13th, the Oak Lawn Fire Department received a grant from the Firemans Fund Grant. The grant, in the amount of $15,000, will be used for the purchase of a new rescue system. The older rescue system being replaced will now be used in the Oak Lawn Fire Academy, which trains new firefighters from across Northern Illinois. This newer system will incorporate a power unit, spreaders (jaws of life) and cutters which aid firefighters in gaining access to patients involved in motor vehicle accidents. Due to changes in technology the system will be lighter, stronger and more durable than past systems.

Power Wheelchairs Available

The Senior Wheels USA Program makes available power wheelchairs to senior citizens and the permanently disabled at no cost to the recipient, if they qualify.

The power wheelchairs are provided to those who can no longer walk nor self-propel a manual wheelchair and who meet the additional guidelines of the program. No deposit is required.

If the patient's need is for use in the home, call for more information to see if they qualify. Call toll-free at 1(800) 246-6010.

Keep Cool Illinois Campaign

Blagojevich Administration officials launched the 2007 Keep Cool Illinois campaign and Web site to help families stay cool, healthy and safe this summer. A comprehensive, statewide effort, Keep Cool Illinois, seeks again this year to inform Illinois residents, especially the elderly, families with small children and persons with disabilities, how to prevent heat-related health problems, reduce their utility bills and participate in summer activities safely. Also, as part of the campaign, low income residents can apply for assistance with their summer energy bills starting July 9.

The Keep Cool Illinois campaign includes www.keepcoolillinois.gov Web site, a statewide network of cooling centers, targeted outreach to vulnerable senior citizens, energy assistance programs, public service announcements, fire safety, water safety and other tips to help families across Illinois prepare for the summer.

DeVoto Named Nobel Educator

Mother McAuley Social Science teacher Mary DeVoto (pictured) has been selected as a Claes Nobel Educator of Distinction by the National Society of High School Scholars (NSHSS). A role model to pupils, DeVoto was nominated by sophomore Taylor Jones for outstanding dedication and commitment to excellence in teaching. The Claes Nobel Educator of Distinction Award recognizes teachers who have made a lasting difference in their classrooms by encouraging students to strive for excellence. Ms. DeVoto has served the McAuley Community in the Social Science department for 25 years.

This award, bestowed by the Society upon the recommendation of a student member of the NSHSS, gives the students the opportunity to recognize and thank their academic mentors. "Dedicated educators who exhibit a commitment to excellence deserve our highest praise and appreciation," said NSHSS Chair Claes Nobel. The National Society of High School Scholars was established by Mr. Nobel, a senior member of the family which established the Nobel Prizes. Currently there are more than 300,000 Society members in over 50 countries. NSHSS also provides scholarship opportunities for deserving young people.

Veterans And Soldiers News

Army 2nd Lt. Todd F. Gross has graduated from the Army Basic Officer Leader Course III, designed to ensure a tough, standardized, small-unit leadership experience for officers. He is the son of Susan Schwarz of Evergreen Park. The lieutenant graduated in 2002 from Evergreen Park High School and received a bachelor's degree in 2006 from Northern Illinois University in DeKalb.

Evergreen Park Mayor James Sexton would like to invite any Evergreen Park servicemen and women, as well as their families, to be this year's Grand Marshal for the 2007 Independence Day Parade. The parade will take place on Tuesday, July 3rd at 6:30 p.m. If you are a local serviceman or woman or an immediate family member, R.S.V.P. to Mary at (708) 229-8219 by June 25th.

U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) announced recently that major components of his legislation on traumatic brain injury (TBI) were included in a fast-moving bill introduced by Senator Carl Levin (D-MI). The Dignified Treatment of Wounded Warriors Act, Injury Treatment Act (S.1349), requires the Departments of Defense and Veteran Affairs to implement a comprehensive program to diagnose, treat and rehabilitate service members and veterans who have suffered a service-related traumatic brain injury.

Traumatic brain injury is the signature of the Iraq war. The widespread use of improvised explosive devices (IEDs) has created thousands of TBI victims, sometimes with no other visible signs of injury. The concussions from IED explosion cause sudden, violent head movements, which often lead to TBI. With symptoms similar to that of shaken baby syndrome, TBIs are difficult to diagnose. Injured service members may suffer from headaches, confusion, dizziness and lightheadedness in mild cases; to mood changes, loss of memory, convulsions, weakness or numbness in the extremities, and a loss of coordination in severe cases.

"Too many of our brave servicemen and women are coming home from war with serious injuries that may be overlooked because they don't bear any visible wounds or scars," Durbin said. "We are still learning the best treatment options for those suffering from TBI. With the knowledge we gain from increased research we will be able to moderate the impact TBI has on the lives of our veterans and their families. Today we're taking an important step forward by introducing a comprehensive military and veterans health care bill that will aid thousands of America's service members and veterans dealing with TBI."

The Senate Armed Services Committee will include Senator Durbin's language in a version of the bill they will mark-up in committee. A mark-up is the process by which congressional committees and sub-committees debate, amend, and rewrite proposed legislation.

The American Legion Riders of Marrs-Meyer Post 991, 110th and Depot in Worth (one block east of Harlem Ave. off 111th St.), will hold their 3rd annual Poker Run on Sunday, June 24th. Registration will be at 9 a.m. with the first hike out at 10 a.m. and the last bike out at 11 a.m. They will be back at 3:30 p.m. for food and entertainment. There is a fee of $15 per rider and $10 per passenger. Non-run participants are invited to the post run party for food and entertainment for a $10 entry fee. There will be free food, free music and door prizes, plus a 50/50 raffle (last year's winner received $2,000). For advance tickets or 50/50 tickets call Karen S. at (708) 599-7915 or kmswx3@aol.com or Sharon O. at (708) 425-6275 or sobrien1140@yahoo.com.

The VFW and Ladies Auxiliary, Department of Illinois, will hold their annual State Convention June 21st through 24th in Peoria, Ill. State President Maureen Hayden is proud to announce through the generous donations for her special project "Operation Clothe A Vet" the Department Ladies Auxiliary was able to purchase 2,360 sweatshirts for our veterans in the 10 VA facilities. They also made a generous donation to the two remaining hospitals that preferred a monetary donation. Maureen said she enjoyed her visits to the hospitals and thanks our veterans for their service to our country.

The Department of Illinois Ladies Auxiliary also donated an Ice Cream Machine for the children at the VFW National Home in Eaton Rapids, Michigan. The Ice Cream Machine was presented at the home during Illinois Day in October. A new Popcorn Machine for the community center was also purchased along with two new queen-size beds for the children in Illinois Cottage 2.

This week's quote is from Mark Twain who said, "If you tell the truth, you don't have to remember anything."

Good-bye until next week. God bless you and your family and God bless America.

Man Kills Ex-Wife, Shoots 14-year Old

On June 12th, Gail Bullock allegedly shot his ex-wife, Jackie Williams-Bullock of Crestwood, and shot her son, Terrance Jones, 14, and then fled to Indiana.

Police reported that Jackie Williams-Bullock attended the eighth-grade graduation of her son Terrance Jones at 9:30 a.m. at the Rosenwald Elementary School in Chicago.

After the graduation, Williams-Bullock and her son went to their former home to see if there was any mail. Williams-Bullock was killed at the house and Jones was taken to the hospital after being shot in the face.

Chicago police who were called to the home in the 8200 block of South Francisco Avenue in Chicago's Ashburn community were under the impression that they were facing a hostage situation when they first arrived at the house, which was around the corner from the school that Terrance attended. After half an hour at the home, police discovered that Bullock fled the area in a sports car.

Bullock was later apprehended in Indiana. Police have no initial motive for the killing; however, it was stated that he might have been upset about not being invited to his stepson's graduation.

Bullock and Williams-Bullock moved out of the house last month when their divorce was finalized. When police arrived on the scene, they found both victims across the street from the house. They found no fewer than five bullets on the lawn and the front window was shattered. Williams-Bullock was found in the neighbor's yard across the street from the home. She was pronounced dead at Christ Medical Center in Oak Lawn a short time later.

Jones was also taken to Christ Medical Center where he was listed in stable condition.

It was reported that after police put out a bulletin to locate him, Gail Bullock was found traveling southbound on Interstate 65 when police stopped him and arrested him.

Depending on who you talk with, Gail Bullock was either an upstanding member of his community or an abuser. He was a member of the neighborhood block club and worked to make sure the area remained safe. However, Jones' friends said that his stepfather was "mean and mistreated Jones."

Bullock appeared in an extradition hearing in Indiana before he was sent back to Chicago.

Extreme Heat Threatens Lives Of All Pets

The Animal Welfare League urges pet owners to keep pets indoors as much as possible during extreme heat. The League also warns owners to leave their pets at home. Leaving pets in parked cars can be a deadly mistake. According to the Humane Society of the United States... the temperature inside a car can reach 160 degrees in less than 10 minutes... even when the windows are partially open. With only hot air to breathe, pets can suffer from heatstroke and brain damage. Pet owners should become familiar with the signs of heat stress including: panting, glazed eyes, rapid pulse rate, vomiting, or a deep red or purple tongue. If a dog becomes overheated, owners should apply ice packs or cold towels to the head, neck and chest. Do not give the animal unlimited water. Let him lick ice cubes or ice cream instead. Pet owners should consult a veterinarian immediately if their pet has suffered in any way from the heat. Call the Animal Welfare League for more tips on keeping pets cool in the summer. For more information, call Terri Sparks at (708) 636-8586, ext. 227.

$163 Million For Military Construction Projects
In Illinois Approved

U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) announced that the Senate Appropriations Committee, of which he is a member, has approved $162.221 million in federal funding for military construction projects in Illinois.

The Fiscal Year 2008 appropriations bill for military construction and veterans affairs includes funding for the following Illinois projects.

Child Development Center, Scott Air Force Base: $8.2 million to construct a new Child Development Center that will replace the existing facility that currently serves children aged six weeks through 12 years. The current facility provides only 35% of the total space and care requirements for children of working parents. In addition, the rapidly deteriorating facility requires constant maintenance for plumbing, heating and cooling systems, roof leaks, flooding and damage to flooring, and inadequate wiring. The new Child Development Center will provide over 200 children at Scott Air Force Base with a comfortable and clean educational environment.

Combined Fire/Police Facility, Rock Island Arsenal: $3.35 million to finish remodeling the existing Rock Island Arsenal Fire and Police Station and complete the remaining 4,000 square feet of the new addition. The original facility, constructed in 1874, did not allow the entire police force to be located in the same building; fire department equipment had to be housed in a location separate from department personnel. The improved facility will allow the police and fire departments to operate in a more efficient manner and better serve Rock Island Arsenal through safety and security. Senator Durbin secured $7.4 million for this project in FY06.

Scott Air Force Base: The bill also includes $16.7 million for a Security Forces Squadron Operations Facility at Scott Air Force Base. This facility will support the base's joint security forces to include air base defense, crime prevention, investigation, training, information and personnel security, resource protection, confinement operations, weapons vault and armory. The facility will create synergy between the active and guard security forces units as well as provide adequate storage and training areas necessary to keep these troops combat-ready.

Army National Guard Readiness Center, St. Clair County: $8.1 million to redesign the Readiness Center in St. Clair County. This Center is required to provide adequate administrative, supply, classroom, locker, latrine, and kitchen space in support of peacetime missions. The facility will help the unit meet readiness, recruiting and retention, and training objectives.

Great Lakes Naval Training Center, North Chicago: $26.871 million for infrastructure upgrades ($16.65 million) and a weapons training facility ($10.221 million) at the Great Lakes Naval Training Center.

Federal Healthcare Facility, North Chicago: $99 million to construct a TRICARE outpatient medical clinic addition and alter existing space within the North Chicago VA Medical Center to fully integrate Navy and VA Federal health care missions in North Chicago. The facility will provide sufficient ambulatory capability and support space to fully integrate the healthcare activities of the existing Naval Hospital within the current VA Medical Center. This will deliver cost effective healthcare to eligible DOD beneficiaries in the North Chicago area, including sailors at Great Lakes Naval Training Center.

Senator Durbin worked with Representative Jerry Costello (D-IL) on the St. Clair County and Scott Air Force Base projects.

Tour Wastewater Facilities

Commissioners Dehra Stone, Frank Avila and Patricia Horton of the Metropolitan Water Reclamation District of Greater Chicago recently toured all seven wastewater treatment facilities, including the Stickney and Calumet Plant. The MWRD serves an equivalent population of 10.35 million people (5.25 million individuals and a commercial and industrial equivalent of 4.5 million people).

The MWRD's Stickney Plant is one of the largest in the world with about 650 tons of sludge processed per day. Because the Stickney Plant is adjacent to a residential neighborhood being a good neighbor was a key consideration during the design work.

Conference To Address The Affordable Housing Needs Of Illinois Residents

Building on his commitment to help working families, seniors and the disabled have expanded access to decent, affordable housing, Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently announced the opening of the State's Summer Affordable Housing Conference in Springfield. The State's top affordable housing experts, developers, lenders and other housing practitioners gathered at the Abraham Lincoln Hotel and Conference Center to explore how to increase affordable housing options for Illinois residents and learn about the State's existing affordable housing resources.

"Owning a home is a big part of the American dream. But in some communities, that dream is unattainable because of high housing costs. This conference will help bring about new ideas and strategies to make sure we're helping working families have a real shot at finding safe, affordable housing where they can raise a family, build equity and become a part of their communities," said Gov. Blagojevich.

The event coincides with the 40th anniversary of the Illinois Housing Development Authority (IHDA), the self-supporting State agency responsible for increasing the supply of decent and safe homes for low-income residents.

"Under the leadership of Gov. Blagojevich, Illinois is nationally recognized for its successes in affordable housing. This year IHDA celebrates 40 years of financing the creation and preservation of affordable housing statewide. The challenge we all face going forward is to grow the quantity and range of affordable housing available to Illinois families. We will continue to foster the kind of innovative thinking needed to help Illinoisans afford decent and safe homes," said DeShana L. Forney, executive director of the Illinois Housing Development Authority.

"IHDA and its partners are working hard to meet the housing needs in my district and in rural communities around the state. We've shown that new housing is not only needed in rural areas, it can also be an agent of change. Often, young families choose to stay in rural areas given the opportunity to buy or rent near jobs," said Sen. Deanna Demuzio (D-Carlinville), keynote speaker at the conference.

"The cumulative impact of the affordable housing development sector on the economy is often understated. For example, in Illinois in FY 2006, organizations such as IHDA and its many partners helped generate over $69 million in federal, state and local taxes and fees - while creating over 4,000 full-time jobs. By utilizing the standards of the National Assn. of Home Builders, it has been estimated and reported that the total economic activity generated by the Authority's programs equal over $567 million in FY 2006. When a house or apartment complex is built or rehabilitated, materials are purchased, workers are employed, wages are spent and multiplied in the community," said Harry Pestine, Community Affairs Program Director and Economic Development Editor of Profitwise News and View for the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago. Pestine gave a presentation about community and economic development and the economic impact of affordable housing development at the conference.

On behalf of the governor, IHDA also recognized three Illinois banks for their shared commitment to affordable housing. Lender Achievement Awards were presented to Marine Bank in Springfield, the First National Bank of Carmi in southern Illinois, and the Farmers and Mechanics Bank in Galesburg. The three banks are among IHDA's partner lenders across the State who are instrumental in connecting low and moderate-income homebuyers to the Authority's below market interest rate loans such as the I-Loan Mortgage program and the recently launched G-I Loan for Heroes program benefiting veterans and active duty service personnel.

The conference included more than 10 concurrent sessions detailing the State's affordable housing programs and the different financing options for homeownership and multi-family development offered by IHDA. Attendees also discussed the existing and emerging challenges facing the industry such as preservation, increasing foreclosure rates in Illinois, the rising costs of construction and housing values, and helping persons with disabilities and other special needs find affordable housing in the community.

The Conference is the latest step taken by Gov. Blagojevich to improve the affordability of Illinois' housing.

Officials Host Metro Summit

State Rep. Al Riley (D-Olympia Fields) and other area elected officials will host a regional South Metro Transportation Summit on Saturday, June 16th, at 9 a.m. at the Colin Powell Middle School.

Many perceive that there has been a historical lack of mass transit investment in south suburban communities and uncertainty regarding transportation infrastructure projects. It is felt that these issues have a negative impact on overall south-suburban development. This summit is designed to give local elected officials, community and business leaders, transportation experts, community advocates and local residents an opportunity to learn about the current status of south suburban transit plans. It will also afford these groups an opportunity to voice their concerns to legislative leaders, mass transit officials and others involved in regional transportation planning.

Award Recipient

Terrence J. O'Brien, President of the Metropolitan Water Reclamation District of Greater Chicago, has announced the recent presentation of the Silver Performance Award by the National Association of Clean Water Agencies. O'Brien stated that this award is presented for outstanding compliance with National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System has been presented to Stephen Carmody, Assistant Engineer of Treatment Plant Operation III.

Seek Action On Transportation Issues

U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL) recently met with Transportation Secretary Mary E. Peters urging the Dept. of Transportation to move forward on several Illinois transportation issues including downstate Illinois air service, O'Hare modernization, and expanded Amtrak service in Illinois.

Great Lakes Airlines was awarded the Essential Air Service contracts in Marion/Herrin, Quincy and most recently Decatur. Durbin has asked repeatedly that the airline work to make sure the necessary planes, personnel and equipment are in place so that service between downstate communities and St. Louis Lambert International Airport can resume safely and quickly.

"I made sure the Secretary understood that downstate Illinois communities have experienced months of travel, tourism and economic disruptions as a result of the air service shutdown," said Durbin. "The area has been without service for far too long and there is growing frustration over Great Lakes Aviation's delay in restoring service. Secretary Peters assured me that she will continue to work with the FAA, the airlines and the affected communities to restore service as quickly and safely as possible."

On June 12th, Durbin sent a letter to the CEO of Great Lakes Airlines, Chuck Howell, and the Chairman of the Board of Directors, Doug Voss, asking that the airline work to begin providing scheduled passenger air service from Decatur, Marion/Herrin, Quincy and Springfield to St. Louis as soon as possible. Durbin sent a similar letter to Howell on April 11th. On March 19th, Durbin sent a letter to the President of American Eagle Airlines, Peter M. Bowler, urging that the airline work with Great Lakes to begin service immediately.

Officials Check In On Sex Offenders

Investigators from Attorney General Lisa Madigan's office, the Chicago Police Dept., the U.S. Marshals Service and the Illinois Dept. of Corrections (IDOC) have completed an intensive three-day operation to assess the compliance status of 70 convicted child pornographers currently registered as living in Chicago. Madigan's office and members of the Illinois Sex Offender Registry Team (I-SORT) routinely conduct compliance checks around the State to ensure that registered sex offenders are living where they say they are. Investigators from Madigan's office joined I-SORT partners in the operation conducted recently.

"It is critical that we know the whereabouts of sex offenders registered in Illinois," Madigan said. "My office & the I-SORT team are constantly working to verify registration information and make sure that we know where offenders are living."

During the three-day operation the team checked the registered addresses of 70 convicted child pornographers. As a result of the check, the team verified the registration addresses for 33 offenders, determined that six offenders were non-compliant, and left notices for 31 offenders, advising them to check in by calling the I-SORT hotline. Over the coming days, the team will follow up with seven offenders who were left notices but have not yet checked in.

The team will continue working on locating the six non-compliant offenders. Specifically, as a result of the compliance check, the Attorney General's office has added the six newly discovered non-compliant offenders to the Attorney General's Operation Location Unknown web site. The web site highlights 10 different non-compliant offenders each month and asks members of the public to visit the site and provide the whereabouts of anyone they may know.

The Operation Location Unknown link is available on the Attorney General's web site at www.illinoisattorneygeneral.gov. Members of the public with information concerning the whereabouts of these, or any other non-compliant sex offender, are urged to call I-SORT at 1(888) 414-7678; or by sending an e-mail to locationunknown@atg.state.il.us.

Madigan created I-SORT in December 2003 to increase compliance with the registration laws and improve the information available on the state's sex offender registry. Since then, I-SORT has undertaken comprehensive and ongoing efforts to improve the registration process and solve problems with the system. Since its inception, I-SORT members have conducted targeted raids and used tips from the I-SORT hotline to locate non-compliant offenders, worked to improve the accuracy of the information on the sex offender web site and launched a public awareness campaign to publicize the importance of the web site as a tool to protect families.

As of June 1st, Illinois State Police statistics show compliance with Illinois' sex offender registration requirements at more than 92%, up from the 86% compliance rate when I-SORT was first announced. Madigan notes that while I-SORT members are pleased with this increase in compliance, they have more work to do and are continuing their extensive and aggressive efforts to improve the accuracy and usefulness of the information on the registry. The Illinois Sex Offender Registry is located at www.isp.state.il.us.

Electrical Storms Can Be Deadly

"Lightning never strikes twice in the same place." "You have more of a chance of getting struck by lightning." These often-repeated sayings give the impression that lightning strikes are extremely rare - predictable and avoidable. This idea, however, is wrong.

Although seemingly less dangerous, lightning kills more people per year than either tornados or hurricanes and causes billions of dollars in damage. Given these statistics, it's extremely important to take lightning seriously and to stay educated on lightning safety.

"Plan outdoor activities around the weather and be prepared to seek shelter if the weather turns threatening," says Molly Hall, Safe Electricity Executive Director. "If thunderstorms and lightning are approaching, the safest location is indoors away from doors and windows. Avoid water, electric appliances and other objects that could conduct electricity, and use only cordless or cell phones to make emergency calls."

Phone use is the leading cause of indoor lightning injuries in the U.S. A direct strike is not necessary for lightning voltage to enter your home through phone lines, electrical wires, cables and plumbing.

Other recommendations to avoid lightning shock and damage indoors include: Turn off and unplug appliances well before a storm nears - never during. Stay away from electrical outlets, appliances, computers, power tools, and TV sets. Take off headsets and stop playing video games.

Avoid water and contact with piping, including sinks, baths and faucets. Don't wash dishes, shower or bathe during a thunderstorm. Also avoid washers and dryers since they not only connect with the plumbing and electrical systems, but also contain an electrical path from the outside through the dryer vent. Do not lie on the concrete floor of a garage as it likely contains a wire mesh. Basements typically are a safe place to go during thunderstorms, but avoid concrete walls that may contain metal rebar.

Lightning can strike up to ten miles from the area in which it is raining. This means that if you can hear thunder, you're within striking distance. A good idea is to use the "30-30 Rule". According to this rule, if you count less than 30 seconds between a lightning flash and the thunder following it, you should seek shelter from the storm. When the storm is over, wait thirty minutes after the last lightning strike you see before going back outside.

If caught outdoors during a thunderstorm and unable to take shelter in a building, take the following precautions. Try to take shelter in a vehicle with a solid metal roof. Close the windows and avoid contact with electrical conducting paths, such as the steering wheel, ignition, gear shift, or radio. Avoid water, high ground, or open spaces.

Do not seek shelter under tall, solitary trees; canopies; small picnic or rain shelters; or in any open-frame vehicles such as jeeps, convertibles, golf carts, tractors or mowers.

Do not stand near power, light or flag poles, machinery, fences, gates, metal bleachers, or even other people. If you are in a group, spread out so that you are at least twenty feet apart.

If you are outside and your skin tingles or you hear crackling sounds, this could signal that lightning is about to strike. Drop immediately into a crouching position and make yourself as small as possible with minimal contact with the ground.

If a person is struck by lightning, call 911 and care for the victim immediately. You are not in danger of being electrocuted by the victim.

More information on lightning safety can be found at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration website at www.lightningsafety.noaa.gov. Also visit www.SafeElectricity.org for more electrical information. Safe Electricity is a safety public awareness program created and supported by a coalition of several dozen organizations, including electric utilities, educators, and others committed to promoting electrical safety.

Getting Free Legal Help

Legal aid programs are available to help those who need legal help but cannot afford to pay for the services of an attorney.

People who are charged with a crime which might lead to imprisonment, and who cannot afford a lawyer, are guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution to receive free legal counsel. People in this situation should request the appointment of a lawyer when they first appear in court.

In non-criminal or "civil" cases, a person does not have the right to a free lawyer; however, there are many legal aid and pro bono programs which can provide them with legal help at no charge. Individuals or families with an annual income below the federal poverty guidelines are generally eligible to receive free legal assistance. In addition, people who are elderly, disabled, the victims of domestic violence, enlisted in the military or in other special circumstances, may be eligible for help, regardless of their income.

Legal aid offices employ staff lawyers to provide help to low-income clients. The lawyers are usually experienced in the types of problems that poor clients often encounter. In addition, there are community-based programs that provide legal assistance. Some of these operate with small budgets and do not have the resources to serve all eligible people. They may turn away some applicants.

Federally-funded organizations in Illinois which provide free legal services to the poor are the Land of Lincoln Legal Assistance Foundation, serving the southern half of Illinois; Prairie State Legal Services, serving the northern half of the state except Cook County which is served by the Legal Assistance Foundation of Metropolitan Chicago; and Cook County Legal Assistance Foundation.

Those unable to obtain assistance from a legal aid office can turn to the pro bono programs that are often sponsored by local bar associations, where lawyers in private practice volunteer to take on cases free of charge for those who cannot afford to pay. Most legal aid offices make referrals to pro bono lawyers.

If you do not qualify for free legal aid but need help finding a lawyer, the Illinois State Bar Assn. offers an on-line lawyer directory at www.IllinoisLawyerFinder.com. The person seeking legal help can receive an initial 30-minute consultation for a fee not to exceed $15. The service can be reached by calling (217) 525-5297 weekdays from 9 a.m.-2 p.m.

Traumatic Events Causing Headaches

It seems lately that the news is reporting more and more traumatic events. Whether it is the loss of a loved one, victim of a crime, job loss, serious accident, financial crisis or sexual or domestic abuse, these occurrences dominate the headlines nearly daily. Traumatic events can trigger headaches in those that have never suffered before or can exacerbate the condition in those who currently suffer. The National Headache Foundation addressed this issue in a recent online survey and the highlights of the results are as follows:

* Ninety-six percent of survey respondents stated that they have experienced one of the traumatic events stated above.

* Common traumatic events included:

Loss of a loved one 20%
Serious accident or illness 26%

Other 25% (included responses from people affected by Hurricane Katrina, September 11, 2001, mental/physical health issues, whose planned adoptions fell through, & those who moved away from home.)

* Twenty-six percent of survey respondents indicated that a serious accident/illness to themselves or a loved one was the most common traumatic event where they suffered headaches.

* Seventy-four percent of survey respondents stated that they developed headaches following the traumatic event, of which seventy-one percent noted that their headaches began less than three months later.

* Fifty-four percent of survey respondents reported that the traumatic event occurred between the ages of 22-40.

* Sixty-six percent of survey respondents said they suffered from headaches prior to the event. More than sixty-seven percent noted that their headache frequency has increased since the event occurred.

* Survey respondents reported that they have experienced other physical or emotional conditions resulting from the traumatic event including:

Anxiety - 64%
Depression - 64%
Loss of sleep - 60%
Exhaustion or mental fatigue - 57%
Anger - 46%

* Fifty-five percent of survey respondents reported that they are not currently talking with a psychologist or other related counselor. Forty-two percent also noted that they feel a sense of guilt that they could have done something to prevent the traumatic event.

In a study of 2,697 soldiers from Fort Lewis, conducted by Capt. Brett Theeler, M.D. and George Sarka, M.D., MPH, measuring the incidence of headache symptoms in soldiers during the last three months of their tour of duty in Iraq, it was found that:

* U.S. combat soldiers in Iraq are more than twice as likely to suffer migraine headaches as the general population.

* While about one in seven Americans suffers migraines or "probable migraines," more than one in three soldiers did so during the last three months of their one-year tour of combat duty, and just one in 20 had been diagnosed prior to deployment.

* Although 95-percent of soldiers are men, migraine in the general population is four times more common among women.

* The soldiers with "definite migraine" reported headaches an average of three days per month and had 470 sick call visits for them.

Oak Lawn Village Board To Consider

Police Manpower Increase

At the regular Tuesday night Oak Lawn Village Board Meeting, sixth district Trustee Tom Phelan brought up his concerns about an increase in the last three to four weeks of "serious robberies and muggings" that he has seen in his district. He described several incidents where an 86 year-old woman was mugged outside of Walgreen's and another of a purse snatching that had taken place in daylight. He was concerned for the safety of residents.

Phelan stated that many of the calls coming into the police department might be from cell phone users who report seeing what appears to be potential criminal acts. In turn, whether the caller knows what he or she is seeing is true, the police must investigate all calls that come into the dispatch. He stated that he was not sure if the increase in violent crime was just in the sixth district due to its proximity to expressways or if it was village wide. Phelan asked Police Chief Bill Villanova if there needs to be an increase in manpower in the department.

Villanova reported that there was an increase in violent crime not only in the village but in surrounding communities as well. He stated, though he was not absolutely sure of the figures, there may have been a 15 percent increase in these crimes which includes, robberies, muggings and bank robberies in Oak Lawn, Evergreen Park and in general on the Southside of Chicago.

Villanova called for a civilian police academy type program in which dedicated residents would be trained to watch for criminal activity. This type of program would lead to a neighborhood watch program as well. It was then suggested that increasing the manpower of the department be discussed in the next round of budget meetings. Mayor Dave Heilmann suggested that even though residents were not in favor of raising taxes, this might be one way to add the needed protection for the community.

Villanova stated that the department is looking into ways of combating this trend. He stated that the civilian police academy should be in place in the fall. It was also stated that the problem would be discussed in budget and departmental meetings.

The board addressed a Community Development Block Grant request from the PLOWS Council on Aging and the South Suburban PADS (Public Action to Deliver Shelter) program. The grant would allow both programs to receive money for seniors and the homeless. It was reported that there are three sites in the village that provide temporary shelter for homeless people. However, it was brought to the attention of the board that there is a problem with homeless people who hang around the Walgreen's store on 107th Street.

It was pointed out that the PADS program is not only for a night's sleep. Trustee Olejniczak reported that he had been to one of the village's PADS shelters. He said that he did not find "bad people" there; mostly they were people who were going through hard times. The program has strict rules that clients must abide by. The program provides a hot meal in the evening, a bed for the night, breakfast in the morning and a bag lunch. The program provides clothes for people who are going for interviews. Olejniczak said that there might be some people who take advantage of the program, but for the most part, the program provides a service for those who really need it. The board passed the grant fund request.

The board is considering televising village board meetings. Members were presented with a request to approve the concept so that officials could gather information on the particulars of how to go about this. Discussion was held with the consensus being that there were too many unanswered questions about the cost of the program. It was suggested that the board hold a meeting with Comcast to get these questions answered. Mayor Heilmann said that he would arrange for Comcast representatives to be present at the next scheduled board committee meeting to clear up any questions. That meeting will be July 10th, Comcast should be at the meeting at 7 p.m.

It was announced that there would be no village board meeting on July 24th or August 28th.

The board approved a request from the owners of Jalapeno's Restaurant, 9600 S. Pulaski, to hold a one year anniversary celebration from 4 to 10 p.m. on July 14th. The owners will erect a tent for food and drink and there will be live music. They are to purchase a special event license for this party.

Village Clerk Jane Quinlan reported that Village Hall would be closed on the 4th of July. The 4th of July parade will step off at 10 a.m. at 95th Street from 51st Avenue to 55th Court.

Business Woman Dies

Since 1967, The Beverly Records store on 117th and Western has been finding vintage records and albums for the store's patrons. Anything on vinyl was available in the store and if it wasn't, proprietress Christine Dreznes and her family would eventually find it.

Dreznes, 89, died Thurs--day, June 21st at Weiss Memorial Hospital from pneumonia and other medical conditions. She was a lifelong Chicago resident. Born on Nov. 19th, 1917, she grew up in the Marquette Park neighborhood, graduated from Maria High School and attended DePaul University. She and her husband, John, were married in 1945.

Dreznes and her husband purchased the store in 1967. At the time, it was a candy and card store that featured a small selection of 45-rpm records and albums. When a patron came into the store and asked for a recording that the shop did not carry, Dreznes later found it for the patron in her sister's collection and sold it to her.

After that first sale, the shop grew into a used-record business. The success of the business drew people from other states and even, in some instances, from other countries.

According to family members, they have nearly a million recordings in all the formats. Recordings range from the 1920's to the present, with recordings from the 1950's to the 1980's being the most popular.

A funeral mass was celebrated on Saturday, June 23rd and burial was private. Ms. Dreznes is survived by her husband, John, her three sons, her daughter, fifteen grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Fourth Of July Safety Tips

"Don't be blinded by the dangers of fireworks" is again the message of the Illinois Society for the Prevention of Blindness (ISPB) this Fourth of July holiday. Please leave display fireworks to the professionals. In the hands of amateurs, fireworks can turn a festivity into a tragedy.

According to recent ISPB surveys -- compiled from data received from the Illinois hospital emergency rooms, ophthalmologists and optometrists -- 14 percent of the eye-related and bodily injuries were children under the age of 11; 50 percent aged 11 through 20; 36 percent aged 21 through 50. The survey also showed that of those treated for fireworks injuries 71 percent were males and 29 percent were females. Bottle rockets and firecrackers led the list at 21 percent each, followed by sparklers, roman candles, fountains, lady fingers, jumping jack and professional displays.

It is important to note that except for novelty fireworks (i.e., sparklers, snakes, trick noisemakers) fireworks are illegal in Illinois without a permit. Illegal fireworks (i.e., cherry bombs and M80s) in the mainstream could present substantial risks of injury resulting in vision loss, blindness, amputations, burns and even death.

The ISPB continues to assist and support the Illinois public safety agencies, police and fire departments, schools, libraries and park districts in helping to educate more adults and children through videos, brochures, announcements and posters.

The Illinois Society for the Prevention of Blindness (ISPB) joins the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC), the National Council on Fireworks Safety (NCFS) and others on educating the public on fireworks safety. Because of the risks for eye-related and bodily injuries, here are some practical safety tips:

- Protect your eyes by wearing safety goggles;
- Keep younger children away from all fireworks; older children should have responsible adult supervision.
- Never make or use homemade fireworks;
- Never extend any part of the body over lit fireworks;
- Keep water nearby for emergencies;
- Never relight or handle a malfunctioning firework (wait 15 to 20 minutes, soak in water and discard properly in trash cans);
- Immerse sparklers (which burn at 1800°) in water

after use;

- As bystanders, stay about a quarter of a mile or more away from a professional display, and leave pets at home;
- Observe all state and local laws; and
- If eye injuries do occur, do not touch, rub or press on the injured eye. Seek immediate care from an eye-care professional or hospital emergency room.

James A. McKechnie, Jr., Executive Director of the Illinois Society for the Prevention of Blindness reminds us that fireworks in Illinois, with the exception of novelty fireworks (i.e., sparklers, snakes, trick noisemakers) are illegal. McKechnie recommends that "if you wish to include fireworks in your festivities, please leave display fireworks to the professionals, who are trained pyrotechnic operators. Attend local municipal professional displays or watch them on TV. Since injuries can occur to bystanders, keep a safe distance, wear safety glasses or safety goggles and obey the officials and local laws."

Through widespread media publicity and by educating children and adults of the dangers of fireworks, the ISPB, the CPSC and the NCFS hope that the number of eye-related and bodily injuries will be reduced, not only during this Fourth of July holiday but throughout the year.

Remember the ISPB message: Don't be blinded by the dangers of fireworks!"

The Illinois Society for the Prevention of Blindness (ISPB) was founded in 1916 to prevent needless blindness. Dedicated to the care, protection and preservation of sight, ISPB programs stress education, information, eye safety and research.

Sun Safety

Considerations For Campers

Sports and outdoor activities are daily events for children attending camp. If children are not properly protected, the time they spend outdoors lead to painful sunburns, premature of aging and skin cancer.

"Just one blistering sunburn in childhood can double the risk of getting melanoma later in life," said Perry Robins, MD, President of The Skin Cancer Foundation. "That risk can be avoided by following some simple sun safety guidelines."

To find out if a camp is sun safe, the Foundation recommends asking the following five questions: Are counselors trained in sun safety? UV protection should be a regular part of the training counselors receive. They should be well versed about the dangers of the sun and how to protect against them. When are outdoor activities scheduled? Ideally, most should be scheduled for early morning or late afternoon since UV is most intense from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Does the camp have adequate shade structures? While large shade trees provide some protection, a truly sun-safe camp should have structures such as pavilions where campers can seek shade during outdoor activities. Are campers directed to apply sunscreen before going outside? An SPF 15+ sunscreen (water-resistant formulas are especially good) needs to be used regularly. Campers and staff should be instructed to bring it from home, apply it 30 minutes before outdoor activities, and reapply every 2 hours and right after swimming or sweating. The camp should also have a supply. Are campers urged to wear protective clothing? Historically, campers wore only a T-shirt, shorts, and perhaps a baseball cap. We now know that's not enough. Children should wear sun-protective clothing including long pants (or at least shorts), long-sleeved shirts, UV-protective sunglasses and a wide-brimmed hat to protect their face, neck and ears.

With proper guidance, children can learn to protect themselves and enjoy summer fun without sacrificing the health of their skin. For additional information, visit www.skincancer.org or call 1-800-SKIN-490.

The first organization in the U.S. that committed itself to educating the public and medical professionals about sun safety, The Skin Cancer Foundation is still the only global organization solely devoted to the prevention, detection and treatment of skin cancer. The mission of the Foundation is to decrease the incidence of skin cancer through public and professional education and research.

Presents Jefferson Award To Richard Daley

U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) presented the Jefferson Award for Public Service to Chicago Mayor Richard Daley on Tuesday, June 19th. Mayor Daley was recognized for his achievements in education, public safety, neighborhood development, and the environment as Mayor of the City of Chicago.

"Mayor Daley understands that a great city is more than gleaming glass and steel, it is a community. A great city celebrates its history - but looks to its future," Durbin said. "That is what Chicago is doing, thanks in large part to the leadership of Richard Daley."

Mayor Daley received the U.S. Senator John Heinz Award for Greatest Public Service by an Elected or Appointed Official, one of four Jefferson Awards awarded that evening. The Heinz Family Foundation endowed the award and Senator Durbin presented it onstage with Tereza Heinz-Kerry. The other 2007 Jefferson Award winners are noted economist and author Dr. Jeffrey T. Sachs, Harlem Children's Zoo President Geoffrey Canada, and Strong Women Strong Girls founder Lindsay Hyde.

The Jefferson Awards were founded in 1972 by Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, Senator Robert Taft Jr., and Sam Beard to encourage community and public service. Jefferson Awards recognize leaders for extraordinary accomplishments and dedication in community service and volunteering. Former Jefferson Award winners include Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, former astronaut and Senator John Glenn, and Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice.

DOT Grant For O'Hare Airport

U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) has announced that the U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT) has awarded a $2,256,928 grant to the city of Chicago for O'Hare International Airport. The grant will be used for noise mitigation measures affecting a number of homes that surround the airport.

Minimum Wage Now $7.50

The minimum wage will increase by another 25 cents each July 1st for the next three years (in 2008, 2009, and 2010).

New employees (first 90 days of employment) and employees under age 18 may be paid up to 50 cents less per hour.

Tipped employees may be paid 60% of the hourly minimum wage ($4.50 through June 30, 2008).

Certain employees must be paid overtime, at time and one-half of the regular rate, after 40 hours of work in a workweek.

Any business with four or more employees must comply.

For more information, call the Illinois Department of Labor at (312) 793-2804.

Durbin Addresses Gas Price Crisis

Last week U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) continued his drive for better fuel economy in cars and trucks, calling on Congress to support Energy legislation now under consideration by the Senate that includes a bipartisan proposal to raise the average fuel economy for all vehicles. The "Ten-in-Ten Fuel Economy Act" raises the average fuel economy standards for all vehicles, including SUVs and sedans, from 25 to 35 miles per gallon by 2017. If this bill were to become law, Durbin said the U.S. would realize a huge fuel savings in just a few years.

"Two years ago, when the Senate last considered energy policy, I introduced legislation that called for higher fuel economy standards," said Durbin. "The Senate wasn't ready for that bill. Since then, gasoline prices have risen 45%. The Senate should be ready now. I know the American people are."

Durbin said that the average fuel economy of our nation's cars and trucks has steadily declined since 1985 when the last fuel efficiency requirements ended. In 1975, when American cars were averaging 14 miles a gallon, Congress passed the Corporate Average Fuel Economy (CAFE) law, which required manufacturers to double the fuel economy of their vehicles to nearly 28 miles a gallon in 10 years.

The Ten-in-Ten Fuel Economy Act would require the National Highway Transportation and Safety Administration to increase CAFE standards for all cars, trucks and SUVs by 10 miles per gallon over 10 years - or from 25 to 35 miles per gallon by Model Year 2020 - and an additional four percent increase per year until 2030.

By 2025, if fully enacted, the bill's fuel economy increases for cars and light-duty trucks would:

Save 2.1 million barrels of oil per day, nearly the amount of oil imported today from the Persian Gulf.

Achieve an 18 percent reduction of carbon dioxide emissions from anticipated levels, or the equivalent of taking 60 million cars off the road in one year.

Save consumers a net $70 billion in fuel costs, based on $3.12 gas price.

All Points Southwest

By THOMAS E. GAVIN

With the Fourth of July falling on Wednesday, this year's 231st year of Independence seems to find many celebrants planning a five day hiatus. Many employees and employers will be deciding how they will enjoy a long weekend of fireworks, entertainment, activities and local parades throughout our great Southwest area. This is particularly timely in the lives of Americans here at home to celebrate their freedoms, rights, and individual religious beliefs.

The Village of Midlothian kicks off its annual celebration with "Thunder Over Midlothian" on Friday, June 29th at Memorial Park, 145th and Kedzie Ave., from approximately 6 to 11 p.m. First up is the charity softball game pitting village employees against park district employees at Howie Minas Field. Games, music, food, beer garden and more will be available to all. Fireworks will commence at approximately 9:30 p.m.

This yearly celebration is made possible and financed by the efforts of community businesses, individuals, and fundraisers held by the Park District and the "Thunder Over Midlothian" committee.

The Village of Evergreen Park will host its annual parade and fireworks display on Tuesday, July 3rd. Parade chairman Dennis Duffy and general chairman Francis Gallagher predict that this year's variety of bands, specialty units and attractions will rival any production on the South Side! The traditional fire truck sirens signal the start of the parade at 6:30 p.m. with the parade route beginning on 95th Street, just east of Pulaski. The parade proceeds to Francisco, and then goes north to 91st Street. The fireworks show finishes off the evening at Duffy Park, located at 91st and Ridgeway Ave., at dusk.

The Village of Oak Lawn will hold its 2nd Annual Fourth of July Parade on Wednesday, July 4th at 10 a.m. The parade route begins on the north side of 95th St. and 51st Ave. It will travel westbound on 95th St. to 55th Court. (Drivers and residents note: 95th St. will be closed during the parade.) Residents and spectators are encouraged to view the parade from either side of the street. They should plan on arriving early for the best vantage points.

For more information, contact Chad Weiler at (708) 499-7821 or email cweiler@oaklawn-il.gov.

The Oak Lawn Chamber of Commerce will host its "Annual Golf Classic" on Wednesday, July 11th at the Oak Lawn Park District's "Stony Creek Golf Complex." Check in begins at 11 a.m., with lunch following at 11:30 a.m. A shotgun start will commence at 12:30 p.m. For those who prefer miniature golf, a contest will be held at 3:30 p.m. An open bar runs from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. and dinner will be served at 6 p.m.

A variety of packages are available including: golf and dinner - $100; golf only (18 holes) - $60; dinner only - $45; mini golf and dinner - $55; and miniature golf - $15. Some sponsorship opportunities are still available. Call (708) 424-8300 for details.

For those folks who may have been vacationing or out of the country, Cook County Board President Todd H. Stroger underwent surgery last Monday, June 18, to remove his prostate. According to his press secretary President Stroger learned of the stage one cancer after a routine screening nearly ten months ago. Stroger's spokespeople have told All Points that he is on medical leave, without going into detail about the surgery, because his family had asked that his medical condition not be disclosed on the day of the surgery out of respect for their medical privacy.

Subsequently, President Stroger is reported to have had his prostate removed as a result of stage one cancer, which has a very successful cure rate. His full recovery is expected to span approximately three weeks and his physicians have described his condition as non-life threatening.

According to the National Cancer Institute, prostate cancer is the most common cancer, excluding skin cancer, and the second leading cause of cancer-related death in men in the United States.

More information about prostate cancer is available on the National Cancer Institutes website at: www.cancer.gov/cancertopics/types/prostate.

Get To Your Fourth Of July Destination Safely

With millions of drivers hitting the road this Fourth of July holiday, playing it safe when behind the wheel takes on even greater importance. Unfortunately, the Independence Day holiday period is one of the deadliest times of the year for being on the road.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) reports that 280 people were killed in traffic accidents during the 2005 Independence Day holiday period. Furthermore, 245 of those fatalities involved a driver or motorcycle rider with a blood alcohol level of .08 or higher. For all of 2005, nearly 13,000 people lost their lives in highway crashes involving a drunk driver and riders.

"Drunk drivers share the road with you and your family," said Denis Bailey, Field Vice President for Allstate's Midwest Region. "You can help save lives by being a responsible party host, preventing friends and acquaintances from driving drunk, and reporting as well as avoiding suspicious drivers."

The national organization Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) lists the following warning signs for spotting a drunk driver on the road: Straddling lanes or driving on the center line; Drifting or moving in a straight line at a slight angle to the roadway; Driving with headlights off at night; Erratic braking or stopping without cause; Driving below the speed limit; Slow response to traffic signals (sudden stop, delayed start); Nearly striking an object, curb, etc.; Weaving or zigzagging across the road; Driving on the wrong side of the road or completely off the roadway; and Tailgating.

To protect families from drunk drivers over the July 4th holiday period, here are some life-saving tips from Allstate and the National Safety Council: Don't ever drink and drive. If you know you will be drinking alcohol, use a designated driver or public transportation. If you spot an impaired driver on the highway, maintain a safe following distance and don't attempt to pass.

Report a suspected drunk driver immediately to area law enforcement from your car phone or a pay phone. Give police as much information (i.e., license plate number, make, model and color of vehicle, direction vehicle is traveling, physical description of driver) as possible. Do not try and stop the vehicle.

Make sure children are properly fastened in seatbelts or child safety seats in the back seat every time they ride in a car. Six out of ten children killed in crashes are not restrained. Children age 12 and under should always ride in the back seat, especially in vehicles with air bags.

Allow enough travel time for frequent breaks on longer trips. Drowsiness can reduce reaction time almost as much as drinking.

Whether you plan to hit the open road or stay close to home, celebrate America's independence safely by knowing how to diffuse a potentially dangerous driving situation. Don't remember the Fourth of July for all the wrong reasons.

Energy Savings Act Moves Toward Passage

Congressman Dan Lipinski successfully included his BRIGHT Energy Savings Act legislation in H.R. 2701, the Transportation Energy Security and Climate Change Mitigation Act of 2007, a comprehensive energy and climate change bill, which passed the House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee. Lipinski's provision would direct the U.S. General Services Administration (GSA) to install high efficiency bulbs in federal buildings. It was earlier introduced as H.R. 1705, the Bulb Replacement in Government with High-efficiency Technology (BRIGHT) Energy Savings Act. Introduced with Representative Bob Inglis (R-SC), the bipartisan legislation garnered the support of over 80 cosponsors in the House of Representatives. Lipinski, a member of the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee, worked with his colleagues to pass the bill out of the Committee.

"I am pleased the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee has paved the way for the BRIGHT Energy Savings Act to be considered by the full House of Representatives," explained Lipinski. "I thank Congressman Jim Oberstar, Chairman of the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee, for acting on my legislation so quickly. Installing high efficiency bulbs in federal buildings will help cut down on energy use and greenhouse gas emissions by the federal government and save millions of taxpayer dollars at the same time. It's a win for the environment, a win for national security, and a win for American taxpayers."

The GSA is the federal agency which owns and administers office space for civilian federal agencies. The federal government owns approximately 1,800 facilities with about 174 million square feet of space. At least 3 million lights throughout the federal government could be upgraded to high efficiency bulbs, such as Energy Star-certified compact fluorescent light bulbs (CFL). CFLs use approximately 75 percent less energy than incandescent bulbs to provide the same amount of light, last approximately 8-10 times longer, and save up to $74 in energy costs over the bulb's lifetime. Even higher efficiency light bulbs are close to commercial application including improved halogen technologies as well as new light-emitting diode (LED) technologies.

This comes on the heels of Congressman Dan Lipinski's previous legislative effort to successfully pass similar language for Department of Defense facilities. Last month, Congressman Lipinski introduced an amendment to H.R. 1585, the Fiscal Year 2008 Defense Authorization bill, which would require the Department of Defense to utilize energy efficient lighting to the fullest extent deemed feasible. The amendment was unanimously adopted by the House of Representatives.

"The Department of Defense owns 240,000 buildings in the U.S. alone," said Lipinski. "With the inclusion of GSA buildings, we will have successfully covered the majority of federal buildings with high efficiency bulbs. The federal government is one of the largest consumers of energy in this country. In a time of growing environmental concerns and support for energy independence, my legislative initiatives will help the federal government do the right thing at the right time, so we can lead by example."

Muntu Dance Theatre Holds Their 35th Anniversary Concert And Gala

Muntu Dance Theatre of Chicago will hold their 35th Anniversary Concert & Gala on Saturday, July 14th at the Harris Theater for Music and Dance, 205 W. Randolph. Chicago Muntu Board Member, Michelle Obama, Vice President for Community and External Affairs for the University of Chicago Hospitals, has agreed to serve as honorary chairperson of the event.

"It is with great pleasure that I extend an invitation for everyone to join Muntu Dance Theatre in celebrating 35 years of artistic excellence and community service," said Ms. Obama. The 35th Anniversary Concert starts at 7:00 p.m. A Gala Reception will follow the performance at 8:30 p.m. The Gala will be held on the Harris Theater's Rooftop Terrace. The catered reception will feature food, wine and fireworks, overlooking Millennium Park, against the backdrop of Lake Michigan.

The celebratory concert will feature the world premiere of a new work entitled "Guide" by Brazilian Choreographer, Rosângela Silvestre, musical arrangement by the Muntu musicians and costume design by Silvestre, a native of Salvador, Bahia, Brazil. This new work represents the culmination of a cross-cultural collaboration between the Company and Brazilian artists, spanning two years and travel across two continents. "Guide" explores the parallels between the cultural expressions of African Americans and Brazilians from the perspective of their common ancestral root.

Artistic Director of Muntu Dance Theatre of Chicago, Amaniyea Payne, will also premiere her new work, "In Search of Africa" which will feature traditional music with costume design by Payne. This new work explores the power of dance and how it (dance) connects us to our higher selves. The power of dance, rhythm and song is what sustains us. This work is dedicated to the memory of those of our ancestors who lost their lives during the Middle Passage, as well as those who survived to continue to dance and to envision.

This production provides an opportunity for audiences and participants to experience directly the work of a renowned Brazilian artist who has never before been seen in Chicago," states Joan Gray, president of the Muntu Dance Theatre of Chicago.

With the support of the Illinois Arts Council's Governor's International Arts Exchange Program, artistic director, Amaniyea Payne and the artistic staff of the Muntu Dance Theatre of Chicago journeyed to Salvador, Brazil to study with Silvestre and master musicians in the Orixá rhythms.

Their purpose was to study the similarities of African influence on Brazilian and African American dances. In 2007 Silvestre traveled to Chicago to continue the cultural exchange and to present a new body of work with the Muntu Dance Theatre of Chicago.

Seek Proposals From States For Endangered Species Grant Funds

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is seeking proposals from states and U.S. territories interested in obtaining federal grant assistance to acquire land or conduct planning for endangered species conservation efforts. For fiscal year 2008, the President's budget request for the Cooperative Endangered Species Conservation Fund would provide approximately $80 million in grant funding for conservation planning activities and habitat acquisition for federally protected species. Proposals must be submitted to the appropriate Service regional office by Aug. 24.

"These grants support the states' efforts to build partnerships with local communities and concerned citizens to conserve imperiled species," said Service Director H. Dale Hall. "Providing grants is one of the most important means the Service has to help conserve wildlife across the country."

The Cooperative Endangered Species Conservation Fund is authorized under Section 6 of the Endangered Species Act and provides grants to states and territories to support participation in a wide array of voluntary conservation projects for species on the federal list of threatened and endangered species, as well as for species that are either candidates or have been proposed for listing.

The Service is seeking proposals under three Cooperative Endangered Species Conservation Fund categories:

Recovery Land Acquisition Grants - These grants provide funds to states and territories for acquisition of threatened and endangered species habitat in support of approved species recovery plans. Acquiring habitat in order to secure long term protection is often the critical element in a comprehensive recovery effort for a listed species.

Habitat Conservation Planning Assistance Grants - This category provides funds to states and territories to support the development of Habitat Conservation Plans (HCPs). The purpose of an HCP is to ensure adequate protection for threatened and endangered species, while at the same time providing for economic growth and development. These grants provide support for baseline surveys and inventories, document preparation, outreach, and similar planning activities.

HCP Land Acquisition Grants - These grants provide funds to states and territories to acquire land associated with approved HCPs. Grants do not fund the mitigation required of an HCP permittee, but rather, support acquisitions by the state or local governments that complement actions associated with the HCP.

By law, the state or territory must have a current cooperative agreement with the Secretary of Interior and contribute 25 percent of the estimated program costs of approved projects, or 10 percent when two or more states or territories undertake a joint project. The grants are expected to be awarded soon after federal appropriations are provided for fiscal year 2008.

For more information about these grants and grant application requirements contact: U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Division of Consultation, Habitat Conservation Planning, Recovery and State Grants, 4401 N. Fairfax Drive, Room 420, Arlington, VA 22203, 703-358-2106. Information also can be accessed at <http://www.fws.gov/endangered/grants/>. The Cooperative Endangered Species Conservation Fund is identified in the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance as number 15.615.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is the principal Federal agency responsible for conserving, protecting and enhancing fish, wildlife and plants and their habitats for the continuing benefit of the American people. The Service manages the 96-million-acre National Wildlife Refuge System, which encompasses 545 national wildlife refuges, thousands of small wetlands and other special management areas. It also operates 69 national fish hatcheries, 64 fishery resources offices and 81 ecological services field stations. The agency enforces federal wildlife laws, administers the Endangered Species Act, manages migratory bird populations, restores nationally significant fisheries, conserves and restores wildlife habitat such as wetlands, and helps foreign and Native American tribal governments with their conservation efforts. It also oversees the Federal Assistance program, which distributes hundreds of millions of dollars in excise taxes on fishing and hunting equipment to state fish and wildlife agencies.

Taking The Step To Hire A Divorce Lawyer

Getting a divorce is a tough, emotional decision for most couples. The process can be easier if each of the divorcing spouses has confidence in their attorney.

Most divorcing couples find a matrimonial attorney through a referral from family or friends, from a lawyer whom they already know, or from a lawyer referral service such as that offered by the Illinois State Bar Association. A divorce attorney cannot represent both parties simultaneously but only the party who first contacted him or her.

Before deciding on an attorney, each spouse should meet with one or more lawyers and ask them questions about their legal experience as well as questions related to the case. They should learn, for example, how long the attorney has been practicing law, if the attorney concentrates in matrimonial law, what the lawyer's procedures are when working on a case, who exactly at the firm will work on their case and an estimation of how long the case may take before a settlement is reached. The person should also ask what is expected of them in order to make the client-attorney relationship successful.

During the initial meeting, the person should also inquire about how the attorney charges for his or her services. With regard to fees, most lawyers do not charge a flat fee unless the divorce is very simple and both parties have agreed to everything from the onset. Instead, a lawyer usually will request a "retainer" (similar to a security deposit) and charge on an hourly basis for his or her time. The fee is usually based on the attorney's legal experience and the complexity of the case. Once a fee agreement has been reached, a lawyer typically prepares a written contract which the divorcing couple signs.

Once the terms of the divorce have been reached and the case has been settled, a judge makes the determination about which of the two parties pays the attorneys' fees or whether each party has an obligation to pay his or her own fees.

A word of caution: in an attempt to save money, some divorcing couples have turned to the Internet for online divorce forms. Fill-in-the-blank divorce court forms should not be considered as an alternative to the services of a qualified attorney. The web sites claim that the forms provide the necessary paperwork for people to represent themselves "pro se." However, the claims that they make have been found to be misleading, and they may not stand up in a court of law.

For further information about law-related issues, contact an Illinois State Bar Association-member lawyer in your area or visit www.isbalawyers.com.

INVASIVE FISH VIRUS FINALLY GETTING SOME ATTENTION: The rapidly increasing distribution of Viral Hemorrhagic Septicemia virus (VHS) has caused federal and state agencies to take steps to halt the spread of this virus. This latest menace thought to be brought into this country in bilges of foreign vessels, joins other invasives such as The Sea Lamprey; Zebra Mussel; Eurasian Water Milfoil; Round Goby; Asian Carp and other hitch-hikers yet to be discovered.

VHS virus was diagnosed for the first time ever in the Great Lakes as the cause of huge fish kills in Lake St. Clair, Erie, Ontario, Huron and the St. Lawrence River in 2005 and 2006. Thousands of muskies, walleye, yellow perch, salmon, white bass, smallmouth bass, bluegill, crappie and northern pike died or were diseased.

What's truly alarming is the discovery of VHS caused fish die-offs in inland waters of Wisconsin and Michigan. Signs of VHS virus in fish include hemorrhages, both external on the skin and internal in the muscle and tissues, pale or swollen internal organs; and "pop-eye" (swollen eyes).

Drastic measures are being taken by various states and provinces in a "futile" attempt to stop the spread of VHS. Interstate transfer of live-bait (minnows), shutting down fish ladders, a prohibition on the trap and transfer of live fish that are collected for management purposes unless tested negative for VHS, and anglers are asked to use standard disinfection procedures for boats, trailers and live-wells.

Speaking of removing invasive species from recreational boats and trailers, my hunting and fishing buddy Wayne Krueger, from Minocqua, Wisconsin, sent me some literature on a piece of equipment that has been used at the boat ramp on his lake.

Called 'Solutions,' an Eco-friendly pressure washing system designed specifically for the removal of invasive species from recreational boats and trailers. The system is solar-powered, requiring no outside power or fuels. Small and compact, it takes up about 3 sq. ft. of space, uses a 95 p.s.i. wand, accommodates even the smallest boat landings and does not hinder the removal of boats and trailers from the lake.

For information on this remote pressure washer system contact R.A.M. Solutions, LLC at www.ramsolutions.org or call (715) 487-4249.

■DEER HUNTERS DONATE 72,000 POUNDS OF VENISON: Deer hunters in Illinois donated more than 72,000 pounds of venison to the Illinois Sportsmen Against Hunger (ISAH) Program during the 2006-07 deer season, providing more than 280,000 meals to needy people in the state.

Since its inception in 1989, ISAH has received donations of more than 359,000 pounds of venison thanks to the generosity of deer hunters in the state. The program allows hunters to donate deer they harvest to provide venison for distribution to food banks, food pantries and charitable organizations during the autumn and early winter deer seasons each year.

The IDNR and the Illinois Conservation Foundation (ICF) allow hunters to donate deer through participating meat processors and encourage hunters and others to make a tax deductible $50 contribution through the ICF to help cover the cost of processing the deer meat.

A list of meat processors handling venison for the Illinois Sportsmen Against Hunger Program is available on the IDNR web site at <http://dnr.state.il.us/legislation/isah>. For further information, contact Tracy Shafer, Program Coordinator, at (217) 785-5091.

■EVIDENCE OF LAKE TROUT REPRODUCTION: The Mid-Lake Complex, a large area of deep reefs, was a major site where indigenous Lake Michigan lake trout spawned. As part of an effort to restore Lake Michigan's lake trout, which were extirpated in the 1950's, yearling lake trout have been released over the MLRC since the mid 1980's and fall gill net censuses began to show large numbers of lake trout in spawning condition beginning about 1999.

■ACTIVIST GETS JAIL TERM FOR HARASSING HUNTERS: A New Jersey woman and three other anti-hunting activists were sentenced for obstructing two bear hunters during the 2005 New Jersey bear hunting season. The woman was sentenced to 40 days in jail and ordered to pay a $300 fine. Her accomplices were ordered to pay similar fines for resisting arrest.

The activists were arrested after they repeatedly harassed two hunters who reported the harassment to a State Park officer who accompanied the hunters into the woods on the day of the arrest.

ThunderBolts Sweep Home Stand

Any questions fans may have had about their Windy City ThunderBolts' success this season were answered in the last week. The ThunderBolts started strong, winning all six games thanks to sweep over the Florence Freedom and Chillicothe Paints. On Sunday, it was strong pitching throughout that carried the Bolts, holding the Paints in check when it mattered and earning a 4-3 win.

As per usual, the ThunderBolts opened with a strong first inning. With John McCarthy on after a bunt single, Wes Long unleashed a double to right-center that plated McCarthy and gave the ThunderBolts a 1-0 lead. Later in the inning, Scott Billak's flyout would result in a misplay by the Paints outfield, allowing Rob Marconi to skate in and make it a 2-0 game.

It looked like the ThunderBolts would roll after the third inning. With two men on base, J.P. Lowen ripped a harsh single that plated both runners and made the game 4-0. Unfortunately for the Bolts, the lead would not even last an inning. Two runs in the top of the fourth would put the Paints back into the game, making the score 4-2.

Starter Eric Fussell would allow no more damage to his lead. He would throw six strong innings, allowing just two runs and striking out four to earn his third win of the season. In contrast, Paints starter Bryan Johnson would not make it out of the third inning, surrendering all four Bolts runs and taking a loss in his first decision of the season.

Relievers Mike Causey, Danny Borne, Jeff Mault and Anthony Rebyanski combined to finish off the win. The Paints would plate a single run in the eighth inning but would get no closer. Rebyanski picked up where he left off after Saturday night, recording two outs in the ninth to pick up his first save of the season.

Monday was a league-wide day off with no games scheduled. The ThunderBolts returned to action Tuesday with Shawn Phillips on the hills when the team visited the Traverse City Beach Bums.

Home Game For "Vintage" Baseball Team

The Lockport Sleepers Vintage Base Ball Club announced its first home game will be on Saturday, July 7, beginning at 2 p.m. The game will be held at the southern end of Dellwood Park (Dell Park Avenue and Lois Street) in Lockport. The Sleepers will be taking on the Elk Grove Village Bucks.

For those of you who have not heard of "vintage base ball," please allow me this opportunity to describe it to you. Lockport Sleepers Vintage Base Ball Club plays the national pastime as it was done before the American Civil War. What does that mean? The Sleepers wear late 1850s uniforms that includes trousers (knickerbockers weren't used until the late 1860s), but does not include gloves (mitts weren't introduced until the 1870s). Players, who are called "hands," use reproduction equipment - wooden bats and slightly different sized balls, which are also stitched differently. They play by 1858 national rules, which includes - batters ("strickers") can wait for a good pitch, which is done underhand; players are out if the ball is caught on the fly or after one-bounce in fair or foul territory; runners cannot lead off, slide, or steal base; there are no automatic home-runs because there is no outfield boundary; and short stops ("rovers") can play just about anywhere. Gentlemanly behavior is expected at all times. Umpires can immediately fine a player for unacceptable words or actions.

Vintage base ball is commonly organized by museums and historical societies, such as the Midway Village Marauders (Rockford, IL) or the Deep River Grinders (Hobart, IN). There are currently 17 teams in Illinois and many more in surrounding states. The Sleepers are an official educational, living history program of the Gaylord Building Historic Site, a property of the National Trust for Historic Preservation and managed by the Canal Corridor Association.

"When Thunder Roars, Go Indoors" Campaign

The Illinois Emergency Management Agency (IEMA) and the National Weather Service (NWS) together with the statewide athletic associations for middle schools and high schools are working to increase public awareness of lightning dangers at outdoor sporting events. This effort is part of Governor Rod R. Blagojevich's Keep Cool Illinois campaign, established to help keep Illinois families cool and safe this summer. The Illinois High School Association (IHSAA) and the Illinois Elementary School Association (IESA) are joining in the push to make their member schools aware of the safety rule, "When thunder roars, go indoors" as part of national Lightning Safety Awareness Week.

Lightning Safety Awareness Week is part of Governor Rod R. Blagojevich's Keep Cool Illinois campaign, a statewide effort to help Illinoisans stay cool, healthy and safe during the summer months. Keep Cool Illinois seeks to inform Illinois residents on how to prevent heat-related problems, reduce their utility bills and participate in summer activities safely.

The IHSAA's Board of Directors recently adopted a new severe weather policy, which will be effective at the start of the 2007-08 school year. The policy was developed as part of talks between IHSAA staff and the NWS and will provide schools and state series managers with easier-to-follow guidelines for making a determination to suspend play when conditions warrant. The new policy calls for play in state series competitions to be suspended whenever cloud-to-ground lightning strikes are observed or thunder is heard. Play can then be resumed 30 minutes after the last observation of either thunder or lightning.

To increase awareness of lightning safety, the IHSAA and IESA will be sending "When thunder roars, go indoors" posters provided by IEMA and NWS to all of their member schools. The IHSAA also will distribute additional severe weather information to their membership throughout the year in their sport-specific manuals.

The IHSAA has more than 750 public and private member high schools and regulates interscholastic competition in 13 sports for boys and 13 sports for girls, as well as seven non-athletic activities. Each year, more than 250,000 students participate in IHSAA sporting events, including outdoor sports such as baseball, softball, football, soccer, track, cross country, tennis and golf. The IESA has 720 member elementary-middle schools throughout Illinois participating in eight sports and four activities.

According to the NWS, an average of 61 people are killed by lightning each year in the United States. That is more than those killed by tornadoes and second only to deaths from flash flooding. In 2006, 47 people were killed by lightning nationwide, including one fatality in Illinois. It is estimated that more than 1,000 people are injured by lightning strikes in the nation each year. About 67 percent of lightning fatalities and injuries occur outdoors at recreational events, such as baseball and soccer games, on lakes or at golf courses, and under or near trees.

Again this summer, the Illinois Department of Natural Resources (IDNR) will have the informational card entitled "Do you hear thunder?" available at visitors' centers at all of the state parks. The card, which was first made available to state park visitors last year, emphasizes the safety rule that if you hear thunder, you are close enough to be struck by lightning even if it's not raining. It includes tips on how people enjoying outdoor activities on land or on water can stay safe when a thunderstorm approaches.

General outdoor lightning safety tips include: Get away from water - stop activities in or near water, such as swimming, boating, fishing and camping and seek a substantial shelter. A safe shelter is fully enclosed with a roof and four walls. Tents, picnic shelters or pavilions will not keep you safe. If no substantial shelter is available, seek refuge in a hard-topped vehicle with the windows up. Do not seek shelter under tall, isolated trees. This will increase your risk of being struck. If you're caught in the open, lightning often hits the tallest object, which could be you in an open field. If caught in the open, get low to the ground, on the balls of your feet in a crouching position. The goal is to get as low as possible, while minimizing your contact with the ground.

While you are much safer inside a building, the following tips can keep you even safer: Avoid contact with corded phones - phone use is the leading cause of indoor lightning injuries. Stay away from windows and exterior doors - windows and doors can provide a path for a direct strike to enter your home. Stay off of porches and decks - even if a porch is covered, it does not offer any protection from lightning strikes. Avoid contact with electrical equipment or cords - direct strikes and power surges due to lightning causes significant damage to personal property each year. If you plan to unplug any electrical equipment, do so well before the storm arrives. Stay away from plumbing and plumbing appliances - do not take a shower or bath during a thunderstorm. Avoid appliances such as dishwashers, washing machines and electric hot water heaters, since they utilize both water and electricity.

According to the NWS, only about 10 percent of people who are struck by lightning are killed, leaving 90 percent with various degrees of disability. Only a few lightning strike victims actually suffer burns, and these are usually minor. However, many lightning strike survivors are left with debilitating life-long effects, including memory loss, personality changes, fatigue, irreparable nerve damage, chronic pain and or headaches, difficulty sleeping and dizziness.

People shouldn't hesitate to help someone who has been struck by lightning since victims do not carry an electrical charge. The surge of electricity through a lightning victim's body causes cardiac arrest in most fatalities, so immediate medical attention is critical. If the victim doesn't have a pulse and isn't breathing, CPR should be administered immediately.

For a copy of the state park information card and a more comprehensive guide to lightning safety, visit IEMA's website at www.state.il.us or by calling (217) 785-9888. Additional information about the Keep Cool Illinois campaign is available at www.keepcool.illinois.gov.

In all, the dads arrested during this roundup owe more than a collective $1.5 million in back support of their children. Warrants were issued for their arrests after they repeatedly ignored court orders to make child support payments. Sylvester Bounds is the oldest dad arrested for non-payment at 62. He owes $42,000. The youngest, Christopher Nelson, is 19 and owes more than $2,600.

FAT-BLOCKER ALLI HITS THE MARKET

Consumers are now able to buy the first FDA-approved over the counter (OTC) version of a prescription diet drug--it's called "alli", and you will see it near the check out counter of almost every grocery and pharmacy across the country! If you are familiar with Xenical, the prescription drug marketed by GlaxoSmithKline since 1999, you know that alli is a similar fat blocker in a lower dose formula.

The main ingredient in both drugs is orlistat, a naturally-occurring fat blocker which binds to several digestive enzymes. This results in part of fat-containing foods passing through the intestinal tract without being absorbed.

About 25 percent of dietary fat is blocked when the prescription form of orlistat is taken with breakfast, lunch and dinner, resulting in a reduction in about 200 calories daily. The OTC drug, alli, will save you about 100 calories a day.

Taking orlistat-containing drugs is not without some possible problems. Fat-soluble vitamins such as A, D, E, and K may not be absorbed as readily when such medications are taken. Because of this, taking a multi-vitamin containing fat-soluble vitamins is advisable.

Some people should never take the fat-blocking drugs! Those who have had an organ transplant are restricted, since transplant drugs can cause special risks when combined with orlistat-based drugs. Persons who have diabetes, thyroid, and/or anti-clotting drugs are also at risk for problems.

Even healthy people who take either medication may have problems. If you have tried Xenical, you probably know that fat still must be limited in your diet. In the case of taking either drug, the more dietary fat you eat, the greater your chance of loose stools and diarrhea, bloating, gas and abdominal cramps. A restriction of fat intake in general will help to control these symptoms.

As always, discuss the use of alli with your physician before deciding to take it. You may be unaware of potential medical complications it can cause you.

Hospice Seeks A Few Good Volunteers

Hospice of Northeastern Illinois is partnering with The Twilight Brigade, Compassion in Action, to provide a three-day hospice volunteer training session Friday, July 20 through Sunday, July 22. Compassionate, flexible and non-judgmental men and women are invited to participate in the patient and family care training session at Hospice of Northeastern Illinois in Barrington.

Hospice is seeking volunteers that live throughout the areas served: Kane, NW Cook, McHenry, Lake, DuPage and Boone counties. Participants must complete a personal interview prior to the training and attend all sessions in order to become a volunteer. The sessions will cover a broad spectrum of topics related to death and dying, privacy issues and volunteer self-care.

Hospice volunteers provide emotional support and practical assistance to people who are terminally ill and their families. No medical or professional background is required, simply a desire to reach out to others in the community who are in need. An interview and registration are required prior to training.

In addition to patient and family care volunteers, Hospice offers a number of other volunteer opportunities such as providing clerical support in the office and assistance with fundraising and special events.

For more information or to receive an application call Hospice of Northeastern Illinois at (847) 381-5599, ext. 256, or e-mail jzuidema@hospiceanswers.org.

Expansion Of The Illinois Healthy Women Program

Continuing the celebration of Women's Health Week in Illinois, Governor Rod. R. Blagojevich announced an expansion of the Illinois Healthy Women program to cover 45,000 more women each year. The Illinois Healthy Women program, created by Gov. Blagojevich in 2004, promotes healthy births and economic independence by providing reproductive health and family planning services to low-income women, free of charge. Illinois Department of Healthcare and Family Services Director Barry Maram joined advocates, healthcare providers, and families at Planned Parenthood/Chicago Area to celebrate the expansion. To apply for the program, visit www.illinoishealthywomen.com or call toll-free at 1-800-226-0768.

"We know that family planning and reproductive health education services allow women to have greater control over their health and their lives," said Gov. Blagojevich. "Illinois Healthy Women helps empower wives, mothers, sisters and daughters across our state with the knowledge and services they need to plan their pregnancies and to ensure the healthy birth of their children."

Since its inception in 2004, the Illinois Healthy Women program has helped women stay healthy by providing family planning coverage, including annual physicals, pap tests, mammograms, screening and medicine for sexually transmitted infections, multi-vitamins (including folic acid), and contraceptives of choice. As of April 2007, 35,877 women have utilized services under the program. The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services reimburses the state for 90 percent of the cost of services.

The Governor also announced that the Illinois Healthy Women program will now be open to women who were not previously enrolled in one of the State's medical programs. Prior to this expansion, the program was only available to women leaving one of the Department of Healthcare and Family Services' Medical Programs. With this expansion, young women who have not yet started a family or women who have never accessed KidCare, FamilyCare or Medicaid, the state's comprehensive health care programs, will be eligible for these women's health care services.

"The typical American woman spend roughly five years pregnant or trying to get pregnant and three decades trying to avoid unintended pregnancy," said Tiffany Athey, Nurse Practitioner, Planned Parenthood/Chicago area (PP/CA). "This program will allow her to access the family planning services she needs to make this planning a reality. Women who in the past have been falling through the cracks of our health care system will now have access to the basic health care services they need and deserve."

The Illinois Healthy Women expansion will save the Illinois Medicaid program an estimated $59 million over the first five years of the program due to a decrease in the number of unplanned pregnancies paid for by the Medicaid program. Fifty-eight percent of Medicaid births are the result of an unplanned pregnancy and research consistently shows that planning birth greatly reduces the incidence of poor birth outcomes including prematurity, low birth weight, infant mortality and pregnancy related illness. Studies show that the use of family planning services reduces a low-income woman's probability of pregnancy by 79 percent. Often, a woman's attempts to enter the workforce can be derailed by unplanned and untimed pregnancies.

"The Illinois Healthy Women program helps women reduce unintended pregnancies and plan a healthy birth," said Barry Maram, Director of the Illinois Department of Healthcare and Family Services. "This expansion is another example of Governor Blagojevich's nationally recognized efforts to help every family in Illinois get the care they need."

The services offered through Illinois Healthy Women are voluntary and confidential. No premiums, deductibles or co-payments are required. For more information or to download an application, visit www.illinoishealthywomen.com or call 1-800-226-0768 (TTY: 1-877-204-1012).

New Survey Maps Emotional Toll Of Rosacea As Severity Increases

Rosacea inflicts significant damage to quality of life and emotional well-being in direct proportion to its physical effects, according to a new patient survey conducted by the National Rosacea Society (NRS) and published in Rosacea Review. Rosacea is a red-faced, acne-like facial disorder that affects an estimated 14 million Americans and is becoming increasingly widespread as the population baby boom generation enters the most susceptible ages.

"Fortunately, through greater public awareness, more people are seeking medical attention before their rosacea becomes increasingly severe," said Dr. Diane Berson, clinical associate professor of dermatology at New York University. "As a result, its impact on appearance is being halted and controlled before the emotional consequences become even more intrusive on their daily lives."

Many rosacea patients said they had learned to successfully cope with their condition and that openly discussing their disorder with others helps dispel any embarrassment or social unease.

Rosacea is a chronic disorder that primarily affects the cheeks, nose, chin or forehead, and is often characterized by flare-ups and remissions. It typically first appears at any time after age 30 as a flushing or redness that comes and goes.

Over time, the redness becomes ruddier and more persistent, and visible blood vessels may appear. Without treatment, bumps and pimples often develop, and in severe cases, the nose may become swollen and enlarged from excess tissue. In many patients, the eyes are also affected, feeling irritated and appearing watery or blood-shot.

Fortunately, the signs and symptoms of rosacea can be effectively controlled with medical treatment and lifestyle changes. Anyone who suspects they may have rosacea is urged to see a dermatologist for diagnosis and appropriate therapy.

For information and educational materials on rosacea, write the National Rosacea Society, 800 S. Northwest Highway, Suite 200, Barrington, IL 60010, or call its toll-free number at 1-888-NO-BLUSH. Information and materials are also available on the society's Web site at www.rosacea.org or via e-mail at rosaceas@aol.com.

Approval Of Higher Education Act Reauthorization

The Senate Committee on Health, Education, Labor and Pensions has approved legislation, written by U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL), that would help protect student borrowers and provide better security on college campuses. Key provisions from two of Durbin's bills – the Student Loan Sunshine Act and Campus Law Enforcement Emergency Act – were included in the Higher Education Act reauthorization bill that was approved by committee and will now go to the Senate floor for consideration.

"We need to shine a bright light on the incentive-based relationships that exist between some universities and lenders," said Durbin. "This legislation takes an important step in requiring stricter standards for lenders and universities. We must make sure college students don't fall victim to unprincipled lenders."

The portion of the bill based on Durbin's Student Loan Sunshine Act aims to protect students and parents from exploitation by private lenders and lenders who offer gifts to colleges as a way to secure loan business. The Higher Education Act reauthorization bill would:

Ban lenders from offering gifts worth more than a nominal amount to college financial aid office employees, including travel, lodging, entertainment, and in-kind services that lenders provide to college financial aid offices.

Require full disclosure of the reasons why an institution of higher education has selected a lender for its "preferred lender" list, including any special arrangements the lender has with the school.

Prohibit special arrangements that lenders and institutions of higher education have to offer loan products at the institution.

"After the terrible tragedy at Virginia Tech, it was clear that we need to address the vulnerability of students in college," said Durbin. "The language added to this bill will better protect college students and their families from threats to their security. I look forward to debating this bill on the Senate floor and will work toward its quick passage."

The portion of the bill based on Durbin's Campus Law Enforcement Emergency Response Act strengthens the safety and security of college and university campuses by requiring that each school develop and test emergency response procedures and testing of campus notification systems on at least an annual basis. Durbin's original legislation was co-sponsored by Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) and introduced in the wake of the Virginia Tech tragedy. The bill would:

Require colleges and universities to develop and test procedures for responding to large-scale emergencies and dangerous incidents on their campuses, including procedures for promptly notifying the campus community in case of such emergencies.

Permit the Secretary of Education and the Attorney General to combine their knowledge and resources in order to advise colleges and universities on model emergency response procedures and to disseminate best practices.

Authorize the Dept. of Education to create a competitive grant program for colleges and universities to develop and improve their emergency response procedures and programs.

Relief At The Pump Fuels Savings For July 4th Travel

Independence Day falls on a Wednesday this year, and while Americans will have to adjust their vacation plans, they will travel nonetheless. AAA Chicago estimates a record 41.1 million Americans will leave home this holiday (June 29 – July 8), a 0.8 percent increase from last year. About 34.7 million travelers, or 84 percent of all holiday travelers, expect to go by motor vehicle, a 0.7 percent increase from the 34.5 million who drove a year ago.

According to a AAA survey, Fourth of July travelers intend to spend the entire week on their holiday trip this year. In fact, the largest share of the Fourth of July travelers are planning to leave Friday, June 29 or before.

"Despite the mid-week holiday, Americans still plan to celebrate the holiday with friends or family," says Beth Mosher, spokeswoman for AAA Chicago. "The lower fuel prices may also be an added incentive for travelers considering a day trip on July 4th."

Prices may fluctuate during the extended travel period; currently in Illinois, the price of regular unleaded is $3.15 per gallon, up 19 cents from a year ago. In Indiana, a gallon of regular unleaded costs $2.93, which is a 14-cent increase from 2006. Nationally, regular unleaded gasoline is $2.98.

Another 4.7 million (11 percent of holiday travelers) plan to travel by airplane, up 3.5 percent from last Fourth of July. A projected 1.7 million (4 percent of all holiday travelers) vacationers will travel by train, bus, or other mode of transportation.

AAA's Leisure Travel Index shows some other vacation costs up from Fourth of July 2006, while others have dropped somewhat significantly. Hotel rates are up a bit, averaging 5 percent higher for the AAA-rated Three Diamond hotels than last year. Car rental rates will be similar to last year, which are up 3 percent. Airfares, however, are a welcome 12 percent lower than Fourth of July 2006.

"The decrease in airfare plays a role in the increase in flyers during this holiday period," Mosher says.

The greatest number of air travelers will originate in the West, with 1.8 million, followed by the Midwest and Southeast at 800,000 each; Northeast, 700,000; and Great Lakes, 500,000.

The Southeast is expected to produce the largest number of auto travelers with 8.9 million, followed by the West with 8.6 million; Midwest 6.6 million; Northeast 5.8 million; and Great Lakes, 500,000.

Research for holiday travel is based on a national telephone survey by the Travel Industry Association of America, which conducts special research for AAA.

AAA Chicago has represented roadway interests for motorists and pedestrians and serves as a leading advocate for various traffic safety and travel-related issues for more than a century.

For more information on any aspect of AAA Chicago's breadth of service including AAA's home, auto and life insurance products; travel-related services, AAA's Show Your Card & Save program; and/or any AAA membership service including emergency roadside assistance, please visit our Web site at www.AAA.com or call us toll-free at 1-866-YOUR-AAA (968-7222).

Faulty Emergency Alert System Message Sent

A faulty Emergency Alert System (EAS) message sent out Tuesday morning to broadcast stations around Illinois was part of a federal government test of a new satellite system being installed. There was no federal emergency at the time to trigger the message.

Andrew Velasquez III, director of the Illinois Emergency Management Agency (IEMA) said the new satellite warning system was installed Monday as part of a Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) program to install the system in all 50 states.

The federal government conducted a test of the new system Tuesday morning, but rather than being an internal test the message was sent out to broadcast stations.

"At this time, we don't know why the federal government used a 'hot' or active code rather than a test code when they sent out this test message," Velasquez said. Velasquez said a test message would not have triggered the system to send the message out over the broadcast airwaves. A total of four messages were reportedly sent out as part of the test.

The EAS system replaced the former Emergency Broadcast System. It can be activated by the federal government, by states or by the National Weather Service. In this instance it was activated by a federal test.

IEMA has received reports from across Illinois about the message, and has learned that the message also was broadcast in areas outside Illinois. IEMA did not receive notice from the federal government that a test of the EAS system was scheduled for Tuesday.

Marist Student and Teacher Win Special Award

With the close of the 2007 academic year, Hennessy (Mokena) capped off 32 years at Marist. He taught religion from 1975 to 1985 and has spent the last 22 years in the guidance department. He was nominated for the award which recognizes faculty members who go beyond their paid position to offer support, enthusiasm and motivation to their students and colleagues. Outside his role as counselor, Hennessy has moderated National Honor Society (1976-2004), co-moderated senior prom since 1993 and coached all levels of soccer for 30 years. He is also a vibrant part of the Kairos retreat program, and makes himself available at any given time to the students he counsels and their families.

On winning the award, Hennessy said, "It's nice to be recognized for the work that I do. It was also a little embarrassing. I am lucky to work with so many gifted colleagues who impact our students in so many wonderful ways." Along with the honor of winning, Hennessy also received a $2,500 stipend.

Anaya (West Lawn) has been an involved student at Marist. A member of the National Honor Society and Spanish National Honor Society, she has balanced academics with running track and being a Marist student ambassador and member of the school's Marist Youth organization. To win the award, which provides $5,000 annually for four years to help with college tuition and related expenses, Anaya had to display academic excellence, extracurricular involvement and a demonstrated financial need. Anaya said she and her family are very happy and appreciative. She plans on pursuing a biology degree at Loyola University as a part of their pre-med program. She hopes to be a pediatrician.

Celebrating over 40 years of excellence, Marist High School, 4200 W. 115th Street in Chicago, is a Catholic, college preparatory school educating young men and women in heart, mind, and body.

The Fight Against Drunk Driving Offenders

The Hon. Dorothy Brown, Clerk of the Circuit Court of Cook County, and members of the Tina Ball Memorial DUI Task Force announced the successful passing of House Bill 1900 that will allow families of DUI crash victims to have memorial roadside markers erected in the approximate site of where the fatality occurred.

House Bill 1900, legislation drafted and promoted by the Task Force, passed the Illinois House of Representatives by a vote of 112 to 0 and the Illinois Senate 54 to 0. The Bill will now be sent to Gov. Rod Blagojevich for his signature.

"I was honored to be involved with the drafting of the bill," said Clerk Brown. "Mrs. Ball lost her life needlessly due to the actions of a drunk driver. I want to make sure that the Clerk's Office stays at the forefront in creating legislation that may help decrease drunk driving accidents and fatalities."

Tina Ball was working in a construction zone on Interstate 57 on Sept. 15, 2003, when she was killed by Thomas Harris, a drunk driver. Clerk Brown learned of the commitment of the Ball family to strengthen laws against drunk drivers and promised to create a task force to help make "Tina's Law" a reality. Clerk Brown initiated the Tina Ball Memorial DUI Task Force in May 2004.

When this law was proposed, the Tina Ball Memorial DUI Task Force was comprised of representatives of the AAA-Chicago Motor Club; Ahern & Maloney; Alcoholics Anonymous; BASSET Program; Illinois Liquor Control Commission; Breath Alcohol Training; Brodsky & Odeh; Central States Institute of Addiction; Chicago Dept. of Transportation, Bureau of Traffic; Chicago Police Dept.; Circuit Court of Cook County; Cook County Chief Judge's Office; Cook County Sheriff's Office; Cook County State's Attorney's Office; Dept. of Transportation; EAP; Fifth District Police Chief's Assn.; Greater Cook County Council of Police Chiefs; Highway Safety Consultant; Illinois Criminal Justice Information Authority; Illinois Dept. of Transportation Division of Traffic Safety; Illinois Alcoholism & Drug Dependence Assn.; Illinois State Police; Illinois Dept. of Transportation; Illinois High School Assn.; Illinois Professional Firefighters Assn.; Illinois Secretary of State; Illinois State Police District Chicago; Law Offices of Cathy A. Pilkington; Lemont Police Dept.; Loretto Hospital; Mothers Against Drunk Drivers; Mothers Against Drunk Drivers McHenry County; Narcotics Anonymous, Inc.; National Highway Traffic Safety Administration; National Safety Council; Northern Council on Alcoholism and Substance Abuse; Northwest Suburban Police Assn.; Students Against Drunk Driving; The Alliance Against Intoxicated Motorists; and West Suburban Police Assn.

Although the task force formally ended in October 2006, the Clerk's Office and the Tina Ball Memorial DUI Task Force members continue to push the initiatives of the task force.

Upward Bound Grant

The U.S. Department of Education has awarded Moraine Valley Community College its first TRIO Upward Bound grant of $1.25 million. The grant, which is $250,000 each year for the next five years, will assist 50 low-income or first-generation college students who are currently attending Dwight D. Eisenhower High School in Blue Island with the transition to higher education.

Upward Bound provides opportunities for participants to prepare for, and ultimately succeed in, their higher education pursuits. The curriculum will consist of rigorous academic instruction in core subjects, but the project also will provide services such as advising, tutoring, career planning, college planning, computer literacy, and cultural enrichment. The project takes place during the academic year, including the Saturday Academic Academy, and over the summer. High school seniors will participate in a summer bridge program to prepare them for college enrollment.

"The Upward Bound project will assist eligible students in accomplishing their goals of completing secondary and postsecondary degrees, which will provide them continuing education and workforce opportunities long-term," said Yolanda Isaacs, dean of Student Services at Moraine Valley. "In comparison to the other 26 communities we serve, the education levels in the target communities have lower academic achievement with more than 75 percent of residents over the age of 25 not having bachelor's degrees. It is our goal to assist these students in their academic endeavors, and hopefully they will choose to enroll at Moraine Valley after graduating high school."

For more information about the Upward Bound grant, call Isaacs at (708) 974-5360.

Singing The Anthem

Michele McGulre (pictured), a 2007 graduate of Mother McAuley Liberal Arts High School, sang the National Anthem at the Federal Employee of the Year Awards Luncheon which was celebrating its 50th Anniversary. A hush fell over the Grand Ballroom at the Hyatt Regency Chicago when Michele started singing. Mary Ann Zulevic of the National Archives and Records Administration said, "She brought many people in the audience to tears with her pure, rich, vibrant voice. Not a sound was made after she sang to the room full of 1,200 Federal Employees and because we are Federal Employees the National Anthem and the posting of the colors is a really big deal to us."

At McAuley Michele frequently sang the National Anthem at athletic events to the delight of all the McAuley fans.

Air Force Airman Blair A. Mislich has graduated from basic military training at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, Texas. Mislich earned distinction as an honor graduate of the course. He is the son of Jeff Mislich of Midlothian and Paulca Jacobs of Des Plaines. The airman is a 2004 graduate of Bremen High School in Midlothian.

Tammy Duckworth, Director of the Illinois Department of Veterans Affairs, was the guest speaker at the Korean-American Veteran Association's 57th Anniversary of the Korean War ceremony at the Garden Buffet Restaurant in Chicago on Monday, June 25th. Over 100 Korean-American and American Veterans attended the ceremony that honored all those who fought in the Korean War.

On Monday evening Duckworth was honored with the "Lead On" Award at Access Living's 2007 Annual Gala for her undivided commitment and dedication to serving the community and Veterans with disabilities. Access Living is a cross-disability organization that fosters the dignity, pride, and self-esteem of people with disabilities and enhances the options available to them.

Here is a message sent to us by the Manhattanville College My Soldier Program.

This is the fifth straight year that Americans will celebrate the Independence Day Holiday, and their right to live in freedom, while U.S. troops engage in dangerous missions in Iraq and Afghanistan. Richard Berman, Manhattanville president and cofounder of the My Soldier Pen Pal Program suggests that civilians "can make a difference in the daily lives of veterans and soldiers by participating in the My Soldier Program. It offers a variety of ways to show our soldiers we are grateful for what they do to protect our freedom and liberties." The My Soldier office has even put together a list to help you get started.

Here are the top ten ways to show patriotic support:

1. Go to www.mysoldier.com to register for the "My Soldier" program and adopt a deployed soldier who could use a pen-pal friend.
2. Encourage children/students to spend their summer vacation creating this meaningful, even educational, pen pal relationship.
3. Join the My Soldier pen pal program as a family. Family writing projects can create a bond for a common cause, which deepens familial ties.
4. Wear a My Soldier bracelet to show your support (mailed to you free via a SASE).
5. Enjoy a parade and support the marchers!
6. Call the My Soldier Office (914) 323-5172 to find out how you can get free My Soldier bracelets in bulk to use as summer picnic or parade giveaways.
7. Submit the name of an active soldier who would like to be adopted through the website link.
8. Adopt a soldier and earn a community service award! Manhattanville My Soldier now offers the opportunity for high school students to be recognized for their service and commitment.
9. Visit the soldier homepage at www.mysoldier.com and click on the Hats Off to Veterans to learn about how you can say thanks and show support to a hospitalized veteran.
10. Donate an item for the "Red, White and Blue (RWB) Thank You." The My Soldier office is collecting items for care packages that will be sent or delivered to hospitalized Veterans. A patriotic red, white and blue theme is suggested. Items being collected (via mail or drop off at the My Soldier Office, Manhattanville College, 2900 Purchase St., Purchase, NY 10577) include: Tootsie Pops-Cherry (red wrapper) and Grape (blue wrapper); Twizzlers; Captain America, Superman and other Super Hero comic books; playing cards and Yahtzee (Dice Game); beach balls; Nerf footballs; homemade cards with handwritten notes; children's artwork.

The President's Commission on Care for America's Returning Wounded Warriors held a public meeting in Washington, D.C. on Monday, June 18th on the critical issue of family support and outreach services. The Commission heard first-hand accounts from wounded warriors and their families as well as issue experts and family support organizations.

The Commission is very interested in hearing from service members who have been injured in Iraq or Afghanistan, health care professionals, and others about their health care related experiences. The Commission will hold two more public meetings before it makes its recommendations in July.

For more information, and to share your story for the public record, visit www.pccww.gov or call toll-free at 1-877-588-2035.

Good-bye until next week. God bless you and your family and God bless America.

Launch New Meth Registry

Governor Rod R. Blagojevich announced on June 24th the launch of the Methamphetamine Manufacturing Registry, a new tool available on the Illinois State Police website, www.isp.state.il.us, that gives communities and law enforcement the opportunity to view the names of offenders who have been convicted of manufacturing meth. In June 2006, the governor signed Senate Bill 2915 requiring the Illinois State Police to create the registry, have a link on the agency's webpage, and make it available to the general public and law enforcement.

The Methamphetamine Manufacturing Registry contains the name, date of birth, offense, conviction date and county where the offense took place. The database will be updated daily and allows an individual the capability to search by name, county of conviction, or date of conviction.

Information posted on the registry is provided by the Office of the Circuit Clerk regarding individuals convicted in the previous month of participation in methamphetamine manufacturing. Additionally, the Illinois Department of Corrections will forward a list of all persons who are incarcerated or on mandatory supervised release for a conviction of meth manufacturing for inclusion on the site.

The Methamphetamine Manufacturing Registry can be accessed by logging onto the Illinois State Police home page at www.isp.state.il.us or by contacting the Methamphetamine Program Coordinator at (217) 558-0198.

Wycinanki Workshop

On Saturday, July 14th, the Polish Museum of America, 984 N. Milwaukee Ave., will host a Wycinanki Workshop. This is a class on the Polish Folk Art of Paper Cutting. The workshop will take place from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Learn and preserve the ancient Polish folk art of paper cutting. Wycinanki usually depicts symbols from nature. There are two types of Wycinanki. One comes from the Kurpie region, composed of a single sheet of paper into which intricate designs have been cut. It is then mounted on a background of a contrasting color. Other Wycinanki comes from the region of Lowicz, where designs have many layers of colored paper glued on top of one another.

Either design can be made at the workshop or guests can be totally creative in their approach.

The cost of the workshop is $7 for PMA Members; $12 for non-members; and $5 for children 12 years and under. The fee covers all materials and light refreshments.

Recognize Juneteenth Independence Day

U.S. Sens. Dick Durbin (D-IL) and Carl Levin (D-MI) on June 19th announced the passage of legislation recognizing the significance of June 19, 1865, commonly known as "Juneteenth Independence Day." The day commemorates the arrival of Union soldiers in Galveston, Texas with news that the Civil War had ended. African Americans who had been slaves in the Southwest celebrated June 19th as the anniversary of their emancipation. The legislation is co-sponsored by Sens. Harry Reid (D-NV), Barack Obama (D-IL) and Debbie Stabenow (D-MI) and Rep. Danny Davis (D-IL) in the House.

"Two years after President Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation and months after the end of the Civil War, Union soldiers finally delivered the news of freedom," said Durbin. "While news can travel quickly across the globe in today's world, it is important to continue the tradition of celebrating Juneteenth Independence Day. Cultures across the globe look to this historical event as a source of inspiration and an opportunity for celebration."

"Juneteenth Independence Day was the day our nation finally reclaimed its dignity," said Sen. Obama. "More than two years after President Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation ending slavery, June 19th represents the sacrifices of generations past who showed us that ordinary people can do extraordinary things. While this resolution celebrates an incredible triumph over injustice, it also reminds us how far we must continue to go to ensure equality and fairness for all Americans."

Announce Rehabilitation Grants To Help Low-Income Homeowners

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently announced $2.2 million in rehabilitation grants to help 386 low-income homeowners in Illinois, including seniors and disabled individuals, pay for home repairs, lower their utility bills and continue to afford their homes. The funds will be used to finance the statewide Energy Conservation and Home Repair Program and the Historic Chicago Bungalow Initiative.

"People shouldn't be forced to give up their homes because they can't afford to fix a leaking roof or pay to install lights of windows that will help them save on energy bills. These grants will help homeowners reduce their utility bills, afford costly, but necessary repairs, and keep their homes," said Gov. Blagojevich.

The State has committed nearly $2.2 million to the Energy Conservation and Home Repair Program - $1.2 million from the Illinois Dept. of Healthcare and Family Services (HFS) and $1 million from the State Affordable Housing Trust Fund allocated by the Illinois Housing Development Authority (IHDA). This funding will help 200 homeowners across the state in 2007 and 2008 to improve the conditions of their homes, as well as enhance the energy efficiency of the property.

Homeowners will receive up to $8,945 in energy conservation measures and home repairs, such as the replacement or repair of doors, windows, furnaces and roofs. To qualify, applicants must earn less than 50 percent of the area median income. For example, in Cook County, a family of four with a household income under $37,700 may qualify. Applicants should contact the toll-free Keep Cool Illinois hotline at (877) 411-9276 for a referral to their local community action agency.

"Weatherization of homes is yet another step that the governor is taking to keep Illinoisans in their own homes and out of the harmful elements," said Barry Maram, Director of Illinois Healthcare and Family Services. "These grants provide homeowners with valuable resources and tips to prepare their homes and families for the varying Illinois weather. Without these grants many more Illinoisans would be forced to give up their homes because the cost of improving them would prove too great."

The governor also announced that IHDA has allocated a $750,000 grant from the State Affordable Housing Trust Fund to the Historic Chicago Bungalow Assn. The grant will be used to help 186 low-income bungalow owners in Chicago rehabilitate their homes and meet city-building codes. Work including repairs to roofs, windows, gutters, electrical systems, furnaces and hot water heaters will help improve the energy efficiency of the homes.

Grant recipients will receive a maximum grant of $5,000 from the State that will be matched by other state and local resources. Applicants must be Chicago bungalow owners and have a household income of less than $37,700 for a family of four. Applicants should contact the Historic Chicago Bungalow Assn. at (312) 642-9900.

"For seven years, the Historic Chicago Bungalow Assn. has worked for the preservation and revitalization of Chicago bungalows, which constitute approximately one-third of the city's single family housing stock. The funds allocated by the governor provide a valuable resource to preserving the affordability of these homes for hundreds of families that otherwise wouldn't be able to afford the repairs. The grant also allows us to maintain one of the city's most distinctive housing types," said Annette Conti, executive director of the Historic Chicago Bungalow Assn.

IHDA finances several statewide programs that assist low-income homeowners and landlords to rehabilitate and preserve the affordability of their properties including the Single-Family Owner-Occupied Rehabilitation Program and the Small Rental Properties Program. Last year alone, IHDA provided more than $17.4 million to help more than 1,130 Illinois families and individuals preserve and remain in their homes.

The State's efforts to increase affordable housing options for its residents is guided by the governor's annual Comprehensive Housing Plans which provide a road map for how to leverage housing dollars. The 2007 Housing Plan: Affordable Housing Dimensions identified $763 million in spending earmarked for affordable housing at nine different state agencies that will help approximately 146,000 Illinois residents. This year's Plan also highlighted how the governor's vision as outlined in the first two Plans - Building for Success (2005) and On the Road to Success (2006) - is already reshaping affordable housing in Illinois.

The Comprehensive Housing Plans are developed by the Governor's Housing Task Force, and organized and led by IHDA. The 35 members of the Task Force are advocates, developers, lenders and state agency representatives, including eight Illinois State agency directors. The Housing Plans aim to improve the coordination of housing resources among State agencies, help more Illinois households afford their rent or mortgage, and promote economic growth in communities throughout the state.

Launches On-Line Alternative Fuel Resource

With high gas prices, it is not a surprise that using alternative fuels is in the immediate future. AAA is ready to keep you informed about innovative technologies that are about to flood the road. To help build awareness of all the new alternative fuels and vehicles available, AAA Chicago is launching the Greenlight Initiative. The new program will help motorists make sense of all the new options available and encourage the development of transportation choices.

The rise of gas prices over the last few years has sparked curiosity about different transportation options, according to AAA. While hybrid cars and other alternatively fueled vehicles may not be for everyone, the Auto Club believes it is time to start building awareness for what is clearly the next chapter in the history of the automobile.

More information about Greenlight and hybrids and alternative fuels - including a downloadable brochure - is available online at AAA.com/Greenlight.

Information available online includes:

- Alternative Fuels FAQs
- Flex Fuel/Bi-Fuel FAQs
- Hybrid Vehicle FAQs
- Hydrogen Cell FAQs
- Buying a 'Green' Car

According to AAA, this is a time of tremendous experimentation in the auto industry. Greenlight is not about recommending one option over the other. It is about getting people excited over reducing our reliance on gasoline-powered engines.

Internet Safety Education For Children

Attorney General Lisa Madigan joined with the Illinois State Alliance of YMCAs recently to announce a new partnership expanding the reach of Internet Safety education to include Y-Kids around the state. The newly created E.Y.E.S. Partnership - Educate Youth, Encourage Safety, is a series of Internet safety "train the trainer" sessions for YMCA employees working with children.

Madigan's office and the YMCAs hosted the first training in this series at Northeastern Illinois University. YMCAs participating in the program will utilize techniques offered in the training to teach children how to protect themselves while surfing the Internet. The program was showcased during a news conference at the Lakeview YMCA on Chicago's North Side.

"My goal is to ensure that every Illinois child can take advantage of the wealth of information the Internet provides, while at the same time, understanding how to steer clear of its dangers," said Madigan. "I am delighted that the Illinois State Alliance of YMCAs is partnering with us to provide this important information to our kids."

As part of the E.Y.E.S. partnership, officers from the Attorney General's High Tech Crimes Bureau will train YMCA staff throughout Illinois. In turn, trained YMCA employees will educate children participating in Y programs on how to recognize and avoid inappropriate communications from online predators.

Illinois YMCAs serve more than 375,500 children under the age of 18 through a variety of child care, camping, sporting, and social activities. YMCAs make computers available in a variety of youth programs and will combine E.Y.E.S. training techniques with computer access.

"As part of the largest non-profit community service organizations in America, YMCA has a unique opportunity to communicate with parents and children," said Steve Cole, Chief Executive Officer of the Illinois State Alliance of YMCAs. "We're committed to helping keep children safe and are working hard to provide education and information for parents and children throughout Illinois."

The importance of educating children so that they understand the potential dangers of the Internet, can spot troubling communications, and avoid behavior that increases risks is demonstrated by the results of a recent study conducted by University of New Hampshire researchers for the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children (NCMEC). Approximately 13 percent of teenagers reported that they received an unwanted sexual solicitation online. In addition, 34 percent of children, ages 10 to 17, post their real names, telephone numbers, home addresses or the names of their schools online, where anyone can access that personal information, creating a greater risk that they will be contacted by potential predators. The study is located at www.unh.edu/ccrc.

Along with these Internet safety initiatives, Attorney General Madigan works to protect children from online predators through the Illinois Internet Crimes Against Children (ICAC) task force, which her office oversees. Since January 2006, ICAC has investigated 462 cyber tips from the national Center for Missing and Exploited Children, arrested 74 Internet predators, and trained more than 30,000 parents, children and educators. Annual Day In The Park June 30th

The 19th annual Day in the Park, sponsored by the Village of Evergreen Park, is scheduled for this Saturday, June 30. Residents, business people, families, and friends of the community are invited to join in a full day of activities. They can enjoy their time inside the Hamilton B. Maher Community Center, outside the building, or in the park, at 97th and Homan Avenue.

The fitness or sports activities begin with registration at 7:30 a.m. Fest times run from 11:30 a.m. until 9 p.m. Indoor and outdoor activities are included, rain or shine.

Coordinated by the Evergreen Park recreation department, the morning starts with a 5K run, two-mile walk, and junior run. Registration and pick up of race packets begins at 7:30 a.m., with the run starting at 8:30 a.m. Advance registration is encouraged, and allows participants to take advantage of lower fees.

The indoor activities kickoff with the annual blood drive, sponsored by the Office of Citizen Services. Donors allow the community to be covered when residents are in need of blood. The mobile drivers services facility, courtesy of the Office of the Secretary of State, will be available from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. for vision screening, written examinations, duplicate licenses, corrected licenses, license renewals, identification cards, and vehicle renewal stickers. An art fair is featured in the auditorium from 12 noon until 3 p.m.

From 11:30 a.m. until 9 p.m., the parking lot of the Evergreen Park Community Center will display food vendors, such as restaurants and fast-food establishments who choose to highlight a particular delicacy. Non-profit organizations and service clubs can elect to raise funds, by also featuring a food or refreshment item.

Pop, snow cones, hot dogs, sausage, pizza, corn, and more are offered at nominal prices. Refreshments are available from a beer and wine garden. Guests can enjoy eating in the sun, or in the shade under tents.

Music and entertainment begin at 1 p.m., and continue through the close of the day at 9 p.m. Live performances are alternated with the services of a disc jockey. A new addition is Yard Fulla Cars, a group that will perform modern country with a rock edge, from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Arts and crafts booths are featured in front of the building. Attendees can view and buy jewelry, knick knacks, clothing, decorations, and other items from a variety of vendors, from 12 noon until dusk. Educational displays are also included from such groups as the Evergreen Park Historical Commission, where volunteers include (seated) chairman Jerry Bosch, trustee, and members (left to right, standing) Laura Shallow, Ann Dykstra, Evanne Kennedy, Virginia Wrobel, and Jason Tabour.

Face painting is an attraction from 1 p.m. until 5 p.m. Children's games are offered at 2 p.m.. A magic show by Mr. D. begins runs from 6 to 7 p.m. Caricatures conclude the park activities from 6 until 8 p.m.

The Evergreen Park Fire Department brings out their safety trailer and their fire equipment, and often cools off the children with their hose. The Evergreen Park Police Department shows their Dare vehicles. Further information can be obtained by calling the Evergreen Park Recreation Department, at (708) 229-3373.

Smoking In Movies Falls Short Of Addressing Problem

U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL), Edward Kennedy (D-MA) and Frank Lautenberg (D-NJ) recently sent a letter to the President and CEO of the Motion Picture Association of America (MPAA), Daniel Glickman, urging him to provide more information on the impact of smoking in movies on the health of children.

In the letter Durbin, Kennedy and Lautenberg noted that: "Studies involving thousands of American adolescents have found that exposure to on-screen smoking is a major contributor to smoking initiation by youth. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) repeatedly cites tobacco imagery in motion pictures as one reason why teen smoking rates have stopped their historic decline."

Recently the MPAA announced that their ratings rules for the Classification and Rating Administration would be updated and clarified to consider smoking as a factor in rating films. The Senators expressed their appreciation for the MPAA's willingness to take initiative on this issue. However, they also noted: "the MPAA's adoption of a highly subjective policy is not enough to curb the influence of smoking in the movies on the health of children."

American Legacy Foundation President and CEO Cheryl Heaton, Dr. PH, testified before the House Subcommittee on Telecommunications and the Internet about images kids see on screen. She called the MPAA's announcement "wholly inadequate" and a "hesitant half step." Heaton said the policy contains no objective standards or commitment to actually do anything.

Specifically, Durbin and the supporting Senators request that the MPAA:

Provide more specifics as to how they will implement the new ratings rule, including information on what, if any, impact it would have had on the ratings of films from 2004-2006;

Provide detailed information explaining the sampling method and criteria used by the MPAA to arrive at its conclusion that between July 2004 and July 2006 there was a decrease in on-screen smoking;

Establish meaningful objective standards that will produce measurable reductions in smoking in the movies.

Top Ten Tips For Getting The Most From A Tank Of Gas

Fuel prices are reaching their summertime highs in many parts of the country, so Boat Owners Association of The United States (BoatU.S.) has a few tips that could help stretch your fuel dollars.

Leave the extra 'junk' home: Don't load the boat up with weight you don't need. Do a little spring cleaning - unused equipment that has been collecting mildew in the bottom of lockers for years should be taken home.

Water weight: At 8.33 pounds per gallon, why keep the water in the tank topped off if you're only going out for the afternoon?

Tune her up: An engine tune-up is an excellent investment and should easily pay for itself over the summer.

Tune your prop: If your boat goes 30 mph with a like-new prop and only 27 mph with a prop that's dinged and out of pitch, that's a 10% loss in fuel economy, or, you're wasting one out of every ten gallons you put in your tank.

Paint the boat's bottom: When boating in salt or brackish waters a fouled bottom is like a dull knife. It takes a lot more fuel to push your boat through the water.

Keep the boat in trim: Using trim tabs or distributing weight evenly will help move your boat through the water with less effort - and less fuel.

Go with the flow: Consult tide tables and try to travel with the tide whenever possible.

Install a fuel flow meter: A fuel flow meter is like a heart monitor; when consumption starts to rise, it's an early warning that something is amiss. A fuel flow meter also allows you to select a comfortable cruising speed that optimizes the amount of fuel being consumed. If you don't want to spring for a fuel flow meter (about $300), you can calculate your fuel mileage by dividing distance traveled by gallons at fill-up. Using your logbook, you can then approximate fuel flow using average speeds and time underway.

For sailboats only: While their engines are miserly, a sailboat with a fouled bottom, prop, or poorly maintained engine can have marked effect on its fuel economy.

Get a discount: Many of the 870 BoatU.S. Cooperating Marinas around the country offer up to 10 cents off a gallon of gas. To get the discount all you have to do is to show your BoatU.S. membership card. If you aren't already a member, join online now for a special rate of $19.00 by going to <http://www.BoatUS.com/membership> or call 800-395-2628.

BoatU.S. - Boat Owners Association of The United States - is the nation's leading advocate for recreational boaters providing its 650,000 members with a wide array of consumer services including a group-rate marine insurance program that insures nearly a quarter million boats; the largest fleet of more than 500 towing assistance vessels; discounts on fuel, slips, and repairs at over 870 Cooperating Marinas; boat financing; and a subscription to BoatU.S. Magazine, the most widely read boating publication in the U.S. For membership information visit <http://www.BoatUS.com> or call 800-395-2628.

Letter To The Editor

Good Bye, Chris

I guess I feel like venting a little.

This past weekend I spent my time in Orlando, Florida, because my cousin's 29-year-old son, Chris, who was just recently admitted to the Colorado bar to practice law, killed himself with cocaine. Such a tragedy.

Chris's family, and girlfriend of the past year, just learned of Chris' cocaine affliction three weeks before his death. He suffered a grand Mal seizure that led to the discovery of his trouble and three weeks later (June 5, 2007) he succumbed to a prohibited and uncontrolled addictive substance.

The pain of this Father's Day weekend will ache forever and ever. The ache is the father's, the mother's, the sister's, the brother's, the girlfriend's, the cousin's, and all of us who care about one another. So many tears.

Already in a somber mood, I returned home Saturday night to celebrate Father's Day with my son (who at the age of 12 years has already been offered drugs) and family, only to read that people were marching in the streets on Chicago's Far South Side, because so many kids have been killed this past school year in gang-turf wars. ("Slain students symbolize aim to stop killings," Chicago Tribune, 6/18/07). The marchers called for "tighter gun-control measures and an end to gang violence." Bishop Paul Hall asked, "How much is dope worth to take a young life? How much is gangbanging worth to take a young life?"

"Enough," the actions of gangbanging dope dealers seem to say louder than words.

Bishop Hall said the aim of the march was to go through neighborhoods afflicted by gang violence and call on gang members to stop dealing drugs and put down their guns, the Chicago Tribune reported.

Oh yes, please put down your guns, forsake your livelihood, eat berries for breakfast, lunch and dinner, wrap your family in swaddling clothes, and live in a stable.

"Oh, yes, let's have some stricter gun control." But the sportsman jokes: gun control means hitting the target.

The gun-control plea enables us to ignore the fact that it is estimated that there are over 120 million guns in the United States and even banning them will not eliminate them or stop the killing. Guns are here to stay, along with spears, gun powder and nuclear weapons. So, we must realize that it is the drug dealer protecting his wares, his cash, his corner, and his business that we have to fear. Gun control may be a laudable objective, but it cannot be allowed to substitute for serious thought about our prohibition drug policies than precipitate the killing and put guns in the hands of drug dealers for the wrong reason.

Inanimate objects like guns and drugs, even though an easy target, are not the enemy. It is our policies concerning those inanimate objects that make those objects so lethal.

"Let's march against drugs, guns and gangs," some activists say.

How many marches, how many speeches, how many times have I tried to change the course of the mighty drug-war river by speaking and pleading with the marchers, organizers and leaders for an end to drug prohibition as the road to peace - always to no avail.

Why is not every finger pointed at the cursed drug-war mistake?

The consequences of our drug prohibition folly are so demonstrable, so obvious, so redundant. Why is the villain - drug prohibition - so invisible, so untargeted, so sacrosanct? The prohibition of drugs in our lives is, seemingly, as deadly and inextinguishable as the life of Halloween's Michael Myers.

But there is a ray of light at the end of the tunnel.

And that light is emanating from law enforcement officers who once waged the war on drugs with a vengeance but now fight even harder to end it. LEAP (Law Enforcement Against Prohibition, www.leap.cc) is an international organization consisting of reformed drug-warriors who universally lambaste the killer, drug-prohibition policy that has taken over America and the world. These are not bleeding hearts, left-wing extremists or ivory tower idealists. LEAP members have credentials, knowledge, experience and sincerity beyond reproach. Cannot the sober and thoughtful among us also see the moral imperative of displacing drug prohibition with drugs controlled and regulated through a system of legalization that decimates the gangbangers' drug business and prevents death, disease and destruction?

In editorial board and other appearances within the past two months, the former Seattle, Washington, chief of police Norman Stamper and I have urged the dire need for drug policy reform. Within that time period, my cousin's son has died from cocaine; my 25-year-old client with a clean record but charged with stealing fishing poles from a neighbor's garage has died from heroin; and Chicago Tribune reporters have written about methamphetamine and crime rampaging across the Midwest plains and beyond. ("New demands strain nation's sheriff," Chicago Tribune, 6/17/07).

Good bye, Chris. Good-bye.

And as one singer painfully and rhetorically beseeched us a few years ago: "When will we ever learn. When will we ever learn?"

Governor Rod R. Blagojevich on June 20th signed legislation sponsored by House Speaker Michael Madigan and Senate President Emil Jones that moves the Illinois primary election to the first Tuesday in February from the third Tuesday in March. In 2008, that means an Illinois primary on Feb. 5th, which will give Illinoisans a louder voice in the presidential election process. As many as 20 states may hold 2008 general primaries on Feb. 5th, including New York, California, Georgia, Missouri and New Jersey, creating what is referred to as "Super Tuesday."

"Illinois is the fifth largest state in the country. The people who live here deserve to play a bigger role in deciding who the presidential candidates will be," Gov. Blagojevich said.

House Bill 426, which overwhelmingly passed both chambers of the General Assembly, also impacts all other public offices up for primary election in even-numbered years, including those for Congress, the General Assembly, local government and the School Board.
